Among the donations of land by Congress, Minnesota received 9,-820,450 and Dakota 8,000,000 acres.

Genl. Jas. H. Baker, has entered the Congressional race in the Mankato District. He is an old party wheel horse and thoroughly understands the ropes.

Not a riffle on the political surface in this congressional district. It is conceded by the politicians on the republican side, that Maj. Strait will have a "walk over" for the nomination. Where are all the dark horses?

Congressional Committee.

The democratic congressional committee of the 3rd district is constituted as follows:

C. P. Adams, Dakota County, Chairman; W. T. Bonniwell, McLeod County; L. L. Baxter, Carver County; W. M. Campbell, Meeker County and Ed. O'Hara, Renville County.

This committee was appointed by the State Committee, which met at St. Paul last week for that purpose.

THE DOG LAW.

As we learn, considerable fault has been found with the late law requiring the licensing of dogs; this especially among the farmers. Owners and keepers of sheep, we believe, are well satisfied with the law, while others—and they are in a large majority in the country—do not seem to be pleased with the idea of having to get their dogs licensed. Senator Tiffany was present when the bill passed, and voted against the law. We copy the following from the senate journal:

A bill for licensing of dogs and the protection of sheep and other domestic animals.

Was read the first time and put upon its final passage.

The question being taken on the passage of the bill, there where yeas 25, and nays 12, as follows:

Those who voted in the affirmative were:

Messrs. Adams, Bonniwell, Burk, C. F., Burk D., Campbell, Castle, Clement, Crooks, Hinds, Howard, Johnson F. I., Johnson R. B., Johnson A. M., Langdon, McCrea, Mealey, Miller, Officer, Perkins, Pillsbury, Rice, Simmons, Wheat, White and Wilkings.

Those who voted in the negative were:

Messrs. Aaker, Chase, Gilfillin C. D., Lawrance, Macdonald, McCormick, Morrison, Powers, Schaller, Shaleen and Tiffany.

And so the bill passed, and its title was agreed to.

Norwood Items.

Mrs. Harry Hocum (nee Miss Ida Failing) paid Norwood a brief visit on her way to her parents home at Preston Wis. Friend Harry has the appointment of Assessor, at his home near Milbank.

Wheat is booming in price and coming in at a great rate. Come on, we can afford to pay as much as the best of them, in the meantime you have a superior class of goods to make a selection from with prices correspondingly low.

Our business men met yesterday to confer with Mr. C. Krouschnabel of Benton to ascertain if they could raise bonus enough to induce him to build a mill at Norwood, judging from the outlook now, our town will have a first class mill and a first class man to manage it before many months. All our citizens should take an interest in such a project as it would add at least 10 per cent to property here, we hope the thing will be a success both for the village and the men who invest their money.

Gust' Thode has been busily engaged of late in repairing the Tiger Lake school house, which now presents a very creditable appearance reflecting alike upon the skill of the artist and the enterprise of the school officers.

Our new mill is not in running order yet, but some of the wind work is being got away with—that is something.

A nice warm rain set in Monday night, which makes every thing look as if inspired with new life.—We may have some fine weather yet in spite of Vennors prophecies.

Yesterday (Monday) was a Holiday and our neighbors and neighbors wives were all here attending the Picnic and dance in the afternoon, and also the grand Ball at Klancke's Hall at night, it seemed to be a general good time.

Mr. Slocum has been offering unusual high prices for wheat the past two or three days. The farmers certainly have no cause to complain of the low price of wheat.

Dr. Cash says that while the convenience of the church had considerable to do with his changing his place of residence, it is his impression that it was by no means the only reason.—We hope the Dr. will make good use of his time and close proximity to the Sanctuary. Doctors are always considered public property, hence these remarks.

Hollywood Sprigs.

Thermometer, on 21st of May last, stood at 32 deg. above zero, 6 a. m. Towards noon, and at eve., it was 41 deg. above. On Sat., May 6th last, when we had such a fine day, where your Rep. hails from, it was very disagreeably being a time of cold rain, snow, and sleet. Big difference, oft, betwixt Pa. and Minn.

Mrs. Joseph Merkle was buried on Sunday afternoon 21st ult.

Many of our farmers have sown less wheat, and put in more corn and oats. 'Tis good so!

The Evangelical people had preaching, on whit-Monday, 10 a. m.

Reinhold Zeglin is building a new store—doing a fair business, generally.—Had the pleasure of a visit from Edw. Messer, Esq.—Call oftener, Ed.

The P. O. at Helvetia is a credit to the place, and under efficient management.

Christian Haueter and Rev. W. Fritz will leave for a short trip to Fargo and Bismarck this week, being absent some ten days.

German papers, edited in Minneapolis and St. Paul, circulate pretty freely here, especially "Die Volkszeitung."

The wheat has come forth very nicely, especially towards Watertown, where the ground is more hilly.—Many of our people cultivate house-plants and flowers, an evidence of a refined taste,—highly worthy of praise.

The yearly camp meeting of our Evangelical Brethren will, this year, be held near Jacob Volkenant, and presiding elder, Rev. Chr. Brill, an eloquent and able Divine of St. Paul, will preside.—Other Ministers will aid in the services.

Jacob Schoch's smoke-house burned down, and considerable meat was damaged.

Father John Simon lately returned to his home, here, after a protracted stay in New Ulm, as, also, Waseca, at which places, in our state, he has sons who are Evangelical ministers. However, since the recent Minnesota Conference, both have been assigned other fields of labor.

The canine tribe is very numerous, and at the rate of a dollar per head, would yield a considerable revenue.—Our young ladies should cultivate the art of croquet-playing.

Camp. Meeting opens Wed. June 14th.

A son of Jacob Wechsler, of Montrose, Wright Co., is attending the summer Dist. school, here.

Notice of Mortgage Sale.

Default has been made in the conditions of a certain mortgage executed and delivered by E. H. Henschen and Henrietta Henschen, his wife, mortgagors, to Ozro J. Hale, mortgagee, dated the 28th day of May A. D. eighteen hundred and seventy nine, and recorded as a mortgage in the office of the register of deeds in the county of Carver in the State of Minnesota on the 5th day of June A. D. 1879, at 10 o'clock a m. in book "I" of mortgages, on pages 238, 239 and 240, given to secure the payment of seven hundred ($700) dollars, five [5] years from its date with interest thereon at the rate of 10 per cent per annum, payable annually on the first day of July in each year. Said mortgage stipulates that in case of nonpayment of principal, interest or taxes or any part thereof when due, the whole principal sum, with interest, should, at the option of said mortgagee his heirs, executors, administrators or assigns then become due and payable in the same manner as if then made payable by the express terms of said mortgage. Default has been made by the non-payment of the interest which became due July 1st, 1881, amounting to $70.00. It is the option of said mortgagee that the whole debt be due and payable. There is now due, therefore, upon said mortgage eight hundred thirty 20-100 ($830.20) dollars, and the further sum of $26.80, paid by the said mortgagee as taxes upon the said mortgaged premises, for which he holds the receipts of the treasurer of said county. No action or proceeding has been instituted to recover said debt, or any part thereof.

Notice is hereby given that by virtue of a power of sale in said mortgage, and of the statute in such case made and provided, the said mortgage will be foreclosed by a sale of the mortgaged premises therein described, which sale will be made at the front door of the court house in the village of Chaska, in the county of Carver and State of Minnesota, at public auction by the sheriff of said county on Saturday, the 17 day of June A. D. eighteen hundred and eighty two at ten o'clock in the forenoon to satisfy the amount which shall then be due on said mortgage, with the interest thereon and costs and expenses of sale, and fifty dollars attorney's fee as stipulated in said mortgage in case of foreclosure.

The premises described in said mortgage, and so to be sold, are the lot, piece or parcel of land situated in the county of Carver and State of Minnesota, and known and described as follows, to-wit:

The east half [E ½] of the southwest quarter (S W ¼) of Section thirty five (35) Township one hundred and fifteen (115 north, of Range twenty-five (25) west, containing eighty acres more or less, according to the Government survey thereof.

OZRO J. HALE, Mortgagee.

E. J. HODGSON, Attorney of Mortgagee.

Dated April 27, 1882.

SHERIFF'S SALE.

By virtue of an execution issued out of and under the seal of the district court in and for the county of Carver and State of Minnesota upon a judgment rendered upon the first day of February A. D. 1879, in a justices court of the State of Minnesota, in the eighth judicial district in the county of Carver, between James Slocum Jr., plaintiff, and John S. Miller, defendant, in favor of said plaintiff and against said defendant for the sum of twenty eight dollars and forty cents ($28.40) as appears by the transcript of said justices judgment, filed in the office of the clerk of the said district court for the said county of Carver.

And whereas a transcript of said judgment was docketed in your county on the 26th day of June A. D. 1881, and the sum of twenty-eight dollars and forty cents ($28.40) aforesaid and interest since rendition is now actually due thereon, with additional costs of one dollar and twenty cents for docketing the same and the said execution, I have this 1st day of May A. D. 1882, levied on all the right, title and interest, which the said defendant John S. Miller, had in and to the following described real estate on the 20th day of June A. D. 1881, or has since acquired therein, to-wit:

The east half of the west half of northwest quarter of section twenty-four (24) township one hundred and fifteen, (115) range twenty-six (26) containing 40 acres more or less, the same being situated in the county of Carver and state of Minnesota.

Notice is hereby given that I will sell the above described real estate and property to the highest bidder for cash at public auction at the front door of the court house in the village of Chaska, in the county of Carver and State of Minnesota, on Friday, the 16th day of June A. D. 1882, at 10 o'clock a. m. of that day, to satisfy the said execution, together with the interest and costs thereon.

Dated May 1st, 1882.

W. C. ODELL, Plaintiff's Attorney.

WACONIA DEPARTMENT.

Wm. Whitehill Reporter.

Miss Mollie Schutz got up a May day party on the 21st to which a large number of her young friends were invited. The original programme included a pic-nic, in the woods, but the day proving raw and uninviting, Mollie with her proverbial good sense, escorted her guests to the Lake House parlors, where they enjoyed themselves during the remainder of the day.

Mr. Nic. Bohnen formerly school teacher at West Newton, Nicollet Co., with whom we became acquainted four years ago, paid a visit to his cousin Nic Brill lately. Mr. Bohnen is an accomplished musician, and when the two Nics got together,—well you all know what followed. Mr. Bohnen goes to St. Cloud, for what purpose we are not informed. We hope to see him again soon.

Mr. Peter Pottgeiser, formerly well known as business manager of "Der Wanderer" St. Paul and now engaged as traveling agent for the firm of Breuer and Rhodes, iron merchants, was in our midst last Monday. He says he was surprised and delighted to see the evidence of growing greatness and prosperity, &c. &c. &c., Of course they all say so, but Mr. P. is always welcome, all the same.

The fair on the 23rd was quite successful. The quality of stock on hand was poor, as was to be expected at this time of the year. For some months to come, the great demand will be for beef cattle, as the season is too far advanced to sell milch cows, profitably, unless they are first class. As it was prices ruled high and the stock offered not desirable. The next fair will be on the 30th day of June, when we hope to see a better class of stock brought in.

Mr. John Radde has begun to build an addition to his house to be 30 x 20. Next.

Mr. August Treichel hae began on his new residence between the warehouse and Mr. John Radde's residence.

We noticed the following named DENIZENS of Chaska on our streets on fair day. George Bierline Sr., Jacob Bierline Jr., (supposed to be a son of Bierline senior), Philip Henk, Joe Franken. If Chaska never sends us any worse, we will have reason to congratulate ourselves. Come again.

Mr. Fred Dell paid us one of his periodical visits on fair day. Fred is bound to have that sail.

Mr. Chas. Stanley, late with Pilkington & Co. of St. Paul, has been superceded by Nicholas Flynn.—We recognize in Mr. Flynn an old comrade of the G. A. R. and as such he is entitled to confidence.

The performance passed off with eclat, except that Emil in one of the opening scene, in endeavoring to close a door by a backward, back action, stuck his elbow through a pane of glass, and in trying to remedy the defect, by a forward action stuck his head through another.—However as we saw Emil taking the dimensions, next morning, we conclude that all is serene.

Among the donations of land by Congress, Minnesota received 9,820,450 and Dakota 8,000,000 acres.

Genl. Jas. H. Baker, has entered the Congressional race in the Mankato District. He is an old party wheel horse and thoroughly understands the ropes.

Not a riffle on the political surface in this congressional district. It is conceded by the politicians on the republican side, that Maj. Strait will have a "walk over" for the nomination. Where are all the dark horses?

Congressional Committee.

The democratic congressional committee of the 3rd district is constituted as follows:

C. P. Adams, Dakota County, Chairman; W. T. Bonniwell, McLeod County; L. L. Baxter, Carver County; W. M. Campbell, Meeker County and Ed. O'Hara, Renville County.

This committee was appointed by the State Committee, which met at St. Paul last week for that purpose.

THE DOG LAW.

As we learn, considerable fault has been found with the late law requiring the licensing of dogs; this especially among the farmers. Owners and keepers of sheep, we believe, are well satisfied with the law, while others—and they are in a large majority in the country—do not seem to be pleased with the idea of having to get their dogs licensed. Senator Tiffany was present when the bill passed, and voted against the law. We copy the following from the senate journal:

A bill for licensing of dogs and the protection of sheep and other domestic animals.

Was read the first time and put upon its final passage.

The question being taken on the passage of the bill, there where yeas 25, and nays 12, as follows:

Those who voted in the affirmative were:

Messrs. Adams, Bonniwell, Burk, C. F., Burk D., Campbell, Castle, Clement, Crooks, Hinds, Howard, Johnson F. I., Johnson R. B., Johnson A. M., Langdon. McCrea, Mealey, Miller, Officer, Perkins, Pillsbury, Rice, Simmons, Wheat, White and Wilkings.

Those who voted in the negative were:

Messrs. Aaker, Chase, Gilfillin C. D., Lawrance, Macdonald, McCormick, Morrison, Powers, Schaller, Shaleen and Tiffany.

And so the bill passed, and its title was agreed to.

Norwood Items.

Mrs. Harry Hocum (nee Miss Ida Failing) paid Norwood a brief visit on her way to her parents home at Preston Wis. Friend Harry has the appointment of Assessor, at his home near Milbank.

Wheat is booming in price and coming in at a great rate. Come on, we can afford to pay as much as the best of them, in the meantime you have a superior class of goods to make a selection from with prices correspondingly low.

Our business men met yesterday to confer with Mr. C. Kronschnabel of Benton to ascertain if they could raise bonus enough to induce him to build a mill at Norwood, judging from the outlook now, our town will have a first class mill and a first class man to manage it before many months. All our citizens should take an interest in such a project as it would add at least 10 per cent to property here, we hope the thing will be a success both for the village and the men who invest their money.

Gust' Thode has been busily engaged of late in repairing the Tiger Lake school house, which now presents a very creditable appearance reflecting alike upon the skill of the artist and the enterprise of the school officers.

Our new mill is not in running order yet, but some of the wind work is being got away with—that is something.

A nice warm rain set in Monday night, which makes every thing look as if inspired with new life.—We may have some fine weather yet in spite of Vennors prophecies.

Yesterday (Monday) was a Holiday and our neighbors and neighbors wives were all here attending the Picnic and dance in the afternoon, and also the grand Ball at Klancke's Hall at night, it seemed to be a general good time.

Mr. Slocum has been offering unusual high prices for wheat the past two or three days. The farmers certainly have no cause to complain of the low price of wheat.

Dr. Cash says that while the convenience of the church had considerable to do with his changing his place of residence, it is his impression that it was by no means the only reason.—We hope the Dr. will make good use of his time and close proximity to the Sanctuary. Doctors are always considered public property, hence these remarks.

Hollywood Sprigs.

Thermometer, on 21st of May last, stood at 32 deg. above zero, 6 a. m. Towards noon, and at eve., it was 41 deg. above. On Sat., May 6th last, when we had such a fine day, where your Rep. hails from, it was very disagreeably being a time of cold rain, snow, and sleet. Big difference, oft, betwixt Pa. and Minn.

Mrs. Joseph Merkle was buried on Sunday afternoon 21st ult.

Many of our farmers have sown less wheat, and put in more corn and oats. 'Tis good so!

The Evangelical people had preaching, on whit-Monday, 10 a. m.

Reinhold Zeglin is building a new store—doing a fair business, generally.—Had the pleasure of a visit from Edw. Messer, Esq.—Call oftener, Ed.

The P. O. at Helvetia is a credit to the place, and under efficient management.

Christian Haueter and Rev. W. Fritz will leave for a short trip to Fargo and Bismarck this week, being absent some ten days.

German papers, edited in Minneapolis and St. Paul, circulate pretty freely here, especially "Die Volkszeitung."

The wheat has come forth very nicely, especially towards Watertown, where the ground is more hilly.—Many of our people cultivate house-plants and flowers, an evidence of a refined taste,—highly worthy of praise.

The yearly camp meeting of our Evangelical Brethren will, this year, be held near Jacob Volkenant, and presiding elder, Rev. Chr. Brill, an eloquent and able Divine of St. Paul, will preside.—Other Ministers will aid in the services.

Jacob Schoch's smoke-house burned down, and considerable meat was damaged.

Father John Simon lately returned to his home, here, after a protracted stay in New Ulm, as, also, Waseca, at which places, in our state, he has sons who are Evangelical ministers. However, since the recent Minnesota Conference, both have been assigned other fields of labor.

The canine tribe is very numerous, and at the rate of a dollar per head, would yield a considerable revenue.—Our young ladies should cultivate the art of croquet-playing.

Camp. Meeting opens Wed. June 14th.

WACONIA DEPARTMENT.

Wm. Whitehill Reporter.

Miss Mollie Schutz got up a May day party on the 21st to which a large number of her young friends were invited. The original programme included a pic-nic, in the woods, but the day proving raw and uninviting, Mollie with her proverbial good sense, escorted her guests to the Lake House parlors, where they enjoyed themselves during the remainder of the day.

Mr. Nic. Bohnen formerly school teacher at West Newton, Nicollet Co., with whom we became acquainted four years ago, paid a visit to his cousin Nic Brill lately. Mr. Bohnen is an accomplished musician, and when the two Nics got together,—well you all know what followed. Mr. Bohnen goes to St. Cloud, for what purpose we are not informed. We hope to see him again soon.

Mr. Peter Pottgeiser, formerly well known as business manager of "Der Wanderer" St. Paul and now engaged as traveling agent for the firm of Breuer and Rhodes, iron merchants, was in our midst last Monday. He says he was surprised and delighted to see the evidence of growing greatness and prosperity, &c. &c. &c., Of course they all say so, but Mr. P. is always welcome, all the same.

The fair on the 23rd was quite successful. The quality of stock on hand was poor, as was to be expected at this time of the year. For some months to come, the great demand will be for beef cattle, as the season is too far advanced to sell milch cows, profitably, unless they are first class. As it was prices ruled high and the stock offered not desirable. The next fair will be on the 30th day of June, when we hope to see a better class of stock brought in.

Mr. John Radde has begun to build an addition to his house to be 30 x 20. Next.

Mr. August Treichel hae began on his new residence between the warehouse and Mr. John Radde's residence.

We noticed the following named DENIZENS of Chaska on our streets on fair day. George Bierline Sr., Jacob Bierline Jr., (supposed to be a son of Bierline senior), Philip Henk, Joe Franken. If Chaska never sends us any worse, we will have reason to congratulate ourselves. Come again.

Mr. Fred Dell paid us one of his periodical visits on fair day- Fred is bound to have that sail.

Mr. Chas. Stanley, late with Pilkington & Co. of St. Paul, has been superceded by Nicholas Flynn.—We recognize in Mr. Flynn an old comrade of the G. A. R. and as such he is entitled to confidence.

The performance passed off with eclat, except that Emil in one of the opening scene, in endeavoring to close a door by a backward, back action, stuck his elbow through a pane of glass, and in trying to remedy the defect, by a forward action stuck his head through another.—However as we saw Emil taking the dimensions, next morning, we conclude that all is serene.

CHASKA, - - MINNESOTA

The New York Times publishes special information from thirty-five important commercial centers in twenty-five differ-states, which show, as a whole, that the business of the country is upon a sound and promising basis. There is no cause for earnest anxiety as to the immediate future. Of course that depends largely upon the crops and in certain localities these are promising.

The Memphis Avalanche says that, "Judge Lynch's heavy docket is now north of Dixon's and Mason line. Since January last he has executed sixteen alleged criminals in the southern states, nineteen in the northern states and six in the frontier states. In Kansas, Ohio, Indiana, Pennsylvania, Wisconsin and Minnesota, States where the ordinary courts are supposed to mete out justice, Judge Lynch has condemned eight persons during the period mentioned." This is a bad record, both north and south, and neither having much advantage.

A large class of the unemployed at the present time in the large towns and cities are well educated, but have no trades. Their education has given them a knowledge of books, but they have no opportunity to use it, and not possessing that knowledge that is of practical value are dependent upon their friends. Such a thing as learning a trade never probably entered their heads, or if it did, they looked upon it as beneath them. They are of the class who must always wait for something to turn up and in the large cities only those who themselves turn up the something receive the prizes.

The Medical News of Philadelphia reiterates the earnest warning recently given in the London Lancet against the curse of chloral. The text of the warning is the case of the late artist-poet, Dante Rossetti, who, suffering from insomnia, sought chloral for relief, "only to experience greater evils in a horrible nervousness, irritability and depression of the vegetative functions." The peculiar sensitiveness which he exhibited in his late years, his gradual withdrawal from social circles and his entire surrender to melancholy, were the results of chloral sleep. The News remarks that physicians should be careful about prescribing chloral for nervous and literary persons suffering from wakefulness.

The new secretary of the Interior proposes to disarm the Sioux Indians, and asked the delegate of Dakota how to do it. Mr. Pettigrewn replied it would be impossible to do this by force, without bringing on a war with the Indians. He thought it might be done, however, by refusing to issue rations to those Indians who came to the agency armed and not allow them to kill by chsaing and shooting the cattle issued to them, thus rendering their arms useless. They might then be more willing to give them up. Secretary Toller has faith in the civilizing influence of United States troops among the Indians rather than the reverse. As the highest civilization does not alone include the highest personal morality, he is technically right.

In Great Britain there is a monopoly of lands in the hands of a few individuals. Late statistics show that 2,114 persons own 38,028,244 acres, which is 12,000,000 acres more than the third part of the whole area of Great Britain and Ireland, or nearly one half the acreage of the United Kingdom. As a fine contrast there are in the United States and territories 3,124,720 farms against 1,747,989 in 1840. Of these nearly 3,124,720 farms, 2,440,281 are occupied by the owners, 210,842 are rented for fixed money rental, and 473,614 are rented for shares of produce. The most of these farms have an acreage ranging from twenty acres to 500, the greater portion being between twenty and 100 acres in extent. A country's strength and prosperity, in fact, largely depend upon the extent to to which the land is owned and occupied by the people. The land monopoly in Great Britain is a curse to her, and is, to-day, at the bottom of her domestic troubles.

The Northern Pacific Railroad Company is now operating 1,351 miles of road. The increase since January 1881, is 360 miles. The length of the gap between the completed divisions east and west is now only 593 miles. It is expected that by Jan. 1, 1883 the road will be finished to Bozeman, Montana, at the base of the Rocky mountains. This point is 200 miles distant from the present end of the track. On the western division the line will be built from the present terminus to the mouth of the Little Black Foot river. It is estimated that 400 miles of track will be completed this year. If this is accomplished there will only be 192 miles to bt completed in 1883 to form a continuous railroad line from Superior, Wis., St. Paul and Minneapolis to Portland, Oregon. In 1884 summer excursions from the east and the valley of the Mississippi to the "far west where rolls the Oregon" will be all the rage.

Prof. King of Philadelphia, the distinguished aeronaut who made an abortive attempt last fall to sail in the air from Minneapolis to the eastern coast, is constructing a very large balloon with the idea of making an attempt to cross the Atlantic. The balloon will have a capacity of 300,000 cubic feet of gas and attached to it 5,000 feet of rope. It is to cost $50,000. He still adheres to the theory so fully expounded last fall that there is a great atmospheric tendency eastward. He believes that a balloon kept at 2,000 or 3,000 feet above the earth, started from the United States, would eventually reach Europe. The balloon is to be allowed an elevation of 1,500 or 2,000 feet. When the sun shines and the gas is expanded the balloon cannot ascend to any much greater elevation because of the weight of the additional rope, and when the gas contracts on account of the cold the descending rope, being buoyed by the water, would relieve the balloon of so much weight. By this simple contrivance the air ship would be kept at almost any uniform elevation, and the eastward movement would carry the balloon across the ocean. Prof. King is very sanguine, enthusiastic sort of a fellow, and is undoubtedly sincere in his belief that he can cross the Atlantic in a balloon.

The bill has passed the senate.

As soon as the house disposes of the pending contested election case cand goes to the transaction of other business, Delegates Pettigrew and Maginnis will try to have a day fixed for the consideration of territorial legislation. The bills they will call up will be measures against which there can be little if any objection. They will not ask to have taken up the bill to admit Dakota or any other territorial question involving politics.

It is stated by the Washington specials as a fact that the president has agreed with himself as to the following members of the tariff commission: William A. Wheeler, New York, president; Harry Oliver, Pennsylvania; John L. Hayes, Massachusetts; Alexander Mitchell, Wisconsin; Garland and Porter of Illinois. Hayes and Garland are interested in the wool-growing industry, Mitchell in railroading, Oliver in the steel trade, Porter is the census bureau statistician, and Wheeler is ex-vice president of the United States.

The senate military committee has had a meeting on the Fitz John Porter case since the return of Gen. Logan. At that meeting it appeared probable that a majority would vote to report the bill favorable to the senate. General Logan informed the committee that he should oppose the bill with all his power in the senate, and that he should be able to make out a case against General Porter so clear that no republican senator would be able to vote for the bill without giving an account to his constituents.

It is estimated that there will be sold during 1882 not less than 4,000 prepaid passage tickets at the various stations on the Manitoba road, from Europe, through to the points at which these tickets are issued. The usual proportion of cash passengers compared with prepaid is two to one, which will make 12,000 European emigrants to the section traversed by the Manitoba road alone.

At a reception in Philadelphia, President Villard, of the Northern Pacific told how he had placed himself in control of the Oregon Steamship company, operating between San Francisco, Portland and Puget sound, and connected to that the Oregon & California railroad, and then established the connection between these two corporations and the Northern Pacific. These enterprises were merely tributary to the Northern Pacific, and he had never intended to make them anything else. They had built up 1,500 miles of standard guage railroad to meet the main line and spent $3,000,000 for the equipment of the steamship line, all of which had not cost the Union Pacific company a dollar. And since all this had been done emigration into Oregon has been four times as great as formerly.

Crimes and Criminals.

The United States grand jury at Omaha indicted D. G. Hull, late custodian of the postoffice building at Lincoln and master in chancery of the United States courts, on twenty-two counts charging him with signing vouchers that were either partly or wholly false and fraudulent. The vouchers were for supplies for building, furniture, etc., and by his operations he is said to have defrauded the government out of several thousand dollars. He got parties to sign the vouchers in blank, and then filled them out for larger sums than the bills called for, and when the checks came back he got parties to indorse on the back without letting them see the face. He then would pay their bills in cash and retain the difference.

From Foreign Lands.

The Irish Nation special says: A great crisis has arisen in the land league movement, threatening the unity and the very existence of the organization, and the next few days will decide whether the organization is to continue its career of usefulness or break up into factions and become a scandal to the country. There is good reason to believe that the revolt of a section of the Irish members against Parnell is not an accidental or passing opposition. The passage of the arrears bill, on which with all its shortcomings, the safety of 50,000 Irish homes depends is endangered by the division. The nationalists have suffered fearfully through coercion, and it is at them that the new repression is chiefly aimed. They are disgusted at the demagogism displayed by some of those members of parliament who would desert the land league to-morrow if they thought they could do it with impunity. Parnell's desire to obtain a modification in the provision of the bill will be defeated by violent speeches, which, however well meant, will produce no result but that of exasperating the English. It is believed that the opposition to Parnell originated in America among those who forced the "no rent" policy on the movement, and who are the deadly enemies of the national organization. Parnell is utterly disgusted.

A correspondent says: I understand Parnell went to Paris again yesterday morning to consult with Davitt and Egan, and is not expected back before Monday. Other members of the league were only estranged from him until the discovery of the letter to O'Shea on which the government bargain was based, have became reconciled, and will work with him hereafter. Undoubtedly the most critical time in connection with the ministerial crisis has been the past week. They have at this time the curious spectacle of a most conservative government in the world steeped in political bargains of a most extraordinary character.

Russia and Austria have decided to act in complete accord on the Turkish question. This decision has been arrived at spontaneously and reciprocally, almost without an exchange of engagements, both being convinced that Germany would be happy to see them mutually exhaust themselves in war expenses. Therefore all causes of discord or discussion between Russia and Austria are forgotten or set aside for the moment.

Narrow Escape of 1,000 Emigrants.

A passenger train on the Grand Trunk, with 1,000 British emigrants en route for Manitoba, crashed into a freight train of sixty cars that was standing on the line between Victoria bridge and the depot at Montreal on Wednesday. In advance of the cars containing passengers were four baggage cars, which were thrown off the track and smashed up. It is considered that owing to their receiving the principal effects of the shock the passengers escaped with their lives. As it was, the latter were badly knocked about and received terrible bruises. The engineers and firemen escaped by jumping off before the collision occurred. The locomotive of the emigrant train and another attached to the freight train behind were completely wrecked. The damage to the company is estimated at $50,000. The escape of the emigrants is considered miraculous.

Conference of Liquor Dealers.

A conference of distillers, brewers, wholesale and retail dealers, with a view to a national organization in the interests of the business and to oppose sumptuary legislation, has been held in Chicago. The states of Minnesota, Iowa, Nebraska, Wisconsin, Michigan, Illinois, Indiana, Ohio, Missouri and New York were represented. Committees on the national organization of the interest here represented in a national personal liberty league, on resolutions and on apportionment were appointed. Several addresses were made, among them one by Mayor Harrison. Extended resolutions were adopted, the tenor of which was that the body was not intended to fight temperance in the sense of sobriety, but to oppose prohibition or interference with personal liberty. It was resolved to stand by the dealers in Iowa, and fight against prohibition. The society was named the National Distillers and Retail Dealers. The next meeting, which will be the annual meeting of the body, will be held in Milwaukee.

Terribly Colliery Explosion.

Pottsville Pa., special: One of the most terrible accidents that has happened in the Schuyskill coal region for a number of years occurred this afternoon at the Kahmoor colliery, Shenandook, owned and operated by Heikshire & Co., by which six men were instantly killed and three so badly injured that they may not recover. The colliery is one of the largest in the region, employing some 300 men and boys.

The mine had been generating gas very heavily during last night, and two fans were kept running at a rapid rate to drive it out. This proved of no avail, however, and this morning it was found that the mine was filled with the dangerous material.

He warned the men on their arrival of the danger, and had safety lamps distributed among them, after which they descended the mine to work. The following are the names of the killed:

Owen Gallager, miner, married, leaves a wife and three children.

James Mulhearn, laborer, single man.

Martin Mulhearn, miner, father of the latter.

Joseph McDonald a door boy.

John Hugh, a driver.

John Stratt, a laborer.

Arrival of Lieutenant Danenhower and Party.

Lieut. Danenhower has arrived at New York from the Arctic regions. He was met in the harbor by Mrs. De Long and his aged parents, and a sad scene was enacted. Danenhower defends Engineer Melville against the aspersions cast upon him by the Herald, which had charged upon the engineer the responsibility of the death of De Long. No human power could have saved De Long and his party under the circumstances, and the only censure that could be bestowed upon anybody should be awarded to the parties who instigated the forlorn hope expedition to the north pole, which has cost so much of life and treasure and the attainment of no desirable end. The most pitied of the Danenhower party was poor Jack Cole, boatswain of the Jeannette, crazy from long suffering. His brother, Thomas Cole, and son John were quick to go to him, and the unfortunate man immediately recognized them, affectionately greeting both. It was sad to see the weeping son, sorrowing brother and demented father. Immediately after speaking to his son his mind again wandered and he was once more among the ice fields, struggling with the fate threatening him. He will be sent to the asylum.

Important Civil Service Conviction.

In New York city, the jury in the trial of Gen. M. M. Curtis, who was charged with receiving money from government employes for political purposes, found Gen. Curtis guilty on the first and eighth count. The first was for receiving $5 from an employe of the custom house named Vogelsang, and the eighth was receiving a bank check for $100 from Mr. Treichel, the auditor of the custom house. A motion for a new trial was made. Gen. Curtis was an officer in the New York custom house and was deputized by a political committee to collect assessments from federal officers contrary to law.

Articles incorporating the D. M. G Imor-Furniture company of Minneapolis, capital stock $150,000 have been filed with the secretary of state.

CONGRESSIONAL.

WEDNESDAY, MAY 24.

SENATE.—Under the order for the calendar the senate—yeas 24, nays 23—passed the senate bill for the relief of the officers and crew of the United States steamer Monitor, who participated in the action with the ironclad Merrimac in March, 1862. The appropriation is stated at the actual value of the Merrimac at the date of the action, not exceeding $200,000.

The supply bill came up and was modified to permit dissatisfied land owners, etc., to sue for damages in the court of claims within one year, and the bill passed by a viva voce vote.

The senate in executive session confirmed Lewis Buckner, collector of internal revenue for the fifth district of Kentucky; Wm. H. Brown, surveyor general of California; Louis Dupont, United States consul at Funchal; John W. Stone, United States attorney for the western district of Michigan; F. Williamson, United States marshal of the western district of Tennessee; F. W. Oakley, western district of Wisconsin.

HOUSE.—A long and angry discussion took place on the South Carolina election case, and after that the house present killed time in conversation and reading until 5, when Calkins said he would call up the election cases Thursday, advising members to bring five days' rations with them. He then moved an adjournment which was agreed to.

THURSDAY, MAY 25.

SENATE.—Mr. Williams of Kentucky—or "Cerro Gordo," as he is familiarly called—took exceptions to the delay of the pensions committee in relation to pensioning veterans of the Mexican war, and gave notice that he intended at an early day to call the bill up for action without waiting for a report on the subject by the committee. He said that the matter had been referred to the committee before Christmas, and thought that they had been derelict in their duty in not taking steps to recompense in a measure the veterans who had shown their heroism and valor in the war with Mexico. After the veteran resumed his seat, the Japanese indemnity bill was taken up and discussed.

HOUSE.—Nothing of an interesting nature occurred in the house beyond the calling of the yeas and nays on motions to adjourn and recess, Messrs. Randall of Pennsylvania, Blackburn of Kentucky and Kenna of West Virginia taking turns in calling for the vote. Some republicans, Robeson among them; have urged Keifer to break the deadlock by deciding that the democrats had no right to fillibuster on a question of the highest privilege. Keifer, acting under the advice of the wisest men on the republican side has declined to do so, and it is probable that the deadlock will continue for some time.

FRIDAY, MAY 26.

SENATE.—The senate bill providing for the removal of obstructions to the free navigation of navigable waters in the United States, and requiring bridge corporations to erect sheer booms, etc., to aid boats in passing without striking bridge piers, passed. Consideration of the Japanese indemnity fund bill was resumed. Mr. Saunders (Neb.) moved an amendment to pay Geo. S. Fisher, consul at Kanagou, $15,000 for losses in consequence of forcible ejection from his residence and destruction of property,

Jones (Fla.) offered an amendment providing that before payment be authorized by the bill, the president shall communicate to the governments of Great Britain, France and Netherlands the action of this government, and request their co-operation in making full restitution to Japan. Without action on the bill or amendment, the senate adjourned until Monday.

HOUSE.—The Mackey vs. Dibble election case occupied the whole day. After further debate and colloquies, portions of which were lost in the confusion on the floor and in continuous rapping of the speaker's gavel, roll call followed roll call upon dilatory motions. Finally Blackburn, in behalf of the minority, submitted a resolution proposing that a special committee be appointed to investigate the charges of irregularity in handling the testimony in the Mackey-Dibble contested election case. Blackburn asserted that his resolution was intended as the inaugural proceeding on the part of the minority to break the existing deadlock.

A stormy scene took place on the republican side, many members disapproving the acceptance of the resolution or of any proposition looking to a compromise. Several members were talking at once, and the speaker's gavel was in constant use. After another scene of confusion, only allayed after continuous use of the speaker's gavel, Washburn demanded the regular order, objecting to any man acting for the republican side without consultation or authority. The house adjourned in confusion, and a republican caucus was immediately held, at which it was resolved to stand firm and accept of no compromise whatever—and so the deadlock continues.

SATURDAY, MAY 27.

SENATE.—Not in session.

HOUSE.—Things opened quietly and proceeded until Mr. Reed of Maine offered an amendment to the rules, that pending a motion to sustain the rules on any question of consideration which may arise on a case involving the constitutional right to a seat, and pending the motion for the previous question, or after it shall have been ordered on any such case, the speaker may entertain one motion; but after the result thereon is announced he shall not entertain any other motion until the vote is taken on the pending question. This stirred up a row and motions to adjourn followed for nearly two hours, and shortly after 2 o'clock a motion prevailed for a call of the house—a vote showing that a quorum had failed to respond. The sergeant-at-arms was instructed to go in search of absentees. The sergeant-at-arms had an unsuccessful hunt after delinquents, and further proceedings were accordingly dispensed with. Then followed a yea and nay vote on a motion to adjourn. Time drew on until four o'clock, when, on motion of Mr. Reed, the house adjourned until Monday.

MONDAY, MAY 29.

SENATE.—The Creek Indian orphan fund was again considered, but not acted upon. The old site of the New York postoffice was ordered sold for not less than $500,000. A resolution was adopted instructing the committee on military affairs to make further provision for the people in the overflowed districts of the Mississippi. Senators Harrison and Pugh were appointed visitors to West Point. The senate bill setting apart a tract of public land on the Colorado river was favorably reported: also the bill enlarging the powers and duties of the department of agriculture. The Japanese indemnity fund bill was taken up, notices of amendment given, and the bill laid aside without action.

HOUSE.—Mr. Reed called up for consideration his proposed amendment to the rule prohibiting dilatory motions in contested election cases. Mr. Randall raised the question of consideration, while Mr. Kenna and Mr. Blackburn made motions to adjourn. Mr. Reed raised the point of order that on the proposition to amend the rules dilatory motions cannot be entertained. On this point a prolonged debate arose, participated in by the principal men on both sides, at the conclusion of which the speaker gave his decision sustaining Mr. Reed's point of order. An appeal was made from the decision, and on motion of Mr. Reed the appeal was tabled—ayes 150, nays 2. Mr. Cox of New York presented a protest signed by 100 or more democrats against the decision of the speaker. The contested election case of Dibble vs. O'Connor was then taken up, Mr. Miller having the floor, when the house adjourned. The case will probably not be decided for some days.

Dickens: I think it must somewhere be written that virtues of mothers shall occassionally be visited on their children as well as the sins of fathers.

Miss Braddon: Men are so fearful of wounding a woman's vanity that they rarely remember that she may by some possibility possess a grain of common sense.

Shakespeare: The bountiful blind woman, fortune, does most mistake in her gifts to women. For those that she makes fair, she scarce makes honest; and those that she makes honest, she makes very ill-favoredly.

TURTLE MOUNTAIN OPEN.

The Pembina Chippewa Indian Land to be Thrown Open to Settlement.

Secretary Teller of the interior department, has solved the Turtle mountain Indian problem in a decisive and business-like way. He has decided that the Indians have no title, and that the lands shall be thrown open to settlement as soon as the necessary papers can be drawn up. This decision will open up 9,000,000 acres of the best land in Dakota to the actual settlers who will not be slow to avail themselves to secure homes in this garden spot of the great northwest. The Manitoba and the Northern Pacific railway are already opening these lands up to development and the Milwaukee & St. Paul is striking out in the same direction.

Mr. Teller says it would have been a great misfortune to the 250 Indians who claim to own these 9,000,000 acres if their title to them had been recognized, as the amount for which it would sell would be such a large sum of money as to keep them always in indolence and then would never make any effort at civilization. He says also that it would be a great injustice to the people of the country, as these lands had been ceded to the United States by the Sioux Indians in the treaty of 1869. Mr. Teller says that an appropriation should be made for these Indians, but that they should not have a title to land they do not own; but of course he has not yet taken up the subject for appropriations for them. The fact of it is, the balance of the tribe are at White Earth reservation, where the government has purchased a reservation sufficiently large for all these Indians, and make appropriations every year for them.

Ex-Secretary Ramsey says that the Chippewas were never over twenty miles west of the Red River of the North; that the Sioux occupied the country west of that and sometimes lived at St. Joe, which was only twenty miles west of that river, and disputed the the title of the Chippewas to that country even nearer than to the river. He says that the Chippewas were so degraded and debased that they did not even have a tribal organization and no schools.

DESCRIPTION OF THE COUNTRY.

Beginning at the east end of Devil's lake, D. T., along the eastern boundary line of the Sioux reservation, which lies immediately south of the lake course, south 20 degrees 40 minutes east to the Cheyenne river, thence to Stump lake, thence to the headwaters of Salt creek, thence due north to the international boundary line, thence along the international line west to La Rocke Pierce, thence in a southerly direction to the headwaters of the Knife river, thence to Dog's Den, thence to west end of Devil's lake to the place of beginning, This includes all or portions of the counties of Pembina, Cavalier, Ramsey and Grand Forks, all of them of huge inter-boundary dimensions.

The country has not been surveyed but that omission will speedily be rectified. Already there are thousands of squatters on the land who have pushed as far west as the Souris or Mouse river, and North to the boundary, tempted by the arable land, of which there are unmeasured quantities said to be by those who have traversed it as good in character as any in the Red or Missouri valleys and specially adapted to the raising of wheat. The territory is traversed by almost countless streams, but of wood there is not an abundance until Turtle Mountain itself is reached. This eleptical formation, which lies prrtly within and partly without the United States is heavily wooded, and the timber is of many varieties, conifers being in the ascendency. For many years the land now to be thrown open, to settlement has been viewed with covetous eyes, but until lately the impossibility of getting a good title prevented any appreciable settlement. One of the greatest features of the secretary's decision will be the exodus from Manitoba and the Northwestern territory into Northern Dakota. Thousands who moved into the Dominion will emigrate therefrom. Of course railways will soon enter the newly opened district, but definite news thereof it seems impossible to secure. Gen. Haupt, of the Northern Pacific, says that his road would extend the Jamestown branch probably to Devil's Lake, but not farther this season, thirty miles being graded north from Jamestown now. If the company had any other plans for entering the Turtle mountain country, he was not aware of them. Manager Manville of the Manitoba road was reticent. Mr. Hill, however, has made no secret of his intention ultimately to build westward to the Missouri river, and it would seem like a plausible guess that the Turtle mountain lands would be crossed en route.

An Extraordinary Story.

A correspondent in the West of England writes to the Pall Mall Gazette: A remarkable affair is repoted from a fashionable seaside town in the west. About eighteen months ago a respectable artisan lost his wife, and being left with several children he advertised for a housekeeper. He received a reply from a "widow," and after negotiations by letter they came to terms. She represented that she had been left £3,000, but being desirous of continuing in service she had accepted the present situation. In a few weeks she became her employer's wife the £3,000 proving a tempting bait. In the course of a short time a "gentleman who was going abroad" called on the family. He wished, as an old friend of the lady, to give her a present before leaving England and he was accordingly represented as having deposited £1,800 in a local bank to her account. Up to this time the parties had been living in a respectable terrace, but the lady now objected to a "terrace," and a villa was taken. In a short time she expressed a desire to purchase the villa—"they might as well become their own landlord"—and negotiations were accordingly commenced, and the work of laying out of carriage-drive, building stables, etc., was also begun. All this time letters and "documents" were coming to and going from the house. Before, however, the deposit for the villa was paid the husband was anxious to have the legal control of the "fortune" made over to him, as had been arranged, but the wife urged various excuses. Meantime a creditor met at the house a solicitor who had been engaged by the wife to draw up the necessary "documents," and the result was a visit of the legal gentleman to a town some miles off to see a "Colonel" represented by the lady as one of her trustees. No such person, however, could be found, and on subsequent visit to the Probate Court of the county town to inspect the wills of both her father and late husband, who were stated to have been clergymen of the county, no trace of any such wills could be found. The lady, finding that inquiries were being made, absconded, and the husband soon discovered that she had run him into debt to the amount of £700. The poor man, who has given up his imployment soon after his marriage, in view of the "fortune," is thus ruined, and much sympathy is felt for him. The woman is suspected to be the same person who a few years ago, in a seaside resort in the same county, took a large house, furnished it elaborately as a lodging-house, and after living in the best style for a time and making away with some of the furniture, suddenly disappeared.

New Wrinkle, of the Hated Book-Agent.

From the Petersburg (Va.) Index-Appeal.

It is stated that an agent from the north recently visited our city to canvass for the sale of a certain book. He visited the residences of a number of our citizens and where he did not make actual cash sales, as was the case in a number of instances, he asked permission to leave the book for examination, promising to call by subsequently and get it, in the event it was not desired to keep the volume. Whether or not he was prevented from calling for the book is not known, but the book was left with some ten or a dozen citizens, and a bill for $10 against each of them was placed in the hands of the high constable for collection. This officer was not aware of the circumstances until he presented some of the bills, when he was informed in each case that no purchase of the book had been made, nor any bargain entered into with the agent, but on the contrary the volume had been left with them under the promise that it would soon be called for. Several of the gentlemen against whom these bills had been presented expressed the desire to interview the agent and give him a gentle reminder of their opinion of his conduct, but it is not in the city—having returned to the north.

Wit and Humor.

Fancy and fact: "Don't you love birds, Mr. Proseman, and all their sweet little ways?" "I do, Miss Gushington, dearly—on toast."

Tribulation of a beaux: Patrick, dressing for a party—"Bedad, now, and I shan't be able to git on these boots till I've worn them a toime or two."

A distinction without difference: Extract from the bill of fare of a suburban restaurant—Beef a la mode, 10; beef in the latest mode, 15.

Numbskull: She (encouragingly)—"Your step suits mine exactly." He (nervously) "So glad to hear you say so; I know I'm such a bad waltzer."

Progress of science: "Wanted, a distinguished and healthy-looking man to be a "cured patient" in a doctor's waiting room. Address I. B. R., Poste Restante.

Toilet art criticism: First lady—"Dear me, I never saw Mrs. Potts look so pale." Second lady—"Nor I; she's probably been out in the rain without an umbrella."

Bitten: "I tell you, gentlemen, that dog of mine is an intelligent critter." "Possibly," muttered Fogg; "but you wouldn't think it, judging from the company he keeps."

Parasites in Human Bodies.

Dr. Horatio C. Wood, Jr., the eminent microscopist and lecturer at the Pennsylvania University hospital, says that bodies for dissection are constantly turning up which are filled with hog parasites. "The students, in cutting the other day," Dr. Wood remarked, "found the flesh of a man knotty, and upon examination the muscles were found full of trichinæ. The symptoms are like scarlet fever, and are often mistaken for it. The attending physicians fail to diagnose the disease, about which little is known, and death is attributed to other causes. It almost invariably occurs among the lowest and most ignorant class of people, who eat the worst kind of meat and often fail to cook it properly. The boiling point of two hundred will probably kill the parasite, and no meat ought to be eaten by any one which has not been subjected to that temperature.

A New Profession.

The New York World advertises as follows: "Families who are about giving receptions, dinner parties or other entertainments will be gratified to know that persons who will assist in making these events pleasant and enjoyable can be obtained through the medium of the World employment bureau. These persons will not be professionals, but parties of culture and refinement, who will appear well, dress elegantly and mingle with the guests, while able and willing to play, sing, converse fluently, tell a good story, give a recitation or anything that will help to make an evening pass quickly and pleasantly. These persons will also be sent to summer resorts, if desired. The attendance of such persons, young or old, male or female, can be had for the sum of $10 per evening each. We will guarantee them to be strictly honest and desirable persons."

Master of 1,000 Negroes.

Maj. B. W. Bellamy, whose farm of 16,000 acres is near Quitman, Ga., owned several hundred slaves until they were freed by the great war. Now he masters, not nominally, but in reality, 1,000 negroes. His plantation house is surrouned by 6,000 acres of cultivated land. The thousand tenants have neat white-washed cottages, churches, schools and dance houses. Every dwelling has its garden, potato patch and orchard. Every person is encouraged to save money and bring out individuality. All the children over ten years can read and write. Mr. Bellamy is very popular with the tenants. At his house things are done in the old style. A reporter of the Quintman Press recently dined with the planter, and the main dish was a chicken pie baked in a ten-gallon oven. The round of beef was as much as a stout boy could stagger along under.

High-Sounding Titles.

To make it comprehensible to English readers, this is the way the fashionable journals announced the recent marriage at Windsor: "The marriage of His Royal Highness Leopold George Duncan Albert, Duke of Albany, Earl of Clarance, Baron Asklow, Duke of Saxony, Prince of Saxe-Coburg and Gotha, Knight of the Most Noble Order of the Garter, Fourth Son of her Majesty Queen Victoria and of His Royal Highness the Prince Consort, Duke of Saxony and Prince of Saxe-Coburg and Gotha, with Her Serene Highness Princess Helen Frederica Augusta, Fourth Daughter of His Serene Highness the Reigning Prince of Waldock and Pyrmont, was solemnized in St. George's Chapel, Windsor, Thursday, April 27.

The Atrocities of Patents.

From the Des Moines Register.

It is claimed that the law protecting patents aids largely in the advance of the arts and sciences—that men spend months and years in bringing out valuable inventions who could not afford to spend their time and exert their genius unless their labors were protected by patent rights. This in some cases is probably true, but the extreme to which the practice is extended in patenting such things as required no thought, and were probably picked up by sharpers on seeing someone using something of the kind. Take, for instance, the copper tip on boys' boots and shoes. Every one had probably seen toes tipped with leather to keep them from wearing out, or so mended after they were worn. Somebody concluded it was better to make the tip of brass than leather. He straightway took out a patent for it, and made off of the industry of the country $1,000,000. The rubber tip on the end of lead pencils did not take much genius to invent, yet the manufacturers of pencils pay a royalty to the inventor for every one, and of course it is charged to consumers, and the patentee refused $500,000 for his royalty. The common metal screw up to 1846 was made the entire length the same size. A Cincinnatian invented the idea of making the point sharp or gimlet pointed, and had it patented. It made him a millionare, and industry footed the bill. Up to about 1840 all letters were sealed with wax or wafers. Some one racked his mighty genius and invented the use of mucilage on the envelope, and the patent placed him among the rich men of earth. The skates on rollers is a late invention. Of course it must have required the genius of a Morse or the Sage of Menlo to conceive such a bright idea, and yet he refuses $1,000,000 for his wit.

And we could write columns of the instances where millions have been made from the simplest devices, all of which were probably accidently discovered or stolen from some device of the kind in use but which the person using it never deemed worthy of a patent. And in this way industry is heavily taxed to build up vast estates for sharpers and swindlers by the aid of our Government. Had we a patent office authorized and competent to grant to worthy patents only—patents which it required genius to work out, it would probably not be such an agent of wrong and cruelty to the great mass of people.

At Mankato, George St. Martin, porter at the Merchants hotel, and Phillip Brady, driver of B. D. Pay's baggage wagon, got into an altercation over an umbrella and after the usual amount of chin music Brady made a jump for Martin with the razor, cutting him on the thigh, the blade passing through his coat, pants, shirt and handkerchief, making a gash three inches long and one inch deep. Martin started for a physician's office and had his wound sewed up. Officer Robinson arrested both parties and took them before Judge Porter who gave Brady forty days in jail and St. Martin ten days.

Personal Gossip.

A lawyer in Bangor, Me., has brought suit for $5,000 damages against the publishers of a history of Penobscot county which reported him as dead and gave him a complimentary obituary sketch.

The gentleman who is soon to lead Miss Annie Louise Cary to the hymeneal altar is said to be a Mr. Raymond, a New York broker, of wealth, refinement, and high social standing. It is through his most earnest entreaties that Miss Cary has decided to permanently abandon the lyric stage after the present season.

Troy Times: A romantic marriage took place at Keeseville, Essex county, one day last week. Luther Langdon of Solon, Iowa, and Maria Moshier of Keeseville were the interested parties. They are each 70 years old. It is reported they are old lovers. Mr. Langdon went west years ago, amassed a fortune, and lately returned to claim his early love. They will start for the west soon.

Among the spectators at the circus at Rock City Falls, N. Y., last Wednesday, were George Kilmer and wife of that hamlet. Although "Uncle George" is ninety-three, and "Aunt Betsey" is eighty-nine, and their connubial happiness extends back seventy years into the records of time, it was the first circus that they had ever attended, and the event was noted and regarded by those present as more worthy of remark than the spectacle of the ring.

Rev. John B. Morgan, the rector of the church of the Holy Trinity, Paris, which is the American Episcopal church of that city, has lately been in this country raising money to pay for the fine building which is now rapidly going on to completion. He has recently returned to Paris with about $400,000 as the result of his visit, which, with the amount already in hand, will cover all expenses.

The ex-king of Naples has been living in Paris in a fashion better suited to an honest grocer than to a royal personage. His home has been a small furnished apartment on the third floor of a far from magnificent hotel. When he was dethroned all his jewels and money were confiscated, as well as the personal property bequeathed him by his mother. His wife, one of the best and gentlest of women, has lately visited Italy and had an interview with its ruler, and it is said that King Humbert has used his influence with the Roman cabinet, and a restitution of the confiscated property is to be made.

Garibaldi's recent departure from Palermo gave rise to one of those extraordinary scenes of enthusiasm which he only seems to awaken. The weather was splendid, and the beautiful Golden Shell was filled with a mass of surging, shouting, banner-waving humanity. As long as the steamer conveying their idol remained in sight, the people stayed on shore waving their farewells, which were responded to by the family of the general, from the deck. His last words to the Palermitans were: "Arrivedere, ritornero!" (To our next meeting! I will come back.)

Speaking of the recent royal wedding, the London World says: "The American minister, Mr. Russell Lowell, was only invited to the banquet in the evening, not to the actual ceremony. The etiquette of courts is inscrutable, or I might wonder why the representative of such a country as Turkey occupied the place of honor, while he of the United States was left out in the cold. As a diplomatic agent, the representative of America is ten times as important as the Turkish ambassador, and, as an individual, the excellent M. Musurus would hardly compare himself with the author of the 'Biglow Papers.' The small fry of Denmark, Belgium, and Portugal were, of course, invited as representing connections of the Coburgs; but if the French Republic be represented, why not the United States?"

Chicago Sketched by a Yankee

Letter to Boston Journal.

We found a mild flavor of the great fire in the air; it will take a new generation to heal the scar. Events reckon from before and after, relics linger in public and public places, and the harrowing memories of ruin and desolation still rankle in many hearts. But this is sub rosa; outwardly the brave, lusty city might be a hundred years old for any trace of ruin or immaturity about it. The same magnificence of resource which shows itself in its 350 acres of stock-yards, in its forest of elevators in its miles of new avenues, in the stupendous rush of its business streets, i behind everything. It opens the hands and hearts of the people to a hospitality as broad as its dimensions, it puts a fine impulsive swing into their everyday gait; it makes a back ground of reality for the fabulous stories of wealth and enterprise which are in the air. You can fully believe that the Chicagoan, as well as the man pointed out, might have found himself, on retiring from business with a million and a half more than he counted on, or that any other might have answered a friendly sympathizer with the lordly indifference of Mr.——, who indorsed a note for two millions and had to pay it: "O, I never look back at that sort of thing!" You can fully believe anything of a place where porter-house steak costs sixteen cents a pound; where strawberries come in March and go in November; where the horse cars run without horses; where the people have an amount of spiritual elasticity which enables them to go to church Sunday morning and to opera Sunday night without destroying their usual poise, and of a world so flat that it seems as if Dame Nature had mistaken the crust of the earth for pastry and rolled it with a rolling pin.

American Levity on Serious Occasions.

From the New York Post.

A murder trial, one might think, would be an occasion of such solemnity that levity would be impossible. That this is not always the case, the country had a conspicuous and humiliating illustration in the conduct of the Guiteau trial. Another case of importance is presented to the public attention. It is that of the Malleys and Blanche Douglass, on trial at New Haven for the murder of Jennie Cramer. A correspondent narrates a scene of almost daily occurrence: "There was an unusual amount of levity in the court room to-day. It began with the counsel, was taken up by the jury, spread to the accused young men, and was re-echoed by the spectators. The counsel for the defense, when not engaged in a pleasantries with the District Attorney, 'guyed' the witnesses and laughed over the replies of their victims on the witness stand. The jurymen poked each other in the ribs, and had a gay time of it all day. Walter and James Malley seemed dreadfully tickled about something most of the time, and when they were not taking notes laughed until they blushed, only stopping at the point where laughter becomes guffaw. The spectators were equal to the occasion, smiling audibly. It was a pleasant scene. It seemed more like a circus than a murder trial. The only person who pretended to be sober, except the Judge, was Blanche Douglass, and even on her face an occasional smile was perceptiable. But the jurymen had the most fun. It may not be possible to inculcate solemnity in an American court room, but it is possible by the combined efforts of the Judge and Sheriff to preserve decency and decorum. The sooner a departure is made in that direction the better.

At Grand Rapids, Mich., Fred Straight alias Patrick Murphy, a young man who had become infatuated with a pretty waiter girl at a cheap resturant, died from the effects of a dose of morphine in jail where he had been sent on a charge of threatening to kill her.

George Gleason, who was sent to jail in St. Peter from Lyon county, charged with stealing a horse, was taken to the asylum Friday morning. He is raving crazy, and report says he was crazy when he took the horse. He is one of the fellows for the $200 state bounty.

THE REASON WHY.

Tho' she hath not Dian's grace,
Nor Aphrodite's perfect face
And golden hair,
She is dearer unto me
Than another e'er could be,
And more fair.

"Is she rich, then?" Oh! dear, no,
But I have enough, I trow,
For us two.
"What do I love her for?" Ah! well,
That I can't exactly tell,
But I do.

All my hopes of gladness lies
In the love-light of her eyes;
The fond kiss
Of her tender, rosy lips,
Touch of her slender finger-tips,
Gives more bliss

Than you, cold cynic, e'er could guess.
But still, the reason, you confess,
"You can't divine."
Well, I love her and she loves me;
What better reason can there be
For joy like mine?

A GOOD SAMARITAN.

BY WILLIS B. ALLEN.

"Oh, Sue, papa says we are really going to Europe next month! Won't we have fun! We'll go to the 'Zoo,' that those English books tell so much about, and we'll climb to the very tip top of the pyramids, and we'll go shopping in Paris—just think of it—and we'll see the queen, perhaps. O, isn't it too nice for anything?" and she ended in a little scream of delight.

"I think I shall like the ocean best; and the whales, you know," replied her sister contentedly. She was the youngest of the family, and was more of a quiet little house body than the rest. "I shall sit and watch the water, and oh, Alice, just think of the sunsets—whole sunsets, without the least mite of a house or a hill between!"

"I know," said Alice, carelessly, as she waltzed with herself around the room. "There'll be clouds, though, I suppose. Now, dear, don't moralize on that, and say that the clouds are what makes the sunset bright! All I care for is that we're going, and we are to sail on the Samaria just six weeks from to-morrow!"

"Why, how nice! Then we'll all be—"

"Good Samaritans!" and Alice's laugh rang out merrily.

"I don't know about the 'good' part," said Sue, puckering up her mouth in her funny, solemn way. "And I hope there won't be any thieves on board. Now, Alice, let's plan."

Here followed such a breathlessly exciting discussion of hats and dresses of woolen stuffs for the voyage, as only two girls of sixteen and fourteen can carry on when started. During the succeeding days the library was ransacked for books of travel, and directions for the journey. On the Sunday before the day of sailing, the minister added the last straw by preaching upon the text "They that go down to the sea in ships."

"We shan't have to go down," whispered mischevious Alice; "papa says you have to walk right up hill from the wharf to get on board."

Sues face twitched a little, but she looked toward the pulpit harder than ever. You couldn't make Sue laugh in church, and when near the end of a long sermon, some of the older members closed their eyes placidly, or knitted their brows absent mindly, and throughout the congregation there was that subdued rustle of fans and silk dresses, so annoying to a speaker, the minister was always sure to find one pair of serious blue eyes fixed on him, and one little pair of ears listening to every syllable of the "thirdly" and "fourthly" he had penned so carefully in his study. You wouldn't have caught Sue falling out of the window while Paul was preaching.

Well, Saturday came at last, and a wonderful day it was. The splashing, muddy ride from their home to the little country station on the Eastern railroad, the last look at the red chimneys, and the rounded tops of the maples and elms, all quivering with the fresh growth of spring and the rush of sap through their veins, the stout conductor, nodding pleasantly to the whole family, as he swayed along through the aisle, and paused to punch their four tickets.

"Guess you're bound off this time, Mr. Raymond? Thought I sh'd have to put another car on to carry your baggage."

It was a curious feeling, this mingling with the ordinary life of the other passengers, buying the morning paper of the newsboy, watching people who would ride back over the same road in a few hours, while they—where would they be when night fell?

"It seems just like holding your opera glass up to one eye, and looking straight ahead with the other," Sue confided to her mother, nestling closer, and laying her curly head uqon her shoulder.

Out of the cars, and into a hack, with an express team full of trunks lumbering behind. Then the ferry, which was quite a voyage in itself, with the great, milky waves rolling after them as they splashed along the harbor. In five minutes more they were on the wharf, in the midst of bales, boxes, teams, men running to and fro, horses backing distractedly, deckhands rattling along with their noisy trucks, and, pervading everything and everybody, a strong odor of tar.

"I told you so," laughed Alice, excitedly, as they passed up the smooth gangway plank, and found their way to the saloon. She was in a high state of nervous delight, while Sue, on the other hand, was feeling sober at the thought of leaving home. She had never known how dear it was—even the old tarry docks and warehouses—until half an hour later the last hawser was thrown off, and the ship with a tremor from stem to stern, began that dull thud, thud, of the propeller wheel which was not to cease until they should signal for a tender, off Queenstown Harbor. They all stood upon the upper deck, waving their handkerchiefs to those on the wharf as long as they could see them.

By this time the steamer had reached the middle of the stream and heading for the open ocean, was soon past the Outer Light, with her journey fairly before her. Then Sue felt a surge of homesickness come over her, until it seemed as if she must fling herself overboard, rather than be borne off in this great, remorseless ship. And that little patch of blue water was to widen, widen, until it should stretch away, full three thousand miles between her and home. A large drop trickled down her cheek and fell upon her hand, which was helplessly clutching the brass rail encircling the hurricane deck. As she turned away, her eyes blurred so that the great red funnel seemed as wavy as the volumes of black smoke that poured steadily out of it.

She knew what was the wisest thing to do in such a case, and she did it. She looked about to see whether she could help or comfort anybody else. Presently she found an old lady, who was trying to adjust herself with a heavy rug, in one of those long steamer chairs that are so hard to get into when they are straightened out. She helped her, and then tucked the rug about her feet so nicely that the old lady thanked her, and asked her if she felt badly at leaving home. This opened Sue's heart at once, and they were soon the best of friends.

Before long, as she sat on a camp stool talking to her new acquaintance, and to her mother, who had also been comfortably wrapped and tucked in by her little daughter, she began to have a queer feeling in the top of her head. Looking up, she noticed with some interest that the upper bar of the railing now and then dipped below the horizon line; that sometimes it went quite a distance above it; that she was leaning slightly, first one way and then the other, to keep her balance, as the ship swung on the long, easy swell of the ocean; that people did not talk so much as at first; that it was very unpleasant to have the deck steward urge her to "'ave some lunch." In short, our poor little sailor soon disappeared down the companion way, and it seemed ages before she climbed those stairs again. Such misery as filled the next two days she had never known. O, how she longed for five minutes on shore.

How near are we to land?" she had once asked in utter despair; and the cheery stewardess replied: "Only a mile and a 'alf, mum; it's just under us!"

Among Sue's troubles were two life preservers, which were suspended from the ceiling of the stateroom, and tilted slightly with every motion of the ship. They were in the shape of rings, to be fastened around the body, and, in the midst of her sick fancies, she could not get the idea out of her head that they were immense doughnuts, painted white, which she must eat at once.

Father and mother recovered first, then Alice and last of all, Sue. Then how sweet the air, how beautiful the long, foamy sweep of the waves, the rosy clouds, the passing ships that now and then fluttered, like white moths upon the horizon. She used to get up very early in the morning, and the bluff kind hearted officer would invite her up with him on his high bridge, where she could see the whole ship spread out like a map, and could look off over the gray water and gray sky, until the east grew all aflame, and slowly, grandly, the full bright sun arose.

"Isn't it like, the King of glory shall come in?'" she had once said timidly to the red bearded first mate.

"Yes, Miss," he had answered in his short, hearty way, "and he comes every day as soon as the gates are up:"

So the hours went by quietly, peacefully, and the faithful engine never ceased to throb, night or day. She watched whales and sunsets to her heart's content. Alice spent much of her time in walking up and down the deck with the captain, and learning to play shuttleboard and ring toss. Father and mother read, talked, and dozed in the warm sunshine.

One of Sue's favorite occupations was to go as far forward as possible on the upper deck, and watch the steerage passengers, of whom there were two or three hundred on board. She pitied them, because they looked so poor and miserable. Some of them seemed to be returning to their old homes, discouraged and hopeless. Some laughed and talked noisily, but most of them curled up wherever they could, on stanchions or heaps of rope, and lay there, many of them wretchedly sick, throughout the day. They generally ate, drank and washed in full sight. The worst thing was that they were treated so much as if they were cattle. They were ordered roughly back and forth by the officers, and at a certain point a rope was drawn across the deck, to prevent them from intruding upon the cabin passengers. They nearly all had a weary, hunted, hopeless look, which went to Sue's heart. Still, she could do nothing for them. The rules of the ship were very strict; she had carried out some grapes, one day, to a delicate looking young girl, who had crept up on deck for the first time that morning, and for this little kindness Sue had been sharply rebuked by the head steward. "She mustn't intefere with the steerage," he had said; the Cunard company would look out for them." So she could do nothing but watch them wistfully, and long to help them.

They were six days out from Boston. The ship had encountered head winds, and would not reach Queenstown for several days, the officer said. When Sue came on deck that morning, she thought she noticed a commotion among the steerage passengers. They gathered in groups, talking earnestly, and glancing now and then toward the hatchway that led to their quarters below. The sailors seemed with one accord to avoid them as far as possible. The jovial first mate was quite silent, and walked the deck with a quick, nervous step, now casting a glance at the huge mainsail, which had been set during the night, now pausing a moment to regard the ragged crowd on the deck below. Never during its voyage had there been so many of them in sight at one time. The ship fairly swarmed with them. Already the cabin passengers were eagerly inquiring what was the matter, but could learn nothing. During the whole forenoon the taciturnity and mysterious air of the officers increased, until several men of influence from the cabin, among them Mr. Raymond, waited upon the captain, as a committee, to ascertain once for all the cause and nature of the disturbance that was making itself felt throughout the ship.

They found him in his little deck stateroom, talking in low, earnest tones with the ship's surgeon, and made known their errand. "If you don't give some explanation, captain," they said, "there will be a regular panic on board. The ladies are afraid there is fire in the hold, or that the ship has sprung a leak. Let us know at once what is the matter, and we will either keep silence altogether, or make such a report as shall satisfy everybody that it is nothing serious."

"Gentlemen," replied the captain calmly, after a moment's silence, "you are disturbing yourselves unreasonably. I have hardly thought it necessary to explain to passengers all the proceedings on board my ship, but I am willing to tell you the trifle that has caused this alarm. An infant died in the steerage last night, of some childish disorder, and was—buried. I believe another one is sick now. The doctor was just informing me that he thought it best, as a mere matter of precaution, to fumigate the quarters. That is all."

"And where is the sick child?"

"I left it in the steerage," answered the doctor, "until I could have the hospital made ready. I shall remove it myself, soon, before disinfecting the place."

The passengers withdrew, not more than half satisfied, and Mr. Raymond went to tell his wife what he had heard. He found her in her stateroom, busily talking with the stewardess, who had already told the news under a strict pledge of secrecy, "or it will cost me my place, mem. And the poor, little creature, she that's sick now—it's measles like, I think—is left there alone in that hole of a place, and only three years old, and half frightened to death, no doubt."

"But her mother is with her?" asked Mrs. Raymond.

"Indeed she's not, mem. She's just in the charge of strangers, who are taking her over to the h'old folks in Ireland, ye know. And not a soul will stay with the poor little thing, they're so frightened with the sickness, ye know. The doctor, he tried to 'ire two or three, but they won't do it. He says he will have to be nurse for the child himself, after the smoking's over."

"Henry," said Mrs. Raymond to her husband, "don' you think you had better speak to Sue and Allie, and ask them not to go forward? You needn't tell them what is the matter, you know. They've been on deck since morning."

"You are right, dear, and I'll see if anything can be done for the child. If money can hire a nurse, I'll find one."

Without further words he left the stateroom and took his way to the deck. He soon found Alice, deep in one of Mrs. Whitney's books, behind the wheel house.

"Allie, dear. I wouldn't go forward of the smokestack to-day. They're cleaning the steerage quarters, and the air is very unpleasant."

"Very well, papa," without looking from her book.

"Promise me, dear."

"Why of course I won't, if you don't wish me to, sir!" said Alice, surprised at her father's earnestness, and turning to see the reason. But he was gone, and she dropped back into her book. Presently he returned with a troubled face.

"Alice, have you seen Sue lately?"

"No, papa, not since I came on deck. Why?"

"I wish very much to speak to her. Please try to find her."

Alice turned down a leaf and rose reluctantly. At that moment the quartermaster, who was in charge of the deck, touched his hat and said: "I see'd your little girl on the lower deck, sir, about two hours ago, goin' forrard."

The troubled look on Mr. Raymond's face deepened. He turned away at once. Meeting the young doctor as he did so, he spoke a few words to him in a low tone, upon which the two went immediately down the companion way, and walked with quick step toward the bow of the ship. They often had to pause and pick their way among the groups of steerage passengers who lay about the deck in every conceivable position. Some of them stared at the well dressed gentleman with the troubled face, and some of them began a question to the doctor, but the two kept on without a word. Past the kitchen, with its its steamy, vegetable odors, past the engine room, with its never resting, polished steel bars vibrating up and down, back and forth. At each of these places the doctor asked a single question of the men in charge, and then went on. Not a nook nor corner, not a ragged, woful group of women and children escaped the anxious searching glance of the father's eye. The walk was repeated on the other side of the ship, but without result. As they passed one door, a sickening, sulphury odor crept out, and a few curls of smoke.

"They're preparing for the fumigation," explained the doctor, keenly watching his companion's face, "I thought we'd best do it to satisfy the authorities."

Then they went straight to the head of the stairs that led to the dark, ill-ventilated steerage. There the doctor paused and checked Mr. Raymond with his hand.

"I wouldn't go down there," he said, lightly; "it's rather a disagreeable place, you know." Suddenly his face changed. "Hark!" he said. And Mr. Raymond listened.

Faintly, sweetly, came a girlish voice up out of the darkness. Some one was singing. Ah, if the roar of the wind and dull breaking of waters against the bows would but stop for one little moment! Hark—they could hear the words now:

"Jesus, lover of my soul."

The doctor glanced again at Mr. Raymond's face. It was blanched white as the foam on the wave tops that could be seen over the bulwarks as the ship rolled.

"Doctor, he said, "let me pass. That is my little girl, singing."

"O, never mind," said the doctor, still holding his arm across the companion-way; "I'll go down and get her up."

"Doctor, why won't you let me—you said—"

The surgeon glanced over his shoulder and saw that they were alone. Then he looked the other full in the eye and said, slowly:

"Because it—is—smallpox."

"Then for God's sake, let me go by! Stand aside, I say, or I'll knock you down and pass over you!" For the tall, wiry young doctor had placed himself before him, and was directly blocking the way.

"You will do no such thing, sir. You are not strong enough to master me, and if you try I will have you put in irons. I will go down and bring your daughter up. She shall occupy my stateroom for the rest of the voyage. If her mother chooses to share it with her, and keep away from you until we land, she may do so. You can not see her, and afterward go back among the passengers."

While the billows near me roll.

Again the childish tones, with a little tired tremble in them, rose above the sound of the waters. Mr. Raymond covered his face with his hands for a moment, then turned away.

"Her mother will come," he said.

The doctor quickly descended the stairs. The steerage was divided by rough partitions into small compartments around the sides of the open space in the center, where were the dining tables made of pine boards, once clean and fresh, but now stained to a dingy brown. In each compartment were six berths, three on a side, one over the other. These berths were filled with various untidy heaps of bed-clothing, as their occupants had hurriedly left them in the morning, and the air of the whole place was foul and stifling. In the furthest corner, on the edge of one of the wide berths, sat Sue, her pretty brown steamer hood thrown back on her shoulders, holding the sick child in her lap, bending over it, and rocking it to and fro as she sung.

"I'm glad you've come, doctor," she said simply. "I was getting tired. Have you found anybody to take care of this little girl? Because if you haven't I am going to stay with her to-night."

"Do you know what is the matter with her?"

"Yes, sir; one of the steerage passengers told me. There, there, baby,"—and the little woman began again to sing to the child, who was turning restlessly in her arms.

I will not say what made the doctor's eyes shine just then. I never saw a doctor cry, although I suppose they do sometimes, like other people. At any rate he turned his head away sharply, and didn't say anything for half a minute; then he told Sue he would see if the "hospital" was all ready, and would be back presently. In three minutes, he thought.

Those minutes seemed very long to Sue. Her arms ached, and her throat was tired with singing and talking. And the sick child, being dressed in clothes by no means clean or dainty at the beginning of the voyage, and still less now, was not so pleasant to hold as the babies Sue had loved to tend at home.

"But He took them in His arms," she thought wearily; "and Palestine babies were no nicer than steerage babies, I guess." Then came thoughts of what might happen next. Would she, too, be sick of that terrible disease? Would it be for a long time? Would she—die?

"There was no more sea," she went on, to herself, as the ship lurched heavily before the freshening breeze. "That's good to think of. Only there wont be any sunsets. Oh, if He would only come walking on the water, and make those great waves stop, and—and—put out His hand, and—cure—"

Sue felt a great lump in her throat. She heard the doctor's step on the stairs. Her head reeled with the long confinement and the foul air she had breathed. She laid the baby gently on the bed, and—the next face she saw was her mother's.

She was in a funny little stateroom, which had, beside the furnishings of her own room, a cosy shelf of books, a comfortable easy chair, and several small, but brilliant, prints on the wall. The red sunset light just struck through the window, and rested warmly on the pretty white coverlet.

She felt to weak and tired to talk—that is, by words. But dear me deaf and dumb people are not the only ones who talk with their fingers. Sue gave a little squeeze to her mother's hand, and I suppose it would take something like half a page for me to write out what she said by it. And her mother answered her another half page, in the same way. Only she did more. She said:

"The baby is better, Sue. She is comfortably put to bed in the little ship's hospital, and papa has found a good-natured Scotch girl to take care of her. The doctor says my little daughter's nursing, this afternoon, saved his life."

I would like to tell you about the last four days of the voyage. How the cabin passengers passed a vote of thanks to "Miss Sue Raymond, for her heroism and devotion," and sent them by the doctor. How the steerage passengers, who did not know how to express themselves in such fine language, were not content with one message, but waylaid the doctor everytime he showed his face among them, and sent their humble thanks and blessings to the little voluntary prisoner; how, last of all, a foremast hand among the sailors rolled clumsily up to Mr. Raymond one morning, and placed in his hand a neat oil painting of the "Samaria," upon which he had spent all his spare time, and not a few shillings and pence, during the last few months, with the hope of selling it by shares to the rich folks, on some voyage when there was a large crowd aboard.

"Please give it to the young miss, sir, he said," and tell her as how, if there's anything that'll make the boys decent when they're on shore, it'll be thinking of her."

Best of all, the baby did improve rapidly, and the doctor finally announced that the disease, although at first threatening the worst, among such a crowd, had taken one of its many milder forms, and that all danger was over.

Yes, Sue "had it," but very lightly, and her mother not at all. It only kept them in quiet rooms on the outskirts of Liverpool, for a week or ten days more than they had intended. Then they went on, and had their good time.

All this happened three or four years ago, and Sue now lives in Boston, but if you want to know anything more about her, you must inquire of the trustees of a certain children's hospital—or, better still, of the house surgeon.

Malarial Fever.

Malarial fevers, rheumatism, etc., result most frequently from inactivity of the liver and kidneys. You make a great mistake and do yourself great injustice unless you bestow upon these important organs of life most careful attention. It is wrong to persistently turn the liver upside down by the use of severe cathartic medicines, or to lash the kidneys into complete exhaustion by overdoses of violent diuretics. Strength can be given to liver and kidneys, new life and vigor infused into every part of the body, old age be made to feel youthful, and disease banished from the body by using the Queen of all health renewers, Dr. Guysott's Yellow Dock and Sarsarparilla. This wonderful compound is outselling all other remedies, It cantains Yellow Dock, Sarsarparilla, Juniper, Iron, Buchu, Celery, and Calisaya. Ask your physician concerning the merit of such a compound, then try one bottle. It will make your mind and body healthy and strong. It is more refreshing than wine and you will like it just as well. Ask your druggist to get it for you.

Chief Justice Appleton, of Maine, has completed his thirtieth year of active judicial service.

T. J. Thompson, of Maysville, Ky., writes: "About a year ago I had a severe attack of chills and fever. I have been quite an invalid since, suffering from sinking spells, nervous chills, night sweats, etc., My digestive and urinary organs were in a very weakened condition. I felt very weak, nervous and debilitated, and dyspepsia, painful urination, and rheumatism exhausted me of all vitality. My doctor seemed discouraged and consented to my trying Dr. Guysott's Yellow Dock and Sarsaparilla, a medicine my mother had once used with benefit. It has acted like a miracle in my case, and I now feel perfectly well.

THE BIG WIGS.

A Look at the Men Who Compose the Court of Last Resort.

H. J. Ramsdell in Philadelphia Press.

I dropped in on the supreme court a day or two ago. What a jolly old set! There was the chief justice, with iron-gray hair, thick and stiff, and whiskers just the same, a big nose and a big mouth, wrapped in a black silk gown, but looking very little like a chief justice. But he attends to his business, leaves politics to the dogs, and is respected by his associates. On his right, oldest in commission of any one on the bench, is Justice Miller, round and fat, and 64, a little bald, and closely-shaven face. On the bench he is as cross as a hatchet, for he hates circumlocution and shams (and half the bar is made of them); but off the bench he is as jolly, and kind, and gentle as any man you ever saw. He has been regarded for ten years the ablest man on the bench. The three last appointments on the bench may change this, but I doubt it.

On the chief justice's left is Justice Field, appointed as a republican, but now a pesky old democrat. He is tall, bald-headed, spectacled, full bearded, with a Jewish cast of countenance. Smart he is, too, as all the Fields are. He writes strong opinions and is popular. He is a most entertaining companion, and a great traveler and scholar. Drink? Yes, once in a while. Miller and Field, respectively, are the two oldest judges in commission on the bench. Justice Bradley is the next in point of rank—a thin, refined, closely-shaven, gray-haired, scholarly, judicial-looking old gentleman, who doesn't seem to have much to say to any one. Justice Harlan, fourth in rank (excepting, of course, the chief justice), is a specimen Kentuckian—a giant in his way. Big body, big head, big hands, big feet, long legs, long arms and long headed, without a doubt. He is at least six feet six inches in height. He rents a furnished house from a friend of mine, and my friend had to have made, especially for the great Kentuckian, a nine-foot bedstead, with matress, blankets, sheets, etc., to correspond, and also one for the son of the judge, who is as tall. Judge Harlan was a strong acquisition to the bench and off. Chew tobacco, did you say? Well, I should think so, and he knows a glass of Bourbon when he tastes it. There is not much known of Justice Wood. He is a grizzly, slouchy man, whose personal bearing and appearance are not at all stricking. He is a judge of appointment, but he doesn't look like one. Justice Stanley Matthews is built on a big model, physically and mentally. As an intellectual force he scarcely has a superior on the bench. He is quiet in his intercourse, and does not seem to care to extend his acquaintance. Justice Gray is a tall, white-haired, peppery old bachelor, who snaps up everybody and had rather quarrel than win a cause. When he first came on the bench here he was nearly killed with heavy eating and drinking, but that time is over. As the old judges are very tenacious of the rights of seniors, he is not likly to be popular. Judge Blatchford, the last appointment, looks like your own George W. Childs and is therefore, clean, genial, affable, well dressed and kindly natured—else looks do not count.

Chief Justice Waite lives in a handsome house on Rhode island avenue; Judge Miller owns a house on Massachusetts avenue. Judge Field has a large, well built house on Capitol hill—a president from his brother Cyrus—a portal prison. In this building Clay presided three terms as speaker of the house; in front of this James Monroe and John Quincy Adams were inaugurated president. John C. Calhoun died in it. Judge Bradley owns and occupies the house on I street which was given to Gen. Grant, and from which he was first inaugurated Gen. Sherman then became the owner, and from him Judge Bradley purchased it. Judge Harlan lives in a costly rented house; Judge Woods boards on G street; Judge Matthews is building a very imposing and costly mansion on Connecticut avenue opposite the British legation, Judge Gray boards at Wormley's; and Judge Blatchford has just purchased a $50,000 residence on K street. The mutations of time affect even the supreme court, for of the bench twenty years ago not a single judge remains—all dead. Only two judges of the bench of twelve years ago remain, namely, Miller and Field; all the others are dead, except Davis, now in the senate, and Swayne, retired.

WHAT SMOKERS SMOKE.

Not Tobacco alone, but Vanilla, Cedar Oil, Rum and All Sorts of Drugs.

From the Providence Journal.

Fifteen factories in New York employ chemists to "flavor" cigars. They can not do much with the wrapper, but they can "heighten and develop" the filling's. It is a relief to know that opium is not used, although it used to be formerly in England, but stringent laws broke the practice. The substances used to flavor tobacco are numerous. Every manufacturer has his own formula. Vanilla is the most common. This is employed in the form of an alcoholic tincture to flavor fillings. It is said that few cigars are free from vanilla. Its effects are not harmful if not used to excess. The tonka bean and balsam fir are used in the same way for the same purpose. Cedar oil is also introduced. The best imitator of the tobacco flavor is valerian. Valerian and vanilla are the most valuable chemicals now in use by tobacconists. By their use the poorest stems may be converted into fair tobacco. Into cigarettes enter not only valerian and vanilla, but cascarilla bark. To make cigars burn ammonia is used and they are soaked in saltpetre. The latter is injurious and makes young men old with dispatch. The object of its use is to cause the cigar to burn freely.

It has been noticed by some smokers that an intoxicating effect has been produced by dipping the fillings in a salution of sulphuric ether and bromide of potassium. When it is know that rum is used, with vanilla and valerian, it is nothing to wonder at that the cigars so treated produce intoxication. To make tobacco, or aid in its adulteration, such other things as potato leaves, sugar, potash, tamarinds, aniseed, gum and various oils not heretofore mentioned are used to a greater or lest extent. In New York alone 826,666,000 cigars are made annually, besides 229,800,000 cigarettes, and 25,000 persons are employed.

The Late Mr. Darwin's Habits.

The London Times gives the following account of Mr. Darwin's habits: "Rising always at the early hour of six to take his cold bath—into which he was accustomed to plunge both morning and evening—he breakfasted alone; and after his first morning walk was in his library as a rule at eight. At nine, when the post-boy arrived from Farnborough, he would spend a little time in the dining room opening letters and skimming the papers, and in the evening he would linger an hour or so in the society of his family, or of some of those friends distinguished in the world of science, who occasionally found their way to Downe-Court; but the greater part of his time was spent in his library, his gardens, and the outlaying parts of his little domain. When he extended his walks into the country round about, it was observed that he was rarely seen in the village or met on the roads, preferring, as he did, to take his way, generally southward, by the footpaths through the woods and meadows. Little children who have a quick instinct for a kind and gentle nature, would run to open a gate when they saw Mr. Darwin coming, encouraged thereto by a smile and kind word.

A Remarkable Experience.

Crete (Neb.) Saline county Union.

Mr. W. W. Tatro, proprietor of the creamery in Crete, gave the writer some details of a personal experience, which are of sufficient interest to warrant publication, Mr. Tatro said that some time since he fell and hurt his back. The hurt proved to be a serious one, and he very speedily became frightfully sore, and was soon in a terrible condition. He could not move his person an inch, and eventually, through sympathy, his whole person became sensitive and sore. The medical attention which he had, although first-class, seemed inadequate to give him relief.

At last he took his case in his own hands, and ordered the use of the Great German Remedy, St. Jacobs Oil. The result was nothing less than marvelous. With the first application Mr. Tatro said that he experienced relief. Two or three more applications of the "great soother and healer" greatly benefitted him, and two bottles entirely cured him. He says he considers his cure a very remarkable one, and knows that it was due entirely to the splendid power of St. Jacobs Oil. Since his restoration he has never been without the remedy in the house, and has seen happy effects from its application for other forms of pains. Mr. Tatro stated that his wife has been a great sufferer from neuralgia. Shortly after his own remarkable cure she was seized with this terrible malady and pretty soon her sufferings became terrible. He opened his bottle of St. Jacobs Oil and rubbed it on his wife's temples and forehead, and had the satisfaction of witnessing her complete relief in fifteen minutes. Mr. Tatro says he is convinced there is nothing equal to St. Jacobs Oil in the speedy relief and cure of pain. As the time is fast approaching when rheumatic and neuralgic pain will be prevalent, the above may direct our people who suffer to a remedy which may save them much suffering and expense.

How? By getting one bottle of BROWN' IRON BITTERS, and taking it regularly according to directions.

Mansfield, Ohio, Nov. 26, 1881.
Gentlemen:—I have suffered with pain in my side and back, and great soreness on my breast, with shooting pains all through my body, attended with great weakness, depression of spirits, and loss of appetite. I have taken several different medicines, and was treated by prominent physicians for my liver, kidneys, and spleen, but I got no relief. I thought I would try Brown's Iron Bitters; I have now taken one bottle and a half and am about well—pain in side and back all gone—soreness all out of my breast, and I have a good appetite, and am gaining in strength and flesh. It can justly be called the king of medicines.

THE Commissioner of Pension, reports that Carver County is credited with having seventy (70) Pensioners, drawing annually the sum of $14.238.

THE Belle Plaine HERALD has donned a new dress and now is one of the best local papers published in the valley.

CONGRESS has been having a "high old time" over the contested election cases; the republicans being able with the help of their Virginia Readjusters and the speaker, to so construe the "rules" as to prevent the democrats from filibustering and succeed in sealing all the contestants.

WE are in receipt of a note from the writer of the communication received from Waconia last week, relating to that "dog subject," in which he persists withholding his name and insists that it is our duty to publish his epistle. We do not wish to enter into an extended argument with our friend in this matter, and simply have to say that the HERALD aims to treat everybody alike and as Mr. Kaeder, manfully publishes what he has to say over his own signature we shall have to insist on the rule that we have laid down as a "guarantee of good faith."

WE have recieved the call for the Republican County convention, to meet at Waconia, July 12. It will appear next week.

Notice of Mortgage Sale.

Default has been made in the conditions of a certain mortgage executed and delivered by K. H. Henschen and Henrietta Henschen, his wife, mortgagors, to Ozro J. Hale, mortgagee, dated the 28th day of May A. D. eighteen hundred and seventy nine, and recorded as a mortgage in the office of the register of deeds in the county of Carver in the State of Minnesota on the 5th day of June A. D. 1879, at 10 o'clock a. m. in book "I" of mortgages, on pages 238, 239 and 240, given to secure the payment of seven hundred ($700) dollars, five (5) years from its date with interest thereon at the rate of 10 per cent per annum, payable annually on the first day of July in each year. Said mortgage stipulates that in case of nonpayment of principal, interest or taxes or any part thereof when due, the whole principal sum, with interest, should, at the option of said mortgagee his Leirs, executors, administrators or assigns then become due and payable in the same manner as if then and there payable by the express terms of said mortgage. Default has been made by the nonpayment of the interest which became due July 1st, 1881, amounting to $70.00. It is the option of said mortgagee that the said debt be due and payable. There is now due, therefore, upon said mortgage eight hundred thirty 20-100 ($830.20) dollars, and the further sum of $20.80, paid by the said mortgagee taxes upon the said mortgaged premises, for which he holds the receipts of the treasurer of said county. No action or proceeding has been instituted to recover said debt, or any part thereof.

Notice is hereby given that by virtue of a power of sale in said mortgage, and of the statute in such case made and provided, the said mortgage will be foreclosed by a sale of the mortgaged premises therein described, which sale will be made at the front door of the court house in the village of Chaska, in the county of Carver and State of Minnesota, at public auction by the sheriff of said county on Saturday, the 17th day of June A. D. eighteen hundred and eighty two at 10 o'clock in the forenoon to satisfy the amount which shall then be due on said mortgage, with the interest thereon and costs and expenses of sale, and fifty dollars attorney's fee as stipulated in said mortgage in case of foreclosure.

The premises described in said mortgage, and so to be sold, are the lot, piece or parcel of land situated in the county of Carver and State of Minnesota, and known and described as follows, to-wit:

The east half (E ½) of the southwest quarter (S W ¼) of Section thirty five (35) Township one hundred and fifteen (115) north, of Range twenty-five (25) west, containing eighty acres more or less, according to the Government survey thereof.

OZRO J. HALE, Mortgagee.

E. J. HODGSON, Attorney of Mortgagee.

Dated April 27, 1882.

Notice of Mortgage Foreclosure and Sale.

Default having been made in the conditions of a certain mortgage, made and executed by John Frank and Anna Lena Frank, his wife, mortgagors unto H. A Oberg, mortgagee, and dated the seventh day of January A. D. 1874, and filed for record on the 22d day of January A. D. 1874, at 1 o'clock P. M. and duly recorded in book "H" of mortgages on page 166 in the office of the register of deeds in and for the County of Carver and State of Minnesota, and said mortgage having been on the 10th day of November A. D. 1876 duly assigned unto Peter Oberg of Watertown, Carver county, by an instrument in writing, duly signed and executed, and on the 11th day of November A. D. 1876, at 2 o'clock p. m. was duly recorded in the office of the register of deeds of said county of Carver on page 166 of Book H of mortgages, and was again thereafter and by instrument in writing duly assigned by the said Peter Oberg unto Albert A. Frank. The premises therein mortgaged being described as follows:

The northeast quarter (¼) of section No. twenty-nine (29) in township No. one hundred and seventeen (117) of range No. twenty-five (25) in the county of Carver and State of Minnesota, and there being due on said mortgage and the note secured thereby the sum of eight hundred dollars. ($800)

Now therefore by virtue of a power of sale in said mortgage contained and therewith recorded, Notice is hereby given that said mortgage will be foreclosed and the premises therein described, or so much thereof as shall be necessary will be sold by the sheriff of the said county of Carver at the front door of the court house in the village of Chaska in said county, on the 17th day of June A. D. 1882 at 1 o'clock in the afternoon of said day, to satisfy the amount that shall then be due on said mortgage, with interest and costs of foreclosure and sale.

Dated this 27th day of April A. D. 1882.

We wish Mary Lindner had a big brother with a pair of fists the size of Westphalia hams. Wouldnt we smile at the ruins. We have been blamed for writing that. We are not that kind of a huckleberry.

Dont put any more such items at the end of Waconia items.

Mr. Henry Luken gave a grand ball on Whitmonday. The affair was an enjoyable one. Do so more times, Henry.

We notice the presence of Miss. Alice Elizabeth Demmon. We also see that the faculty have dubbed her a Batchelor of Science. The faculty must be darned fools if they have not found out before this that she belongs to the femenine gender.

The dog law is to be enforced in Waconia, by order of the supervisors.

The town clerk has posted notices, with the names of purps whose masters have paid license. We notice that with two exceptions the dogs are all males, we used to suppose there were one or two females in the bunch, but it seems we are mistaken. However now that we discovered our error, we are glad, of it, as according to the natural order of things, the species will soon die out.

The sidewalk mania has broken out afresh and main street will be the most beautiful street in the country.

The work of grading goes on under supervision of Mr. John Radde. Elm Street is being filled up—to keep their mouths shut, we suppose.

CHASKA, - - MINNESOTA

A sextuplex telegraphic machine has been recently invented that allows six messages to be sent simultaneously (three each way) over a single wire. The quadruplex and duplex have been in use for some years, and are now about as common in the larger telegraph offices as the old Morse instruments.

Vennor predicts frosts on the 7th, 8th, 5th and 26th of June; paste in your hat and test; and assigns us a very cold and stormy autumn with an early setting in of a severe winter, with heavy snowfalls reaching to remote points south, the latter half of the winter breaking into open mildness with an advanced spring.

The New York Herald, now the most profitable paper in America if not in the world, was started by James Gordon Bennett in 1835, as a mere venture, and its entire capital did not exceed $300, the savings of his meagre pay as a reporter on another paper. He knew, however, how to make a paper sell, and this faculty insured success.

It is stated as a remarkable fact that the people of Geneva, Switzerland, spend more money for wine than for bread. This is not so remarkable after all, if we substitute for wine drank at Geneva, the beer, wine, whiskey, etc., consumed in other places. Bread alone is not very costly, and is a small item in the expenses of living. There is scarcely a city in the United States where the cost of liquors consumed is not larger than the cost of bread.

First-class passenger rates in France amount to 1 cent per mile. This seems small enough, but for all that the railroad companies, as a general thing, have declared dividends of 13 per cent. annually for years. Do business here on bedrock basis, as they do in Europe, and passengers can be carried as cheaply over the main lines of this country as anywhere in the world. The trouble here is that in most cases, watered stock, palace car companies, fast freight lines, construction companies, composed of a favored few, who manage the corporations, and their outside associates and other wheels within wheels carry off the profits, and freight and passages are consequently higher than in almost any other country.

Thousands of Americans are going to Europe this season. Some go every year, as an habitual recreation, and as a matter of course. To spend the summer vacation in Europe has become with these as simple an undertaking, and as much an affair of custom, as to go to the Adirondacks, or Newport, the White Mountains or the great midland lakes, and they go on board the steamers sailing from New York on Saturday, with very little more thought or preparation than would be given to a trip of a few hundreds miles in any direction from home. The expense of a European trip, at least so far as the passage to and from is concerned, has been diminished in a marked degree. A first-class passage both ways, by return ticket, may be now had on a first-rate steamer for one hundred and fifty dollars. A liberal calculation shows that one may spend three months on a European trip, see many of the most notable places in the old world, live in good (though not fashionable) hotels,) and travel second-class for about four hundred dollars. A young man by exercising strict economy may do it for about hree hundred dollars.

The star-route thieves begin at last to realize that neither their position nor their money, stolen from the government, can save them trial. They fully expected that by a free use of the money they had stolen from the government they could bribe the press, corrupt public opinion, purchase judges and jurors, and baffle all attempts to bring them to justice. But they made a mistake in their low estimate of public morality. The scurrility of their Washington organs created nothing but disgust, and the entire press of the country outside of Washington joined in denunciation of the rascally crowd and their methods. With the exception of the characterless organs of the ring in Washington, not a paper in the land has raised a voice in their behalf. At the same time, the fact begins to penetrate their thick hides that their money will not buy Washington judges and juries, if it will Washington newspaper. Attorney General Brewster said the other day: "I wish to notify the defense that it "is my intention to be present, whenever my duties will allow, when these cases come up." It would have been more satisfactory if he had omitted the reservation, for he has no duty which, in the public estimation, is of greater importance than that of forcing the trial of these thieves.

The manufacturing regions of the county, and some other localities are greatly disturbed by strikes of mechanics and laborers, produced by the present excessive cost of living, more than from any other cause. It is literally impossible in many cases for workmen to live decently. Whether strikes will tend to remedy the difficulty or otherwise, there may be reasonable doubts. As coal men and iron men and many other classes combine to raise the cost of products, workmen may be accorded the same right to increase the remuneration for labor; but it must be admitted that the recollection of the bloody riots at Pittsburg several years ago places them at a great disadvantage before the public. A great many people whose sympathies are always with combined capital as against flesh and blood, and a still larger number who do not take the trouble to think for themselves, always think such efforts to obtain living wages almost as bad as conspiracy and rebellion against the powers that be. The cry of "communism" is raised and the poor workman comes to be regarded as a disturber of the peace and an enemy of society, for whom Cattling guns and grape and cannister, are the only responses to be given when he asks an increase of wages. "Put yourself in his place" and humanity would be the gainer. The idea of strikes is somewhat repulsive, but if it were not for strikes and the fear of strikes, there would be no limit to the cruel rapacity of aggregated capital. An isolated individual striker can be crushed in a moment. Large numbers united as a single body, cannot be so easily dealt with.

Dead Mason Refused Rites.

Father Roverdy, vicar general to the bishop of Colorado, refused to allow the rites of the Catholic church administered over the remains of the late Don Miguel Oterea, a millionaire and one of the foremost men in New Mexico. The reason alleged was that Otereo died a Mason. A member of the Masonic order, assisted by an Episcopal clergymen, conducted the services.

NEWS OF THE DAY.

News from Washington.

Representative Hazleton of Wisconsin has introduced in the house a bill to establish a commission of three, before which all private land claims against the government are to be adjudicated and sent to the general land commissioner for final action. The surveyor general is now vested by law with that power in addition to his other duties, but his time is so taken up that he has not within several years examined and reported upon more than 100 cases. It is estimated at the interior department that at the present rate of progress it would take 300 years to settle all the private land cases known to be in dispute, and hence the necessity for some tribunal before which cases can be disposed of. Officials in the general land office are busy preparing a list of cases now on hand and estimates of the probable number likely to be presented. New Mexico, where nearly all land is in dispute, furnishes more than three-fourths of the cases presented to the department for settlement, and are generally most intricate and vexatious claims to settle. The department officials are heartily in favor of some such commission as is suggested in this bill, and when the matter comes before congress much light will be shed upon the subject by the statistics now in the course of preparation.

Judge Gray of the United States supreme court sat on Guiteau's counsel, refusing to grant a writ of habeas corpus.

In the Florida contested election case, Witherspoon vs. Davidson, the committee will declare Davidson, (democrat), the sitting member, is entitled to the seat.

Judge Wylie went upon the record in the district court in Washington Thursday, with the declaration that he would bring the star route cases to a close by July 1, if he had to sit up nights and hold courts on Saturdays to accomplish it.

Corkhill prances into print to deny the truth of the statement that Van Hise, the New Jersey Calcroft, has been appointed to the pleasant duty of working off Guiteau. Warden Crocker will superintend the job and an unknown man will cut the rope.

The architect of the treasury reports to headquarters that nothing can be done in the way of working on the new Minneapolis postoffice this year, on account of the insufficiency of the appropriation; that the cost of securing a site will be greater than was expected.

The report that ex-Senator Paddock of Nebraska is to be commissioner of Indian affairs seems to rest chiefly upon the fact that Commissioner Price is growing weary of his hard work and heavy responsibilities, and upon the further fact that ex-Senator Paddock is here.

Mr. Le Barnes, a clerk in the general land office, has reduced to Methodical form the vague theory of that office that several western railroads have been patening more land than they are entitled to, and Mr. Strait has offered a resolution for a committee of inquiry into the truth of his assertions.

Senator Ferry to-day reported favorably from the committee on postoffices and post roads a bill introduced by him some time since which provides that the postmaster general may furnish to the public a postal card with a flexible flap or cover, adapted to conceal the message, at a cost of one cent, including postage. The adoption of these cards, it is thought, will increase rather than diminish the postal revenues, and undoubtedly prove a great convenience to the public, especially to bankers, insurance and other mercantile companies.

News of the Railroads.

The Grand Trunk stations at Quebec were burned. Benoit's hotel, adjoining the station, were gutted. Loss variously estimated from $100,000 to $400,000, according to the value of the freight in the shed. Nothing can be obtained about the insurance, as that was arranged in Montreal.

Record of Fires and Casualties.

The town of Eyres, in Sumpter county, Ala., was almost totally destroyed by fire last Saturday night. The particulars, so far as can be obtained, are as follows: In the afternoon a crowd of drunken negroes became very boisterous in the streets, insulting the citizens and threatning violence. The white men banded together and drove the turbulent crowd out of town. After nightfall the negroes returned and set fire to the place. They were arrested.

Thomas A. Ducharme, well known boat builder at Port Huron, Mich., was accidently drowned by the capsizing of a small boat on the river at Sarnia yesterday morning. Ducharme's sail and row boats found a market from Buffalo to Duluth. He was considered authority on the art of building small crafts.

Several families in St. Paul were poisoned last week from eating pork bologna sausages. Several persons were in a critical condition. The dealer from whom the sausages were procured does not know that anything deleterious was in the meat.

At Putnam, Conn., May 31, the Bugbee block burned and the adjoining buildings were badly damaged. Loss, $60,000 partly insured.

The Seymour Chair company's factory in West Troy, N. Y., is burned. Loss, $76,000; insurance, $49,000.

The union depot at Atchinson, Kas., was damaged by fire to the extent of $11,000.

Crimes and Criminals.

George S. Stickles of Madison, Wis., who has for the past two years been using the mails to defraud the public by advertising and selling cheap teas and numerous household gimcracks under a promise of $5 a day and expenses, pleaded guilty in the United States court and was fined $75. Since he was arrested last winter and went out on bail he has received over 2,000 letters with money and money orders—all of which he turned over to the authorities as received to be returned to the writers. This was the cause of his light sentence.

While F. Eastman, a Massachusetts farmer, was on a spree his little daughter, secured his whisky bottle and gold ring. The father threatened to kill the child and she begged piteously for her life, saying "Pa, don't kill me now, I am drunk; wait till I get sober." The infuriated parent dragged the child out of bed and beat her to death.

At Chicago, A. M. Hobbs, a speculator, committed suicide by taking morphine. The deceased leaves a wife and family at Waupaca, Wis. Business troubles are supposed to have been the incentive to suicide.

The safe in William Hanrali's store, North Branch, Lapeer county, Mich., was drilled open and $1,500 taken. No clue to the thieves.

In Nevada township Andrew Peterson hung himself last Saturday night, being melancholy on account of selling his homestead.

Miscellaneous News Notes.

Orders have been issued by Gen. Terry detailing one of the troops of the Seventh cavalry, now at Fort Sisseton, D. T., for an expedition to the big bend of the Sheyenne river—to scour the country and look after the Indians who have been reported in that vicinty. There has been some complaint made to the authorities, and while no overaction on the part of the Indians against any person is alleged, yet their presence has caused considerable apprehension among the settlers, which might possibly result in a veritable scare or panic. To allay this apprehension, and prevent any act of violence on the part of either the settlers or the Indians, as well as to secure the return of the latter to their reservation, it has been deemed best to dispatch troops to that section, and Troop C. Seventh U. S. cavalry, Capt Henry Jackson commanding, has been selected for the purpose.

The tomb of Washington was beautifully decorated on the 30th ult. under the supervision of the regents of the Mount Vernon association. President Arthur sent an elaborate gift of cut flowers. The Garfield memorial tablet in the ladies' waiting room of the Baltimore & Potomac railroad depot, Washington, marking the place where the president was shot, was thoroughly decorated by Mrs. White, the lady in charge.

The somewhat curious fact is being commented upon that the state of Massachusetts has never elected as governor a man who served in the union army and navy during the war of the rebellion.

The international monetary conference has been again postponed till April 1883.

Local committees are in receipt of information showing that there will be more than 1,000 physicians in attendance on the sessions of the American Medical associations at St. Paul on the 6th of June.

A story has leaked out at St. Louis that involves Rev. Father Gleason of the church of the Holy Name in a scandal which has caused his suspension by Archbishop Kenrick, after investigation by an ecclesiastical court.

At Grand Rapids, Mich., Fred Straight alias Patrick Murphy, a young man wh had become infatuated with a pretty waiter girl at a cheap resturant, died from the effects of a dose of morphine in jail where he had been sent on a charge of threatening to kill her.

An investigation of the rate of wages of farm labor, made by the statistician of the department of agriculture, shows an increase of 24 per cent. since 1879 in eastern states. From 1875 to 1879 the decline was heavy in manufacturing sections, where artisans being thrown out of employment tended to depress the rate of farm wages. The advance since 1879 has been 14 per cent. in the western states and 13 in the southern states.

Abraham S. Cannon, son of the polygamist who was fired out of congress, has just arrived in this country from Europe with a cargo of Mormon converts. Cannon had considerable trouble in Germany. Personal and Impersonal.

Danenhower, accompanied by his father and Tang Sing, his Chinese steward, paid an official visit to the navy department Friday morning to report his return and to present a detailed account of his expenditures. He also brought the log book of the Jeannettes Capt. De Long's broken rifle, another gun belonging to his party, supposed to belong to Collins, and certain other articles found in caches by Melville in his search for De Long.

A large number of influential republicans in every county in Maine, aggregating several thousand in all, unite in addressing to Blaine an invitation dated May 23, to allow his name to be used as a candidate for congress, to which Mr. Blaine has written a positive declination, on account of the pressure of private business.

Irving, the celebrated English actor, will come to this country next year, and appear in Hamlet, Charles I., The Bells, Louis XI., and the Lyons Mail. Mr. Irving sails on the 2nd of August, in the Britannic, for a brief run to Saratoga and Newport, for which Mr. W. H. Vanderbilt is to take him in charge.

Friends of Mr. Farwell of Illinois, who are in his confidence, admit that his candidacy for the senatorship is not at all probable. They say that he has acquired a fortune of $10,000,000 and as he is a shrewd politician he will be a most formidable candidate.

The libel suit of United States Senator McPherson against the New York Herald resulted in a verdict for plaintiff coupled with a recommendation for mercy. Judge Biddle imposed a fine of $1,000 which was immediately paid.

Gen. Sheridan denies the story published to the effect that he left a fishing party and returned to Chicago because he heard that Gen. Sherman intended to resign the command of the army, leaving it to devolve on him.

Hermann Julius Theodore Hettner, professor of the university of Jena, and writer on art and literature, is dead.

From Foreign Lands.

Smalley's London Special: Sundry Irish members devoted the holidays to incendiary speeches in Ireland, where there is no longer danger of arrest. Responding to the American appeal for harmony they profess to have confidence in Mr. Parnell, but they disown every moderate counsel lately given by Mr. Parnell in parliament. It is doubtful whether Mr. Parnell is able, as he is desirous to prevent prolonged obstruction to the prevention of crime bill, to which fresh Irish amendments are daily proposed. Mr. Davy's attempt to exclude treason from the crimes triable without a jury, represents purely a professional repugnance to innovation and reverence for legal precedents. The minority supporting him consisted largely of English radicals.

In the house of commons during a discussion of the first clause of the repression bill, several Irish members expressed a wish that special commission courts be precluded from trying prisoners for treason in consequence of words spoken or written in a foreign country. Harcourt, home secretary, insists that British subjects who, in America or elsewhere, counselled an invasion of England or committed treasonable acts ought, on coming within the jurisdiction of England, be made amenable for such counsels or acts. The first clause was then passed in committee, 220 to 39. Parnell in the discussion denied that the Irish people sympathized with crime.

Sexton, member of parliament for Sligo, addressing his constituents, referred to the alien clauses of the repression bill, and expressed doubt whether the relations of England and the United States are so friendly and that it is advisable for the former to try to embitter them still further.

A romantic marriage is reported from San Antonio Texas. Lieut. Hewitt of the Twenty-second infantry, was married on his death bed to Miss Katherine, daughter of Blanton Duncan, of Kentucky, who is expected to survive but a few weeks.

The emperor invited Bismark to act sponsor for his great-grandson, the infant son of Prince William of Prussia.

Jacob Weil, the alleged New York forger, will be taken from Cork to London for extradition.

The Malley Trial.

In the Malley trial at New Haven, on Saturday when the jurors were called there was no response to the third name—Daniel Lovejoy of New Haven. Counsel said:

Mr. Lovejoy does not answer to his name. He has been taken ill since the last session of the court. I do not know exactly what his condition is, but I understand that there is no reasonable prospect that he will be able to be out for the present, but that there is no danger that he will not recover. In view of all the circumstances, and consulting with the other side, I would suggest that the court adjourn for one week from next Tuesday.

The court thereupon adjourned to Tuesday, the 13th inst.

John Bright and Chamberlain, presiden of the board of trade, were present at the pening of the Birmingham Centeal library. The former in a speech dwelt particularly upon the growth of literature in America. He recomended the study of American poets, especially Whittier, the best gifts of whose genius were on the side of freedom. He also recommended the study of Bancroft's history of the United States as conveying a knowledge of some of the most important events of the last century, and showing how the colonies grew to what will be the greatest nation on the face of the globe.

An Enoch Arden case, with variations, is reported from New York. Charles Cook of Dubuque deserted his wife fifteen years since in New York, went west leaving a procession of creditors in the east to mourn his departure together with a deserted wife. Recently he returned and paid his old bills but found his wife remarried to a Mr. Williamson whom she would not desert for her first love and nothing more was heard of him until his wardrobe was found Sunday on the bank of the North river and the suspicion was aroused that he had drowned himself and punctured the history of his strange life with an abrupt period.

GREAT LAND MONOPOLY.

The Canadian Railway to Sell $15,000,000 of Bonds, and Accept the Same for Land at $110.

The largest land purchase, perhaps, ever made, with the possible exception of Alaska from the Russian government by the United States, has been consummated by a distinguished party of American and foreign capitalits. The scheme in itself is of grand and enormous proportions, involving, perhaps, 12,000,000 acres of land and $15,000,000 in money.

The gentlemen connected with the scheme are the duke of Manchester, George Stephens, president, and R. B. Angus, vice president of the Canadian Pacific railway, Robert Tenant member of parliament from Leeds, England, Stephen Angus, Lord Elphinstone and Mr. Todd of W. F. Kennedy & Co. representing the Scotch interest, and W. F. Kennedy representing the New York capitalists, and W. B. Scarth and Mr. Oster representing Toronto. These gentlemen organized the land corporation of Canada. The duke of Manchester was elected president, and Robert Tenant vice president. The Canadian Pacific railway received a land grant from the Dominion government of 25,000,000, acres have been sold. The company, up to date, have issued about $9,000,000 bonds in their land grant bonds which are said to be held by syndicates in Paris, New York and Montreal, the bank of Montreal holding, it was stated, a goodly block. The land company of Canada is a consolidation of all the smaller land companies in Great Britain and Canada which have colonization in Canada as their great objective scheme. The corporation agrees to perchase one-half the land, along the Canadian Pacific, which is left of its grant, including, of course, half of the town sites. These lands lie in northwestern Canada clear up to the line of British Columbia, including in the neighborhood of 11,000,000 acres. The Canadian Pacific bonds issued amount to $9,000,000. The land company will take these up at par and will recieve 5 per cent. interest upon them as they are held by them. The land company will pay for these lands in the hands of the Canadian Pacific, which will thus cancel them. The land company will take all together $15,000,000 of the bonds at par. When the land is taken with them the railway company will receive them at the rate of 110, thus assuring large profits in the enterprise.

The company, It is said will employ its surplus capital in loaning money to settlers, and building houses for them and facilitating the rapid development and improvement of the country.

Postmasters appointed—Gregg, Johnson county, H. K. Simonson; Havre, Washington county, Frank Trebelcock; Larchwood, Lyon county, Mrs. Hannah Frucius; Oakland, Pottawattamie county, L. B. Robinson; Victor, Iowa county, Joseph M. Buchanan.

How They Build in New York.

New York Special: Mr. D. O. Mills, who came here a decillionaire, took his place at once among the magnates of Wall street. He has strengthed his position by putting up the best building in the metropolis, dipping successfully into stocks, and acquiring Whitelaw Reid's new baby for a grandson. I walked through the Mills building the other day, to find the new office of the Northern Pacific. The building presents two and three-fourths acres of floor room. It has 333 offices. It has six lively elevators to convey passengers to its ten stories. The first floor is twenty-one feet between joints; the eighth is twelve and one half feet. The total cost of the ground and building was about $3,000,000, and the offices rent at from $800 a year to $3,000 each—an aggregate of something like $400,000. Of all the buildings that have last year gone up in the vicinity of lower Broadway this last year, not one, I believe, is less than seven stories high, and most of them are ten or eleven. Another feature quit as conspicuous as their tremendous height is that all of them are built of brick and even faced with it—being pointed and decorated, generally, with a grey sandstone.

A Lucky Postmaster.

The St. Peter, Minnesota, Tribune says that Mr. John Weger, postmaster at Kasota, Minnesota, has drawn the $30,000 prise in the drawing of May 9, last, of the Louisiana State Lottery at New Orleans. The money has been paid in full, without discount, and thus a man of old age and humble circumstances has come into a competence for his declining years. Mr. Weger was born in Norway in 1822. He removed from that country to New York in 1850, whence he came to Minnesota in 1861, enlisted in the army of the union, served out his term, and has ever since the war resided at Kasota. Last winter he invested $1.00 in the Louisiana lottery, but drew nothing. In the last drawing he invested $2.00, so that on an investment of $3.00 he has made $30,000, and is made comfortable for the remainder of his life.

Chippewas and the Reservoirs.

Secretary Teller said the other day to the Minnesota delegation that from all the information he could obtain from the war department and outside parties there was no substantial dissatisfaction among the Indians except what had been occasioned by meddlesome whites and half breeds. He feels sure that whenever they receive the amount of award which was made by the commission, they are reasonably well satisfied. The award, as he understands it, was very liberal, and gave them really more than they were entitled to on account of any damage likely to be done to their country. Still he does not propose to take any steps whatever in the matter until he shall receive a report from the inspector, who is probably already on the ground.

Death of Gen. Garibaldi.

Gen. Guiseppe Garibaldi, the liberator of Italy, died at Laprera, on Friday, in the presence of all the members of his family. Guiseppe Garibaldi was born in Nice, July 4, 1807, and was educated for his father's profession, that of a mariner. On his second voyage to Rome the condition of that city deeply impressed him, and led him into those revolutionary views which governed his subsequent life. His numerous campaigns and battles, and thrilling adventures by flood and field, in South America and Europe, could scarcely be related in less space than a volume. He will be long remembered as a heroic figure of this age.

A New Railroad.

A meeting has been held and articles of incorporation drawn up for the St. Paul, Minneapolis & Sea Coast railway, the name decided on for a new road. The officers chosen are Hon. Alexander Ramsey, St. Paul, president; Judge Thayer, Clinton, Ia., vice-president; Gen. H. H. Sibley, St. Paul, treasurer, and Capt. Judson N. Cross, Minneapolis, secretary and attorney—the capital stock is fixed at $3,000,000. Gov. Ramsey states that a preliminary survey has been made and the road would cross the Iowa line in Mower county at a point 105 miles from St. Paul. Thence to Clinton the distance is 185 miles, so that the total length to the Mississippi, if the present survey is followed, will be 290 miles. At Clinton connection will be secured with the three great corporations, the Milwaukee & St. Paul, Chicago & Northwestern and Chicago, Burlington & Quincy, all of which center there.

CONGRESSIONAL.

TUESDAY, MAY 30.

SENATE.—Not in session.

HOUSE.—Springer objected to the minutes of the previous day because they contained no reference to the appeal made by him from the speaker's decision. Mr. Knott made a constitutional argument on the same point.

The speaker admitted the accuracy of the general proposition stated by Mr. Knott, but repeated that the journal clerk had acted strictly in obedience to the rules. After thorough remarks from Burrow, Kelley and Randall a motion to correct the journal was rejected—yeas 89, nays 134.

After further debate the minutes were approved. Mr. Miller (Pa.) then opened the debate on the contested election case of Dibble vs. O'Connor, being followed alternately by members of either side. Mr. Calkins gave notice that the previous question would be ordered Wednesday afternoon, and the house adjourned.

WEDNESDAY MAY 31.

SENATE.—Mr. Logan introduced a bill to allow the widow of the late minister to Peru (Hurlburt) an amount equal to his salary for one year. Referred.

Mr. Cameron of Pennsylvania succeeded in ordering an executive session for the consideration of the nomination of Jackson for collector of the twenty-third district and Whitney to be postmaster.

In the face of the persistant efforts of Senator Logan of the committee on military affairs to procure from his committee an adverse report on the bill restoring Fitz John Porter to the rank in the regular army he held prior to his dismissal, the committee voted five to one in favor of making a report on said bill recomending its passage. It is said that Senator Cameron, who was absent at the taking of the vote, would have voted for the report, and Senator Hawley and Senator Harrison, who were also absent, would have voted with Senator Logan. Subsequently to the taking of the vote in committee Senator Sewall presented to the senate a majority report and Senator Logan a minority report of great length, covering the entire ground upon which he bases his opposition to the restoration of Porter to his former rank in the army.

The Chinese indemnity bill was discussed at length.

HOUSE.—The dispute in the house growing out of the Mackey-Dibble contested election, was finally settled this evening by a vote of 150 ayes against 3 nays in favor of seating Mackey, and the latter was brought forward and sworn in. This result was not accomplished without a lingering debate which lasted fully eight hours, being opened in the morning by Mr. Atherton of Ohio and closed by the chairman of the election committee, Mr. Calkins, about 7 o'clock at night.

A moment before the closing of the Mackey-Dibble case, Mr. McLean went up to the speaker's desk and asked the speaker to recognize him to raise a question of privilege. He stated that it related to the parliamentary proceedings of Monday and that it did not affect the speaker personally. The speaker said he would recognize him for that purpose. Immediately after the reading of the resolution Mr. Reed of Maine arose and moved to lay them on the table, and amid their unavailing protests the speaker put the motion to lay on the table. The vote was taken by ayes and nays, and resulted—149 to 88. Ranney, from the committee on elections, then called up the Florida contested election case of Brisbee against Finley, and the question of consideration being raised by Randall, voted to consider it. Yeas 149 nays 2, (Phelps and Hardenbergh), and then this case being fairly launched, the house at 8:30 adjourned.

THURSDAY, JUNE 1.

SENATE.—The bill providing for bridging the Sault Ste. Marie between Superior and Huron for Canadian Pacific connection passed, as did the bill to reimburse the Creek orphan fund. Logan called up the committee amendment to the army appropriation bill providing for the compulsory retirement of officers who have served forty years discretionary with themselves, but obligatory to those of sixty-two years of age. Bayard opposed it vigorously, which precipitated a heated controversy, participated in by Logan, Bayard, Cameron, Butler and Hawley, and John Sherman who said that Gen. Sherman had purposely refrained from expressing any opinion or inclination in the matter further than that he desired no discussion made in his behalf.

Mr. Cameron protested against any implication that the head of the army would consent to assume the attitude of a beggar from the government in that the matter of pay, so far as it related to him, had ever been alluded to by that gentleman. He asserted that Logan knew Sherman to be as fit a man as there was in the service to-day to be at the head of the army.

Dutier gave notice that he would move that Sherman, Sheridan, Hancock and Howard be excepted, and Hawley held that the list would not be complete without Terry. Finally, the whole matter went over for the day.

HOUSE.—The Florida contested election case was considered, and after discussion the report of the committee declaring Finley, republican, entitled to the seat of Bisbee, democrat, was adopted, most of the democrats refusing to vote. Mr Finley was sworn in.

FRIDAY, JUNE 2.

SENATE.—An ancient colored man dying in Baltimore sent urgent word to his old patron, now the president pro tem. of the United States senate. The president pro tem., moved by compassionate regard, left for Baltimore at once to cheer the dying hours of his old servant. At the moment of departure he penned a note to Senator Ingalls of Kansas, held by competent judgment to be the best presiding officer in the senate, asking him to act in his absence. The question came up whether the officer could be thus delegated, and Senator Sherman, seeing that this unprofitable performance might stretch out to the crack of doom; very sensibly moved an adjournment to Monday, when President pro tem. Davis would be on hand again.

HOUSE.—The consideration of the Alabama contest of Lowe vs. Wheeler was resumed, and occupied most of the day. Mr. Horr of Michigan made a funny speech and kept the house in good humor. The previous question will be ordered early Saturday and the case decided. Mr. Cannon reported from the committee on appropriations the legislative, judicial and executive bills, and Mr. Hiscox, from the same committee, reported back the general deficency bill. Both reports were referred to committee of the whole, and the house adjourned.

SATURDAY, JUNE 3.

SENATE.—Not in session.

HOUSE.—The Lowe-Wheeler contested election case came up as regular business, and the resolution declaring Mr. Lowe entitled to the seat occupied by Mr. Wheeler was adopted—yeas 149, nays 3—and Mr. Lowe was sworn in. The senate joint resolution for printing Hon. James G. Blaine's memorial address on the life and character of the late President Garfield was passed and the house adjourned. The disposition of the Lowe-Wheeler case to-day exhausts the calendar of contested election cases. Several others, however, will be ready to report to the house soon. Among them are the Smalls-Tillman case from South Carolina, the Smith-Shelley case from Alabama and the Buchanan-Manning case from Mississippi. The contestants in the cases are all republican, and, in the opinion of certain members of the election committee, have all good cases. It is the purpose of the republicans to try to seat them before the expiration of the present session.

MONDAY, JUNE 5.

SENATE.—The vice-president pro tem. of the senate was in his accustomed seat, wearing a button-hole boquet, and apparently livelier for the few days of vacation. When the journal had been read he submitted an apology for designating a successor last Thursday and as he appeared really contrite it was decided to let the committee on rules settle the matter, that committee being instructed to examine and report upon the question of the power of the president pro tem. to appoint a senator to perform the duties of the chair during his absence. Mr. Beck offered a resolution authorizing the proper committee to report necessary appropriation bills to provide for the support of the government, the house having neglected to pass these important measures. The army bill was discussed and an amendment fixing the age of officers subject to compulsory retirement at sixty-four instead of sixty-two years, as in the bill, was adopted. Resolutions were introduced inquiring into the alleged levying of political assessments upon government employes. Mr. McMillan introduced a bill for an agreement with the Sioux of Dakota for the cession of a part of the great Sioux reservation.

HOUSE.—A tilt occurred between Mr. White of Kentucky and Mr. Kelley regarding the bonded period bill, the former charging the latter with having made a bargain with the liquor men, which the latter denied. A motion by Mr. Kelley to suspend the rules and passing a bill suspending an error in the revised statutes relating to the duty on wearing apparel, failed for want of the necessary two-thirds in the affirmative. Mr. Henderson moved to make the Hennepin canal bill a special order for June 15. Lost—127 to 69. An analysis of the vote shows that the states of Connecticut, Deleware, Iowa, Louisiana, Maryland, Michigan, Minnesota, New Hampshire, Nebraska, Oregon and Vermont were solidly for the canal; all of the delegates from Illinois, Kansas and West Virginia lacked a single vote of being solid, and Wisconsin and Indiana lacked two.

A bill was introduced by Mr. Washburn authorizing the construction of a dam across the Mississippi opposite St. Cloud. The bill provides that the dam shall be provided with suitable log-ways or chute for the passage of logs and rafts of logs and lumber.

Mr. Strait offered a joint resolution authorizing the secretary of war to turn over to the governor of Minnesota such tents, poles, pins and camp equipments as he may require for the use of the militia and volunteer organizations of the state at their summer and fall encampments.

Mr. Humphreys of Wisconsin introduced a bill in the house providing for the erection of a public building at La Crosse.

AN OHIO SENSATION.

The Pond Liquor Law Pronounced Unconstitutional by the Supreme Court.

The supreme court of Ohio pronounced the Pond Liquor Law—which is the principal issue of the forthcoming election—unconstitutional, for the reason that it was in affect no license. The law has been complied with by some. Those that paid tax to county treasurers may possibly recover, but that paid into the state treasury cannot possibly be gotten out except by special act of the legislature, and about $1,000 has been paid in. The law went into effect May 1, but till June 1 was given the first year for compliance. The decision has created quite a stir among politicians. The substance of the decision is as follows:

First—The constitutionality of a statute depends upon its operation and effect and not upon the form it may be made to assume.

Second—A license is permission, granted by sure and competent authority to an act which, without such permission would be illegal.

Third—The act of April 5, 1882, entitled "An act to more effectually provide against the evils resulting from the traffic in intoxicating liquors," (1879, Ohio laws, 66) which requires every person engaged or engaging in such traffic to pay a specified sum of money annually and execute a bond as those required, and also provided that "every person who shall engage or continue in such traffic without having executed the bond, or after his bonds shall have been adjudged forfeited, shall be deemed guilty of misdemeanor," is in its opinion and effect a license within the inhibition of the section of the constitution which provides that "no license in intoxicating liquors shall hereafter be granted in this state."

Regarding Minnesota Indians and Their Reservation.

It is understood that the Indian affairs committee of the house in the course of a few days will take final action upon Mr. Washburn's bill for the consolidation of the various reservations in Minnesota and the removal of the Indians to the White Earth reservation. The Indian department has made a recommendation to the committee, which Mr. Washburn resists, that is that the thirteen townships withdrawn from the public domain by executive order in 1879 shall be added to the present White Earth reservation. Mr. Washburn claims that the original reservation has sufficient are a to give to each Indian the amount of land allotted to him under the provisions of his bill, and that there is no use in tying up 300,000 or 400,000 acres in the very heart of the state, when it is not required, especially as under the provisions of the bill the Indians get the benefit of all these abandoned reservations from the sales thereof. Mr. Washburn assured the secretary of the interior that if this recommendation was persisted in by the department and the committee he should not press the bill. He also stated that he proposed to amend the bill whereby not more than ten per cent. of the land, valuable chiefly for pine or other timber, should be offered for sale in any one year. He thinks this provision and the other provisions that all lands shall first be appraised and ninety days' notice given before being offered for sale and that the lands shall be offered in forty acre tracts and not sold for less than a $1.25 per acre, would afford all the necessary protection against the land being taken by speculators in judgments, and the Indians being defrauded of the actual value of the lands.

Field Beans.

For some years the minor farm crops have not received the attention that was their due. Among these may be classed the bean. Containing a large amount of nitrogen they are better fitted to take the place of meat than any other vegetable product. The crop matures in less than three months from the time of planting, and requires no expensive implements to plant or harvest. They can be planted when other field crops are out of the way, any time from the first to the middle of June. If prices do not suit the producer they can be held over to a more favorable market. A rich soil is not required, though fair to good is desirable. Three pecks of seed to the acre will suffice, provided the beans are planted in hills and drills. In a drill plant two to two and a half feet apart, and a cultivator can be brought into play to do the necessary work of keeping them clear of weeds. Never disturb them when the dew is on them or they are wet, or rust is liable to follow. The last crop brought from $3 to $4 per bushel and failed to supply the home demand. Large quantities have been shipped here from abroad.

Guiteau's Horrible Phantom.

A Washington paper gives the following picture of Guiteau's breaking down: "Guiteau realizes that time is not waiting, and that every succeeding day hastens him nearer the time when the sentence of the law will be executed. The cheerful demeanor and hopeful expression which have characterized him throughout, have vanished. The familiar air or bravado is gone, and in its stead the ashen hue of terror has appeared. A few nights since he retired to his prison cot about 10 o'clock, and in less than half an hour he awoke in the most startled manner, and looking wildly around he exclaimed, his voice trembling with excitement:

"'I see horrible phantoms before me! What shall I do? My poor brain reels! Oh! why did I assassinate him?'"

"It took some time to pacify the assassin, and when he became quiet he calmly said:

"'Don't mind what I said. I was dreaming. We all dream at times, I am no coward, nor am I afraid to die, but it is not possible that President Arthur is going to permit them to hang me, after what I did to redeem the republican party. If he reprieves me or commutes my sentence, the hoodlums will howl, but the respectable element of society will stand by him and endorse his action.'

"Having relieved his mind on that score, he again retired to his cot, but only to find troubled sleep."

Rid of a Red-Skinned Bandit.

The killing of Captain Jack rids the border of a treacherous and blood-thirsty savage chieftain. He it was who led the band that massacred Agent Meeker and his men and carried the Meeker family into captivity and perpetrated numerous outrages on defenseless settlers. Captain Jack was a wily as well as a warlike Indian. He was a hard one to capture, and when once in custody it was quite as difficult to hold him. After his recent escape from Fort Washakie, Wyoming, he killed a sergeant who led the pursuing party, and when they finally had him cornered no plebeian musket would bring him down, but they had to let loose a mountain howitzer upon the red-skinned bandit. Now that their bravest leader has fallen the warwhoop of the White River Utes will be heard not quite so often.

Jack Riley, a cattle buyer, started from Lake Crystal on the 16th inst. with several hundred dollars in his possession and has not been heard from.

The report that the old Racine Silver Plate company would be removed to Rockford, Ill., is untrue.

MINNESOTA NEWS.

MINNESOTA STATE UNIVERSITY.

A Class of Thirty-Four Young Men and Women Graduate with Honor.

The tenth annual commencement of the Minnesota State University, occurred last week. The governor and a large number of distinguished citizens were present. The salutarian of the class, selected to the honor by the class vote, Mr. Andrsw Hilger, was introduced. His appearance was greeted with applause. Mr. Hilger is the first colored young man to graduate from the university. The salutory address was delivered in the Latin, with a few closing words in English, and was a graceful address, first to the board of regents, the governor, the faculty, the students and then the audience. It was delivered gracefully, with dignity and oratorical effect.

Graduation papers were also read by a dozen or more ladies and gentlemen selected by the class. The class was very nearly divided between the ladies and gentlemen, and it is but justice to the former to remark that they fairly carried off the honors of the occasion. The class numbered thirty-four, and is the largest ever graduated from the university. The degrees accorded the candidates on the graduation were as follows:

Duluth Land District Frauds.

Gov. Marshall's recent report on the preemption frauds in the Duluth land district on in a wholesale manner. It appears from shows not only that there have been frauds, but that they have been carried his report that in the last year something like 700 pre-emption claims, covering over 100 acres each, had been made in that district, and that of these 700 claims, there were only two where the improvement required by law had been made. The claims seemed to have been made by parties who, if they had a name, had no habitation, and immediately upon completing the proofs, deeded the lands to the parties who had furnished the money. Both the secretary of the interior and the commissioner of the general land office express a good deal of feeling with regard to the matter, and will take the necessary steps to remedy the abuse.

Chippewas and the Reservoirs.

Secretary Teller said the other day to the Minnesota delegation that from all the information he could obtain from the war department and outside parties there was no substantial dissatisfaction among the Indians except what had been occasioned by meddlesome whites and half breeds. First Regimental Reunion.

Comrades of the First Minnesota Regiment association, our fourteenth annual reunion will be held at St. James, Watonwan county, on the 21st and 22d of June, 1882, and the citizens of St. James will give us a cordial welcome and will do all in their power to make this the best reunion we have had. Comrades, I most earnestly urge it upon you to attend this reunion, for business will come up before the next association that ought to interest every member of the old First.

Comrades, do not stay away if you do not get cards of invitation. The only reason that you do not get them is we do not know your postoffice address. Reduced rates on railoads will be secured if possible.

The press of the state will please copy this for the benefit of the members of the old First regiment. JAMES CANNON, President.

The reunion of the old Minnesota First, to be held at St. James on the 21st and 22d inst., promises to be a big affair. Gen. Gibbon is the orator and extensive preparations are being made for the occasion.

Luther E. Potter, St. Cloud, seed planter; Stephen Woodward, Delano, roofing bracket.

Ex-Lieut. Gov. Wakefield is to deliver the oration on Fourth of July at Blue Earth City.

Quite a sensation was created in the northern part of the town of Cleveland, Le Sueur county early last Friday morning. Eugene Kentland of Lake Washington, who has a wife and several children, had been helping John Peirre Pettitt in putting in a crop for several weeks. Pierre Pettitt has for several days suspected that Kentland was too sociable with Mrs. Pierre Pettitt, and Friday morning informed his wife that he was going away and started, leaving her in bed. He did not go far until he returned, and found Kentland in bed with Mrs. Pettitt. He immediately jerked out his knife and stabbed Kentland in the abdomen. Kentland fled as rapidly as possible with nothing on but his shirt. Kentland came to Le Sueur, when Dr. Merrit sewed up his wound. Officers from Cleveland come after him and took him back to answer to the charge of adultery.

At a meeting of the board of regents of the State University, the entire faculty were re-elected, but subsequent to the election a resolution was introduced changing the election of the faculty. Instead of holding annual elections as heretofore, the resolution is to the effect that elections hold good at the pleasure of the board of regents. A resolution was also offered and adopted for the formation of a committee of these regents to be appointed by the president to investigate the affairs of the university and report at a subsequent meeting as to the general condition in respect to discipline, etc., and recommended such reforms as may be requisite in the direction of efficiency and economy.

The following officers have been appointed on the staff of Gov. Hubbard, and will be obeyed and respected accordingly; this order to take effect June 1, 1882; Brig. Gen. A. C. Hawley, adjutant general; Brig. Gen. H. C. Hicks, judge advocate general; Brig. Gen. James Hunter, quarter master general; Brig. Gen. James A. Murphy, surgeon general; Rt. Rev. John Ireland, chaplain; Col. E. M. Van Cleve, inspector general; Maj. O. B. Gould, aid-de-camp; Maj. A. Barto, aid-de-camp. By order of L. F. Hubbard, governor and commander-in-chief.

Prof. Hill, late of Swede college, at St. Peter, has left as a missionary to Utah among the Mormons. The Mormon elders have been making most of their converts from the Swedish people the last two years. Prof. Hill is sent by the Swedish Lutheran Synod to put a stop to their further converting Swedes to Mormonism if possible. Prof. Nelander of Omaha has been selected to fill the vacancy in the college caused by Prof. Hill's removal.

A dozen or more railroad millionaires visited St. Paul last week. Another crowd of parisites and flunkies followed them round. One or two hundred millions of dollars in the pockets of a dozen men showed how abject a creature man is.

The Rev. A. P. Monton, president of the Bethesda hospital, stated to the Southwest Lutheran conference in convention [illegible] Pau last week, that the Hon. C. D. [illegible]lan donated the said institution $1,000. [illegible]w Ulm is cursed with a gang of pro[illegible] burglars, who have perpetrated nu[illegible]us small robberies.

A PARISIAN EVENT.

The Tragic Death of Emile Loissett, the Circus Rider.

Paris Letter to New York Tribune.

The funeral of that charming circus rider, Emile Loisset, was a Parisian event. The poor girl had long inhabited the United States, and had the freedom of manner and self-respect which so often distinguish the American young lady. She was on horse-back one of the most graceful creatures imaginable. The figure was lithe, but without meagreness. Her poises in the saddle were simply exquisite, and they appeared unstudied. The features wer elegantly formed, and the eyes expressed a brave, kind soul.

Emile Loisset was more popular than Sarah Bernhardt had ever been in Paris. Less successful rivals in the circus were brought by her exceeding amiability to pardon her public triumphs. She did not seem ever to excite jealousy. On the days and nights on which she performed the circus was crowded with fashionable people. There was no amount of wealth that she might not have possessed had she not been a proud, strong-willed, self-respecting girl. She had no carrige, and used to walk from the Hippodrome to the Rue Oberkampf, where she had a small lodging on the fifth floor. A number of aristocratic and plutocratic admirers used to escort her to the door, through which none of them were allowed by her to pass. She aspired to create for herself a happy home and to marry some one whom she could love and esteem. Her sister, Clotilde, is the morganatic wife of Prince de Reuss, brother of the German ambassador at Constantinople, and is looked up to in her family circle.

The admiration of the Empress Elizabeth for Emile was increased by the fact that the charming circus rider spurned the addresses of the crown prince of Austria. He was very much in love with her when she was in Germany a couple of years ago, and would have foresworn mariage, if she would have consented to be his dubarry. She did not like the young man and told him so. The empress, when she was here, used to make appointments to ride to Bois with Emilie. Her majesty thought the ecuyere charming to look at but lacking in firmness of hand. The horse on which she rode with the imperial Elizabeth in the shaded alleys of the Bois was the one that occasioned her death by rolling over on her and driving the crutch of the saddle into her side. The august lady noticed the hardiness of brutes's mouth and the teasing and at the same time irresolute way in which Emilie held her bridle. In Ireland Elizabeth had such a horse. She let him run away with her on a flat stretch of land, half in pasture and half in ploughed. When she got into the heavy ground the horse was a little tired, but she flogged him on until he gave up from sheer fatigue. From that time he was pefectly manageable and obedient, not only to the rein but to the empress's voice. Her Imperial Majesty telegraphed her condolence to the Loisset family, and ordered a boquet to be placed for her upon the coffin.

Emilie Loisset aimed at classic purity of style. There was nothing sensational in her manner. Her imperial friend Elizabeth thought her the most ladylike person she had seen in Paris. Her gestures were simple, her address amiable, and there was seriousness even in her smile. Members of the Jockey club spoke to her, hat in hand. Her death was entirely due to the hard mouth of her horse. At a rehearsal the animal suddenly turned round, made for the stable, and finding the door shut against him, reared up straight on his hind legs. Balance was lost, the horse rolled over, and the crutch of the saddle smashed in the ribs upon the lungs and heart. Poor Emile had the courage in this state to walk to the infirmary, and when she was taken home mount five flights of stairs.

The Tidal Wave of Immigrants.

New York City Cor. Philadelphia Ledger: "Put it down thirty thousand at the very least," said Superintendent Jackson, at Castle Garden, recently, in response to a question as to how many of our foreign relations would be registered this week. "Thus far," he went on to say, "twenty thousand have arrived since Sunday night, and that is the biggest four days' contribution in the history of the port. Between now and Saturday night we expect nine more steamers, including the mammoth City of Rome, and the vessel agents tell us that these will bring at least ten thousand steerage passengers." The arrivals today were from Hamburg, Bremen, Glasgow, Havre and the Mediterranean ports, and among the trades represented are tailors, shirt-makers, hatters, carpenters, cabinet-makers, wheelwrights, blacksmiths, farmers, masons, plasterers and laborers. The shirtmakers, who come from Havre, say that they have been earning at home less than five francs a week. The wheelwrights and blacksmiths are from Bremen. They report business in their line very slack there, and one of their number tells me there are at least twenty thousand workmen idle in and around Bremen who would gladly emigrate to this country if they could only obtain the means; the best wheelright can not earn more than $1.25 a day, while the wages of blacksmiths, foundrymen and horseshoers do not average more than $1. Many farm hands and laborers come from Glasgow, and all of them are bound west, having prepaid tickets to Illinois, Iowa, Minnesota, &c. The present pay of the Scotch farm laborer at home is $70 a year and found. The Alexandria, from Gibraltar, brings several hundred Italians, who are said to be railroad builders; they are said to be very poor, with no money or any wordly goods, save the clothes they have on their backs.

The river and harbor bill now before congress appropriates in the aggregate $17,342,875, including $925,000 for improving the Missouri river, $4,923,000 for improving the Mississippi river, and $780,000 for miscellaneous work upon those two streams.

CARRYING OFF THE PRIZE.

"Nobody goes to church on Easter day without an entirely new suit in the latest fashion!" said Mrs. De Novelles.

"Certainly not!" said Alicia, her eldest daughter. "Mrs. Pellham has written to Paris for a new bonnet, to my certain nowledge."

"And of course," added Emily, the youngest scion of the house of De Novelles, "as you are spending the winter with us, Madeline, you will be expected not to disgrace us."

Madeline Moray looked from one to the other of the speakers with a troubled expression of countenance.

"But, Aunt De Novelles," said she, mamma writes me that our old Cousin Zephaniah and his wife have come from Maine, very poor, and that we must economize as much as possible in order to keep them off the town. They are very old, and they need a great many little luxuries, and—"

Mrs. De Novelles' face darkened visibly.

"Madeline," said she, "will you never forget that you belong to a farmer's family down-East? Your Cousin Zephaniahs are nothing to me. Of course, while you are my guest, I shall expect you to dress as becomes your station as my niece."

Madeline knitted her pretty brows in sore perplexity after Aunt De Novelles had rustled out, leaving a strong odor of patchouli behind her. She had admired the devotion of her aunt and the girls in attending the church services so regularly during Lent; she, too, had sat in the dim, religious light of the perfumed church, trying to recall her wandering thoughts to the words which she uttered, and had come to the conclusion that she was not half so good as her aunt, and Emily, and Alicia. And now, Aunt De Novelles felt no charity for poor old Cousin Zephaniah, and wanted her to spend all her little money for dress and fashion to make an outside show.

She had a fifty-dollar bill yet left of the small store which they had scraped together at home when they had sent her to spend a winter in Boston with Aunt De Novelles, and she took it from her purse and smoothed it out upon her desk. Fifty dollars! She had hoped to save it all for Cousin Zephania.

Her pretty shot silk, with the damasse front, was very fresh and pretty silk—she had only worn it some half dozen times—and her neat little split-straw hat would look very nice, if she bought a new ribbon for it and re-arranged the flowers. At least that was the mental conclusion at which she had arrived, when Mrs. De Novilles issued her commands, binding as an imperial purchase, that a new Easter suit was among the necessities.

Madeline knew very well that she was pretty. She never looked into the glass without perceiving the difference between her fresh, apple-blossom of a face, and the enameled and roughed complexions of her city cousins. She knew that her long hair was like burnished coils of gold, her long-lashed eyes like stars; and she would have liked a new Easter suit as well as any one—and the bonnets in Madame Printemp's window looked infinitely beautiful in her eyes, with their French roses and perfectly simulated violets; but there was the old man and his enfeebled wife to remember—the ancient relics of a bygone generation who had outlived the sympathy of almost all the world.

"No," said madame to herself, "I must not spend this money, Easter suit or no Easter suit."

So she sat herself down in the rainy March afternoon to rip up the shot silk dress and alter it so that even Alicia and Emily should not know it for the same.

But with all her skill in amateur dressmaking the folds would not hang stylishly, the old creases would obtrude themselves on the eye, and the costume proclaimed in its every glisten and puff, "Made over, made over, made over!"

Emily De Novelles shook her head.

"Madeline," said she, "it's of no use. You never can wear that dress! And your hat, too. A plain split straw, without so much as a French flower."

Madeline burst into tears.

"Very well, Emily," she said. "Then I will remain at home. You need not fear that I will disgrace the congregation of St. Etheldreda on Easter Sunday."

And this pledge evidently relieved the mind of Miss De Novelles.

"For," as she afterward told her sister Alicia, "these half-civilized country girls are capable of anything."

And the two elegant sisters did not take the trouble, when Captain Brabazan dropped in to five o'clock tea, to send up word to Madeline that there was company in the parlor.

"I suppose she don't care to see me!" the captain thought, with a sinking heart, when at last he went away, after having lingered as long as politeness would admit.

"I suppose he never asked for me!" Madeline said to herself, as, from her window, she saw his retreating figure saunter slowly down the street. "Well, it matters less than ever now about the Easter suit. Nobody will know whether I have one or not."

But when Easter eve came, and Madeline was crying softly in her own room, to think of the radiant spring sunset that was flooding all the world at home, the colored waiter came grinning up to the door.

"Please, Miss Maddy," he said, "hyar's a basket o' laylocks. Real springy-smellin', I do declare; Wid de dappen's card—Cappen Brabazan, miss!"

Madeline uttered an exclamation of delight:

"Oh, the lovely, purple things! Clusters of lilac fragrance! Delicious reminders of the springtide at home. Oh, how kind it was of Captain Brabazan to remember that she was a country girl, exiled here among brick walls!

Madame Cressonde's young woman sat up until 12 o'clock that night to finish the three elegant costumes which Mrs. De Novelles and her daughters had ordered. The three bonnets did not come home until Sunday mourning.

But Madeline watched them sail forth to church, to the glitter of golden sunbeams and the clanging of melodious bells, like three fashion-plates.

And then she put on her plain little "made-over dress," and, taking a fresh cluster of lilacs from the vase of water, pinned it across the split-straw hat.

"There!" she thought, as she tied the strings under her chin, "no Paris exotic ever looked half so sweet as that! And I am sure that heaven will incline its ear no less favorably to my prayers than if I went to St. Etheldreda's in Worth's newest design."

And she crept to the little church in the adjoining street, which had long gone out of fashion, and where the spectacled old clergyman practiced all the austerisies of the early fathers, through dire necessity.

She sat there listening to the anthems and thinking of the dear ones at home, and wondering if Cousin Zephaniah and his poor old purblind wife would ever know that she (little Madeline Moray) had cast her mite to relieve their sore necessities, and recalling vaguely the poor widow whose offering had once been so precious in the Holiest of eyes. Hers was not much now, but she also had given it from a free and willing heart.

As she moved quietly and with reverent, downcast eyes out of the church, some one stepped to her side.

"You have dropped something, Miss Moray," said Captain Brabazan.

And he held up the cluster of lilacs, drooping now, and a little faded.

She put her hand up to her bonnet with a scarlet blush.

"Your lilacs, Captain Brabazan!" she said.

His face brightened.

"I am proud that you deem them worthy of wearing," said he. "Your cousin told me that you were such an anchorite that you did not care for flowers, books or society—that you were not even going to church on Easter day."

"I?" cried Madeline. "Oh, Captain Brabazan, I like all three! I cried over your flowers when they came last night. They seemed to me like dear friends from home. And I wore them in my bonnet because—because I could not afford artificial blossoms. There! now you know just how poor I am!"

And she laughed even while the rosiate tinge suffused her cheek.

"I do not know whether you are poor or not," said he; "but I do know that I think you are the nearest perfection of any girl whom I ever saw!"

"May I tell you all about it?" she asked, hurriedly; "for I do not want you to think me avaricious or semi-bar-barian, as my cousins sometimes pronounce me. And then you shall tell me whether you think I am right or wrong."

They walked slowly home from church in the soft, bland sunlight of that Easter day, and when they reached the brown stone mansion on Silverstone street, Captain Brabazao went in and formally asked Mrs. De Novelles' permission to address her neice with a view to marriage.

That was Madeline Moray's Easter gift. A man's true and loyal heart—the dawn of a great happiness over a life which, up to this hour, had been but chill and solitary.

There was no denying that Mrs. De Novelles was much disappointed. Emily and Alicia had been in society three seasons now without having received any eligible offer; and it did seem strange that this pale, quiet little girl from the backwoods, as Mrs. De Novelles contemptuously expressed it, should have carried off such a glittering prize as Captain Brabazan—for it never occurred to them that Madeline's sweet unselfishness and quiet self-denial could possibly have anything to do with the matter.

And as long as old Cousin Zepeaniah and his wife lived, Captain Barbazan made them an annual allowance, which was ample for their simple wants.

Cattle Raising in Texas.

Westward from Houston the country becomes dryer, though there is still much low prairie. All along the road through this region one sees many cattle, and soon learns the meaning of accounts, so often repeated, of cattle being able to live out all winter, without food or shelter. They do live so; that is some of them do. Many die from starvation. I saw there bodies everywhere, and many of them still alive were wretchedly emaciated. Hundreds of them were, to use an expressive southwestern phrase, "on, on the lift;" that is, when they laid down they were so weak that they could not get up; but if they were helped to get up they could walk about and feed, until weariness or weakness prompted them to lie down again, when the process had to be repeated. I saw great numbers of dead animals in the pools and ditches, where they had come to drink, and being too weak to struggle through the mud they had fallen into the water and been drowned. The owners appeared generally to hold the same cheerful philosophy with a man with whom I talked at Corinth, Mississippi, who thought he did not lose much when hundreds of his sheep died for want of food and shelter, because, as he said, "we git the wool." So those Texas cattle men seemed satisfied with the hides. "Hundreds and thousands of the cattle die when the new grass begins to come:" so I was told everywhere. The explanation is that the cattle, weak from long starvation and ravenous with hunger, eat excessively of the fresh grass. They have no "dry feed" to servo as a corrective, and the surfeit on green food kills them. The whole system and plan of cattle-raising in this State seemed to me to be enormously wasteful, yet the industry is a source of wealth. It would however, be much more profitable with better methods; and as population become more dense, and the range for cattle is circumscribed, these will of necessity be adopted. Nearly every pursuit in the south is to a great extent carried on, or rather goes on with similar wastefulness of metod and result. Of course no business thus managed produces on much as it would if prosecuted with even moderate energy, foresight, and prudence. I should not like to express my opinions upon such matters so forcibly as south ern men express theirs everywhere.

Lungs, Liver and Kidneys.

These great organs of life, as is known to every one, are most intimately related to each other, and where one is caused to suffer, the other two, on account of their sympathetic connection, are unavoidably made to feel the evil effects. Therefore, when distressed with symptoms of disease incidental to either organ, a medicine that will give tone and strength to all three, is Nature's best assistant in restoring health. Such virtues are beneficial as are contained in Yellow Dock, Sarsaparilla, Juniper, Iron, Buchu, Celery, and Calisaya. All these ingredients are scientifically combined in that great health renewer, Dr. Guysott's Yellow Dock and Sarsaparilla. Ask your druggist to get it for you.

A passenger train on the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy road struck a broken rail near Fredericksville, Ill., Thursday, overturning three coaches and causing a general wreck. Over thirty passengers were injured, but no lives were lost. S. E. Marsaick and bride of Keokuk, who started on their bridal tour that morning, were on the train. Marsick sustained severe injuries about the head and shoulders, and Mrs. Marsick's face was badly cut up.

Lawrence J. Avery, of Liberty, Ind., writes: "It was my misfortune to become afflicted, several years ago, with a severe attack of rheumatism in connection with dyspepsia and symptoms of lung and kidney disease. It seemed no medicine would reach my case, for I had tried this and that. My wife was using Dr. Guysott's Yellow Dock and Sarsaparilla, and persuaded me to try it. I did so, and used spirits of turpentine at the same time as a liniment. It has effected a complete cure."

Saluting Infant Royalty at Berlin.

San Francisco Chronicle Letter.

At the guardshouses there is considerable fuss made whenever any royalty passes that way. It is the duty and the only duty of the sentry on guard to keep his eye open for royalty. When he sees it—and he seems to have a remarkably long range of vision—he yells at the top of his by no means musical voice. The rest of the guard drop their cards and pipes, rush precipitately out, fall in, and present arms with drums beating. This sort of thing is gone through with every time any royalty passes. Even the infant children of the crown prince receive the same homage. There is something strange in seeing a lot of grown men present arms to a year-old infant. But they do it every time the nurse of the crown prince's family takes the children out for an airing.

But this "isn't a circumstance," as Chicago says, to what, according to the story of one of the American colony, happened here once. The nurse had a little child of the crown prince out for a walk, and happened to pass one of the guardshouses. The sentry on duty yelled, the guard turned and presented arms, while the drums beat. Just as the nurse and child got in front of the line of solders, the child espied a heap of nice, clean sand suitable for the manufacture of mud pies. The instinct of the child got the better of its training; it broke away from its nurse and began to play in the sand. The nurse protested, entreated, begged—but it was of no use. That child was bound to indulge in a little plebeian amusements. It had its own way, and played in the sand until it had satisfied its royal mind, and all this time the guard stood at a "present arms," while the drummer nearly wore his drum-head out.

Facts and Fancies.

Oscar Wilde says: The Mormons are the most unintellectual people I have met in America.

Mr. Labouchere advises his readers to look after their spoons. The following well known advertisement has appeared again in London: "Mrs. T. very unhappy in not hearing from Mrs. M. Jones, was in hopes to have seen her at the beginning of the new year. Been very ill." It is said that its appearance has never failed to herald a successful robbery.

Somebody got possession of the chime of bells in a New England church not long ago, and summoned the congregation to worship by playing one of the jolliest of opera bouffe airs. As the good people of that church never go to the theater, they naturally mistook the piece for a new Sunday-school tune.

Some of the heirs of the Springer estate, which comprises a large portion of the city of Wilmington, Del., held a secret meeting at Fort Wayne, Ind., Wednesday night. It is stated that they received an offer of $80,000,000 to compromise, which they will accept. There are 600 persons among whom the sum will be divided if accepted.

There was a man in this town this week with a patent lock for sale, and to demonstrate its superiority over all others he would pick any kind of a lock in a few seconds. Sheriff Gordon put him in irons to test his ability, and he unlocked the handcuffs and shackles with a small piece of iron as soon as the sheriff could have done it with the keys. He was so expert that the mayor and marshal forbade his giving public exhibitions of lock-picking.

The difference between snobs, according to the New York Post, is that in America the snob looks down on others, while in England he looks up to others, and tries whimperingly to climb up where they are. Away out west a snob is a fellow who wears a "clean biled shirt," and uses a pocket handkerchief and a tooth brush. Evidently a snob is a very variable factor, but he is equally disagreeable everywhere. Perhaps the best definition in this latitude is given by the Springfield Union: A fellow who ostentatiously parades himself as a little better than his neighbor, while his moral and intellectual backing is obviously deficient.

A writer in the London Lancet gives the following statistics of travel: Of 1,-564,644 persons who left Europe for New York between 1870 and 1880, 2,519 died in transit, the average duration of passage being 13 days 13 hours. Of 14,-874 persons who embarked on 15 ships in 1880, 37 died. One ship, carrying 1,-331 emigrants, lost 13 in the course of a 16 days' voyage. All were submitted to medical examination, and passed as healthy at the start. The figures seem to show that in crossing the ocean a man is about a hundred times more likely to lose his life by disease than by shipwreck.

Another noise is to be added to the many which make the streets of Paris hideous by night and day. Hitherto the approach of a steam fire-engine has been announced by the sound of a small trumpet much resembling those used on the tramway cars. The authorities, in order to avoid the confusion arising out of the similarity between the two sounds, have adopted a new kind of trumpet of doubled-distilled screeching power, which, if it does nothing else, will effectually frighten the horses it encounters into fits.

In Lock, a part of Alaska where the natives still keep their old laws in force, all the members of a family supposed to be in the service of Satan were recently condemned to death by a native tribunal. In execution of the sentence they were tied to trees, by etiquette the grandmother was first cruelly tortured by the mob; when she asked for a drink she was given salt water; finally she was cut to pieces with knives; the rest of the family escaped and reached Fort Wrangell.

The Palmy Days of Steamboat Life on the Mississippi.

Mark Twain's thrilling account of steamboat life on the Mississippi has awakened a peculiar interest in the subject with the millions who have read his books. The time when boats like the Natches and Robt. E. Lee, had their great trials of speed "for life or death," forms an era, as it were, in inland navigation of our country. These reflections occurred to the mind of a Commercial reporter when a day or two ago he had the pleasure of meeting the veteran steamboat man, Capt. Chas. N. Corri, at Willard's Hotel where he now makes his home. The fact that the captain is one of the oldest and most favorably known gentlemen in the profession—having served in official capacities of captain etc. for over thirty years, and being acquainted throughout the Ohio and Mississippi Valley—suggested a brilliant prospect for an interesting item to the man of news. However, it became at once apparent that Capt. Corri was not the man who desired publicity of the trials and triumphs attendant upon his long career. Yet he was exceedingly glad to refer to a matter which might prove of public interest and benefit. He observed to the reporter: "Owing to the exposure incident to a steamboat man's life, I had been for many years a sufferer from Rheumatism. In seeking relief I had spent a great deal of money, and tried many remedies, but all with no avail. Recently I was induced to try St. Jacobs Oil and found relief from the first few applications. After the use of two bottles I found myself entirely cured. I take pleasure in recommending this remedy to those suffering with Rheumatism." Such indorsements as the foregoing, coming from our own people, leave no doubt that the emphatic claims made in the interest of the above curative agent are fully justified and most strongly founded.

The Milwaukee & St. Paul company has closed a contract for a large number of new paper car wheels. The supply, it is thought, will be more than sufficient for all the company's parlor, sleeping and dining coaches. It is the intention of the company furthermore to furnish its entire complement of passenger cars with these wheels at an early date.

There is perhaps no tonic offered to the people that possesses as much real intrinsic value as the Hop Bitters. Just at this season of the year, when the stomach needs an appetizer, or the blood needs purifying, the cheapest and best remedy is Hop Bitters. FARM AND HOUSE.

Miscellaneous Recipes.

Tomato Butter.—Nine pounds of tomatoes, three pounds of sugar, one pint of vinegar, one-and-a-half spoonful of cinnamon, one-and-a-half spoonful of allspice, and one spoonful of cloves. Boil one hour. Bottle and keep cool.

To Keep Fresh Veal.—Veal may be cut into slices and fried, just as you would for the table, then packed in lard. When you take it up for use, heat it through thoroughly. Be sure to cover the remaining pieces with lard. It will keep some time, and is very convenient for those who live some distance from the market.

Remedy for Rosebugs.—During last season when the rosebugs covered the trees I tried successfully the following remedy. The bush was completely wetted with water and then showered with flowers of sulphur which adhered to the leaves until the next rain which put the bugs beyond doing further damage. Trees treated in this way show a marked gain during the balance of the season over those not treated and this spring are putting forth earlier and more vigorous shoots than ever before.

To Clean Oil Paintings.—The best thing to clean and preserve an oil painting with is megilp. A tube of it can be obtained for ten or fifteen cents, and it should be applied with a piece of old, soft silk, and after it has been well applied, wipe off with another piece of the silk. This effectually cleanses the painting besides making it look quite fresh, especially if it be an old painting. It prevents the painting from cracking, but should not be applied oftener than once a year, while once in two years is sufficiently often.

To keep the nails beautiful they should be kept immaculately clean, and should be carefully cut after being held in warm water to make them flexible. A mixture of oil and pumice-stone, prepared by the druggist, will make them bright and shining if applied with a piece of chamois skin and gently rubbed on. The half-moon shape should be preserved at the top, and the skin at the lower part pushed carefully down, so that the half-moon there will be visible.

In the Field.

The true farmer is in the field, and his work will employ his hands continuously for six months. There will be for him no time for loitering and visiting, or like rich men and office-holders, to dodge the hot suns by hieing off to cool watering places. The farmer has to feed the world, ensure its prosperity and preserve its credit by a good crop of agricultural products. And there is no royal road to accomplish this great task. There are no cushioned seats or plates of ice-cream under any shade he passes. From early dawn until the close of evening twilight he must push the battle. But success seldom comes to him who proposes to win by main strength and awkwardness. Lack of system and absence of fully developed plans for the work of the farm came a large number to waste their strength for naught. Thought and thrift go hand in hand. Hardworking forethought is more important than blind application of the strongest muscles, to insure success far the year. A good manager who thinks, plans and carefully prepares ahead, saves the muscles which will be valuable further along in life's conflicts, and more surely commands success, than the mightiest application of strength and awkwardness. Make every step count. Unlike the closely pursued fox, do not be compelled to double on your own track. Always know where you are going, and what you have to do. And do not change your plans for light and transient causes. Make wise plans and then pursue them with the energy and persistence of destiny. The past six months should suffice for relaxation and for visiting neighboring towns. If you are a wise farmer you have everything ready, and there is no need of frequent absence from the farm. Whether the owner does all the work or has a dozen hands, his presence is important every hour of labor. When he can no longer content himself on the farm attending to his stock, superintending the workmen, or holding the plow, the sooner he sells the farm the better for himself, his family and for his creditors. Keep in the field or abandon it altogether.

Cultivate More Potatoes.

The springfield Republican comments on the subject thus: The shortness and scarcity of last season's crop has taught some lessons in regard to it that it is well to heed. It has shown that foreign potatoes can be put upon our market and sold from 60 to 80 cents a bushel and at profit. Now, then, this shows that we must learn how to produce our crop for less than fifty cents a bushel. It further shows that whenever the price of our own production reaches a dollar a bushel, the eye of the spectator is turned eastward, and with the tinkle of Uncle Sam's gold come in whole ship loads of Eropean potatoes. The result is that down goes the price. The importation of potatoes has become a large business. Within a few weeks over 120,000 bushels of European potatoes have been landed at Boston and New York. The largest part of those that arrived at Boston were grown in Ireland and Scotland. The bulk of those that landed in New York were grown in Germany. The duties on potatoes received at the Boston custom house since the 1st of October last, amount to nearly $100,000. We should heed these lessons and put a little more brains into potato raising. The yield per acre can be very much increased by proper planting, cultivation, and cleanliness. Weeds and a large yield of potatoes never grow together.

Farmer's Short Notes.

Have you planted your tomatoes, melons, sweet corn, bush beans, okra, peppers, squashes? Eggs plants, Limas, sweet potatoes, pepers may yet be planted in this climate. See to the succession of sweet corn, lettuce, radishes.

Give the children a little spot of ground, and show them how to take their beds, and sow their seed. Do not fail to let them know you are interested in their work, for if they think you are not interested, they will soon think it is of little account.

Quite an unusual occurrence took place near Belleview, Ga., one day last week. A mare with her colt by some means gained admittance to a lot in which were several of working bees. The motherly animal, in her investigations of the surroundings, unfortunately upset a bee gum, when the little busy stingers fastened punctuation points on the young colt, in a little time inflicting injuries from which the animal died.

Prof. Lattimore, of Rochester University New York, analyzed a number of samples of prepared food, and found most of them adulterated. Three samples of canned fruit, pickles and ground coffees were found to be more or less tampered with in this respect. The ground spices examined were found adulterated from 40 to 80 per cent. The teas tested were pronounced pure.

Dr. Lawes says, in the North British Agriculturist, that there is very little doubt in his mind that ammonia and nitrates are completely washed out of the soil in the absence of living vegetation, or to put the same view in other words, that the only part of the ammonia or nitrates that escapes being washed out of the soil is that which, being arrested by the roots of plants, deposited respectively in their stems, leaves, seeds and roots.

Raising Geese.

In my experience in raising geese I find that it is best to let the goose take care of her eggs, not remove them from the nest; nearly every egg is bound to hatch in spite of the old theory that thunder and lightning will kill goslings in the shell. I manage by prudent feeding to keep the geese from laying until all danger of the eggs chilling by leaving them on the nest is passed. I consider geese the most profitable in the poultry line, and the most easily raised.—H. J. W., in Rural New Yorker.

The B Fowl.

The Light Brahma is said by many to be the most profitable fowl for both eggs and chickens. It is a good winter layer and breeds early; the chicks are very hardy, grow fast, and are in demand at high prices in the market for early broilers, and the fowls reach a weight of eight to twelve pounds at eight months old. Of course all this is only secured by the best of care, and no fowl living will do well without that. The next best fowl for eggs and chickens is the Plymouth Rock, and the next best the game fowl, which, while it is extra good in quality, is quite small.

To Make Potash.

To make potash you have only to leach the ashes—that is, let water run through them, which makes lye. In one hogshead bore three or four inch holes, and set it on a frame sufficiently high to admit of pails or other vessels being placed under it. Fill it with ashes, the upper head being out. Pour on as much water as the ashes will soak up, and as fast as it runs in the vessels below, fill it up. What runs through is lye. Continue this as long as there is much strength in the lye that comes through. Lye is merely potash and water. Boil it in an iron kettle until all the water is evaporated. What is left in the kettle is potash.

Loring and Sorghum.

Despite early assurances to the contrary, Com. Loring's interest in the promising industry of growing sorghum cane for syrup and sugar seems of a very lukewarm character. Lately a special committee of the National Academy of sciences appointed to investigate the matter, reported favorably on the work of Dr. Collier during the last few years, in demonstrating the feasibility of producing sugar from sorghum. Although three ex-presidents of the society were on the committee, still it seems the commissioner does not think their report of sufficient importance for publication. Possibly there are good reasons of public economy for this; in no case can we allow ourselves for a moment to believe the insinuation that it is due to any petty jealousy arising from the fact that Gen. Le Duc's name is so intimately connected with the growing popularity of this industry.

To Cure Gapes in Chickens.

The easiest treatment, and it is sure, is to put some carbolic acid into a spoon, or metal saucer, and hold it over a lamp; dense white fumes will arise. Hold the chickens head over this until nearly suffocated; or, shut the chickens up in a box and fumigate all together, watching closely lest they be suffocated. The fumes of the acid kill the worms and they are coughed up. Another plan is to fumigate with sulphur, and then give three or four drops of a solution of carbolic acid and water—sixty drops of water to one of acid—and nine cases out of ten, chicks thus treated at night were all right the next morning. When the carbolic acid is not at hand, give a few drops of camphor and water. Some poultry raisers have given kerosene in teaspoonful doses every other day for a week, and others give a small pill of camphor gum.

Pithy Paragraphs.

The democratic mayor of Cincinnati has a sententious way of expressing his ideas. Speaking of enforcing the laws upon the statutes he says: "One of the first duties of a community is to protect the young; protect the boys first, and they will protect the girls."

A hungry rat devoured fifteen canary birds in Cleveland, Ohio, in one night recently, and in consequence grew so corpulent that he couldn't escape from the cage. The rat was killed with much promptness.

The Yale association of Colorado have raised a considerable fund to aid studious youths from that state in acquiring an education at Yale college. The boys in the Denver high school have been told that the association will gladly pay the tuition of any of them who may go to Yale, and that to those deserving and needing it some other assistance may be given.

In closing his message to the Louisiana legislature, Gov. McEnery says: "The late special message of the president to congress, his patriotic and statesmanlike views and liberal ideas, have given new life to our people. Cheerfulness and hope have taken the place of gloom and despondency, in the well-founded belief that congress will assume control of the levees, and that, in consequence, no such calamity as the present will ever again occur."

The Cobden club is a free trade institution, and a London newspaper states that since January, 1881, it has circulated 730,000 publications, chiefly in support of its free trade principles, and that since it was founded, in 1866, the number of documents issued by it has reached 1,-300,000. These publications consist of books, pamphlets, circulars and addresses.

In the good old times boys got their physical training on the farm or in other useful employments, and went to college for mental development. Now the colleges seem to have been converted into institutions for athletic culture. Cornell University, in addition to her magnificent gymnasium, now proposes to erect a $20,000 hall for the drill of the students.

Philadelphia has a school building which dates back to colonial times. During the revolutionary war it was used as a hospital, and in 1798 both the congress of the United States and the general assembly of Pennsylvania made application for its use as a hall, in which those bodies could sit. The boys are summoned to their studies by a bell which was brought from England in the ship whose cargo of tea was thrown overboard in Boston Harbor. On the steeple survives the wooden image of a royal crown which the juvenile rebels of Germantown during the revolution used to pelt with arrows. It is located at the corner of School lane and Green street.

Senatorial absenteeism in Washington is a serious obstruction to the dispatch of public business, it being the custom to refrain from acting on any measure in which an absent senator may have an interest. Mahone, of Virginia, has not been in his seat above forty-eight hours all told during the session. Cameron has been out of his seat nearly all the time. Lamar is at home with his sick wife, Logan is at the Hot Springs with his lame back, Edmunds has been away with a sick daughter, and Garland has been much in his own state. Hill has a sore mouth, and his colleague, Brown, is very ill.

There is a curious story about the refusal of a wealthy New Yorker to pay for certain bridal presents ordered by his wife. It seems that the wife ordered of a silverware establishment $1,000 worth of presents, which were received and duly admired by the bride. But when the giver's husband received the bill he called at the jeweler's and said that the money must be collected, if at all, from the bridegroom. The silversmiths applied to the bride for the return of the presents, but she refused to restore them and the purchaser has been sued for the value of the goods. The strangest part of the affair is the husband's reason for refusing to pay his wife's bill. It has leaked out that he was once jilted by the bride upon whose table he declines to pile a thousand dollars worth of precious metal.

Mr. Marvin, of Albert Lea, has sowed 1,500 acres of wheat this season. The wheat at present is up, looking fine, and promises a good yield. Last year he cleared, free from all expenses, $10,000 on his crop of wheat.

A NEW MILLING CENTER.

Minneapolis as a Wheat Grinding Point To Have a Formidable Rival.

Red Lake Falls, Minn., May 31, 1882. —While so much is being said, and truly, of the beauties and advantages of the many new towns now inviting immigration and investment, the actual present status and future prospects of this exceptional place tell a story of cold, solid facts, based on tangible evidence and uncontrovertible figures, touching matters which have a bearing only on dollar-and-cent considerations.

This assured focus of trade, manufactures and agriculture is at the junction of Red Lake and Clearwater rivers in Polk county, Minn., twenty-two miles east of Crookston, Minn., and thirty-six miles east of Grand Forks, D. T. On these streams are the only great water powers between Fergus Falls on the south, Manitoba on the north, and the Missouri river on the west, while there is an immense wheat producing region directly and naturally tributary to this point. An inspection of the map shows the great advantages of this location. It is situated on a level plateau, and flanked on two sides with at an average distance of not over three-fourths of a mile from the centre of the town site. These powers are cheaply and easily utilized, even without dams, and have a fall of from twelve to thirty-six feet. The average minimum flow of water in Red Lake river is equal to 200 cubic feet, with a fall of one foot in forty. Clearwater river has about one-fourth of the above amount. There is an average variation between high and low water of five feet on Red Lake river, and four feet on Clearwater river. It is estimated that there are at least on Red lake, the source of Red Lake river, which has an area of at least 300 square miles. This pine must all be driven past this town site. A large body of hard wood timber is near and tributary to these water powers, which can be and will be used in manufacturing furniture, agricultural implements, paper pulp, etc., etc., which require hard wood lumber. A fine wheat growing country surrounds this point. It is well settled up, and is producing an abundance of straw for paper making. The value of these powers for milling flour is almost beyond computation. When the now under active construction, reaches this point and extends to the Red river, it will be sixty miles less distance from the center of the Dakota wheat belt to Duluth via Red Lake Falls than to Minneapolis, so that there will be a difference in favor of millers on these powers, as against Minneapolis, of at least 1 cent a bushel on wheat, and on freight from Minneapolis to Duluth, 150 miles, of 20 cents per barrel on flour. Add to this the saving on water rents, insurance, city taxation, etc., and it is readily seen that this location has advantages sure to command attention of prudent investors.

ONE BILLION FIVE HUNDRED FEET OF PINE

DULUTH & WINNIPEG RAILROAD,

There are, right here, in great abundance, lime and building stone, sand, first class clay for brick making, etc., and easily obtained. Wood for fuel can be had to any extent at $2 per cord. The town much cheaper than Dakota towns can be built of wood. The river beds furnish plenty of gravel for road making and other uses.

The town is beautifully situated and most judiciously laid out. Broadway is 100 feet wide, the other streets and avenues are eighty feet wide and the alleys are twenty feet wide. All full blocks are 300 feet square and lots are 25x140 feet. A court house square, market square, public school grounds and public park are reserved, and all are on a basis of far seeing liberality.

Now, these are the bald business facts of what might be amplified to an unlimited degree concerning a point at which it needs no prophetic eye to see a future city, full of enduring commerce and manufactures. There is no blow or bluster about it. Red Lake Falls needs none, but does invite the close examination of shrewd men. The open way to such examination, and to all further information, may be found by applying to or addressing C. Kretzschmar, Crookston, Minn., or P. K. Barrows, Grand Forks, D. T.

Woman's Wisdom.

"She insists that it is more importance, that her family may be kept in full health, than that she should have all the fashionable dresses and styles of the times. She therefore sees to it, that each member of her family is supplied with enough Hop Bitters, at the first appearance of any symptoms of ill health, to prevent a fit of sickness with its attendant expense, care and anxiety. All women should exercise their wisdom in this way."—New Haven Palladium.

The Growth of Nervousness.

Nervousness is a rapidly growing ailment. When there is no organic disease, its origin is usually imperfect digestion. Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, a remedy peculiarly efficacious in cases of nervousness, acts primarily upon the stomach, restoring its activity, promoting the secretion of the gastric juice, over-coming the immediate bodily disturbance resulting from dyspepsia, and remedying that depletion of muscular substance and strength, and the nervous symptoms which it ultimately produces. With the renewed activity of the digestive functions, nerve quietude returns, an increasing inability to rest soundly is counteracted, mental despondency is supplanted by a feeling of cheerfulness and the relish for food is augmented. The remedy is safe and unobjectionable, and may also be relied upon to overcome and prevent fever and ague, biliousness and constipation.

Death of a Forty-Niner.

In the early days of California few men were better known there than C. Palmer, one of the pioneers, who died on May 1 at Oakland. He was the head of the banking firm of Palmer, Cook & Co., which did not immence business, and whose popularity did not suffer, to say the least, from the following incident which old Californians still like to recall: One day a depositor called at the bank to draw $28,000. To the sudden withdrawal of so large a sum the consent of Mr. Palmer was necessary, but he was engaged at a lumber yard a mile or so away, and thither the depositor hastened Mr. Palmer at once agreed to let him have his money, but neither pen, ink nor paper was to be found. Thereupon without a moment's hesitation he picked up a shingle and with a piece of red chalk drew upon it a check for $28,000 payable to the depositor's order. The shingle was promptly honored at the bank, and a better advertisement of solvency, enterprise and an obliging disposition not even a California pioneer could have asked for.

HOME AND COUNTY NEWS.

Photographs at the tent.

The Jordan ADVOCATE, says that Mr. and Mrs. Chris. Juni, are rejoicing over a new boy baby, born on Sunday morning.

The many friends of Mr. and Mrs. Juni in Chaska and vicinity extend them their hearty congratulations.

Some infamous wretch has been hacking with a hatchet and otherwise spoiling the shade trees in front of Dr. Lewis residence. He gives timely notice that a load of shot is in waiting for the parties if discovered, and "be he man or be he devil, he will not sit on the Bust of Pallas much longer."

Farmers should be careful and not leave their residence alone on Sundays when attending church services. Tramps are flooding the State bent upon robbery and if they find the inmates away from home they are sure to "pillage" the house Be on your guard.

A BIG SHOW COMMING.

Monday June 12 1882.

By postal telegraph we are advised that Haywood's New York Quadrupantheon, composed of thirty artists, will appear soon. It is not often that are favored with a hall show of such dimensions as to require a special car to carry the troupe and equipements. They have been almost every where but not a word of adverse criticism has come to our notice. The mere announcemen of the fact is sure to pack the hall, for who are there among us who do not love to attend a first-class show. Go early and secure your seats, and thus avoid the rush.

Are We to Celebrate?

Are we to celebrate the 4th of July, is the question upper most in the minds of many of our citizens. Up to this time no move has been made looking to a grand old time celebration, with speeches &c. We hope some one will set the "ball rolling" before our next issue so as to enable us to announce a big time in Chaska on our next national birth-day.

Mr. Letford, is a son of Hon J. S. Letford, formerly a prominent citizen of this County, and the many friends of young Letford in Carver and vicinity, extend the happy couple their hearty congratulations.

Etzell's Hotel.

John Etzell's new hotel building is nearly completed. He opened his saloon some ten days ago and now wears a smiling countenance, for as he says, business is much better than he ever expected.

Notice.

Notice is hereby given that I have appointed Henry Staken Esq, of Laketown, as my agent for general fire insurance, and that he is empowered to take applications for insurance, collect money and receipt therefor in my name.

Dated at Chaska, June 1, 1882,
M. H. Muyres.

Photographs.

Mc Lellan & Cowthrone have placed some very neat samples of their photographs in the show window at the drugstore. They are first class artists, and any one wishing a good picture at a reasonable price should call on them in their tent opposite the residence of Dr. Lewis. They will remain only two weeks longer.

Chapter of Accidents.

Charley Veit, is sporting a black eye and brusied face, the consequence of a kick from his black stallion, administered last week.

Peter Sloum, of Chanhassen, had his tongue badly mangled, by being accidently hit under the chin by one of his colts last week. It is rapidly mending, however, under Dr. Mac Donalds care.

Leonard Grates, burned his hand very badly last week with hot pitch while putting a gravel roof on Etzell's new building. The injury is such as to lay him up a number of weeks.

Mr. John Denin, of Dahlgreen, was badly injured on Monday, last by being run over with his wagon. He was working on the road driving a young span of horses, and for some reason took fright and ran down a steep hill, throwing him under the wheels which passed over his neck and chest fracturing both collar bones and otherwise seriously injuring him internally. He is under the care of Drs. E H & F E Lewis, who have hopes of bringing him out all right.

Dr. E. H. Lewis, was on a visit to Bohemia yesterday, in attendance upon a man run down by the cars. Amputation at shoulder joint was necessary.

Mr. Michael Diethelm's little son fell into a tub of hot lye, last Saturday, and burned his arm very badly. Mr. Diethelm has been very unfortunate with his children; only one year since the same little boy while playing with a pistol accidently shot himself through the left lung, following that his youngest had a bad abscess of the knee requiring surgical aid, and now this last, rather caps the climax.

Badly Bitten By a Dog.

John Sundines oldest daughter Annie was badly bitten by a vicious dog in Carver last week. Her cheek, neck and shoulder were badly torn, making a ghastly wound. The dog was promptly killed, and we hope the little girl will recover.

☞ Burkhard Bros have on hand about 100 carpet samples 2 yards in length, which they will sell cheap.

Carver County is entitled to 4 delegates, upon the basis of one delegate to each County and one for each 250 Republican votes or major part thereof.

PETER ILTIS.

A Blaze.

The alarm of fire brought out the fire department last Sunday night at about 11 o'clock, when it was discovered the extensive board sheds covering the kilns on Messrs, Stroback & Cos old yard were on fire, by prompt work, however, the greater portion of the sheds were saved, but not until the fire had inflicted a loss of over $200.

The fire was caused by the falling of the scoving brick on a 12 arch kiln just fired for the first time.

Look Out For Tramps.

Tramps have commenced to swarm into Minnesota in great numbers and it stands our citizens, especially the farmers, in hand to be prepared to give them a warm reception. They are bent on robbery, and a "dose of shot" now and than will have the desired effect of driving and keeping them out of our county. Its the only sure remedy, as they are mortally afraid of cold lead.

Hail! Hail!!

Several severe hail storms have already passed over different parts of our State this summer, inflicting much damage upon the growing crops; therefore it stands our farmers in hand to see that they have some insurance upon their crops. A small amount, in case of loss, is better than nothing. Dont forget this?

Pension Matters.

Michael Mergens, of Laketown, has been awarded a pension at the rate of $6 per month with arreras amounting to over $1200.

Elias Swenson, of Dahlgreen, has had his pension increased from $4, to $12 per month. He is in very bad health and unable to do any work whatever.

JAMES GORDON BENNETT has made liberal provision for the family of Lieutenant DeLong, commander of the Jeanette by the munficent gift of $50,000.

Indications point to the unanimous nomination of Ex. Lt. Governor Wakefield for Congress, in the 2d District.

Jim has many warm friends in this county who will rejoice over his success.

The call for the Republican County Convention appears in this issue of the HERALD. The convention will meet at Waconia, Saturday, June 24th, and four delegates to the Congressional Convention, which meets at Glencoe, July 13th. For particulars as to number of delegates read call.

TEN thousand uniformed men are expecting to parade in Baltimore, June 21, during the national encampment of the Grand Army of the Republic. Gen. Ayres will command. The president and several members of the cabinet, and Gen. Sherman will be present. The camp is to accommodate 5,000 to 8,000 men, being established at Schuetzen park.

First Regimental Reunion.

Comrades of the First Minnesota Regiment Association, our Fourteenth Annual Reunion will be held at St. James, on the 21st and 22d of June, 1882, and the citizens of St. James will give cordial welcome and will do all in their power to make this the best reunion we have had. Comrades, I most earnestly urge it upon you to attend this reunion for business will come up before the association that ought to interest every member of the old First.

Comrades, do not stay away if you do not get cards of invitation. The only reason you do not get them is we do not know your post office address. Reduced fare on railroads will be secured if possible.

The press of the State will please copy this for the benefit of the members of the old First Regiment.

JAMES CANNON, President.

YOUNG AMERICA, June 12, '82.

ED. VALLEY HERALD:

Please allow me a small space in your valuable paper to say a few words in regard to the report of the grand jury and the action of the Co. Commissioners thereon.

At the last term of the district court which was held in this county, the grand jury by an almost unanimous vote recommended to the Co. commissioners to build an addition to the court house. On reading the proceedings of the last session of the county board it appears that the report of the grand jury was read and accepted and ordered to be put on file. The same as several other reports of grand juries were put on file and remained there as dead letters, of no value whatever. The last grand jury (22 men) favored putting improvements on the court house, and only one against, the same as several grand juries have recommended. It seems strange to me that five men can overrule 22 men. By the last report of the board of auditors it appears that there are sufficient funds in the county treasury to pay all repairs without one dollar taxation. There are many valuable books and papers in the several offices which are unprotected in case of fire, and would all be apt to be burnt and it would cost more to the county to replace them than it would to build a new court house. Some papers could not be replaced at any price, as I understand it. What a misfortune it would be to the county if all the valuable records should be destroyed by fire! The old jail is in a dilapidated condition and neither fit nor safe to keep prisoners in.

How many persons get up in the morning with out an appetite, having a bitter taste in the mouth, and feeling weak and debilitated? All these need Carter's Liver Bitters.

Norwood Items.

Mrs. Robert Elliott and daughter, Miss Sadie, returned from their visit to St. Paul last week.

Mr. and Mrs. Connoly's new baby was christened last Sunday, after which they entertained quite a number of friends with a fine dinner. We wish the baby a long and happy life, and the parents as many returns of the happy event as they may desire.

Mr. Elliot returned home Monday from St. Paul, whither he went to see his father, who had the misfortune to fall a distance of 25 feet and was quite seriously hurt, but was doing quite well when Mr. E. left him.

We are going to have a BIG 4th of July this year, and all wishing to have a good time and lots of fun on that day, can do so by coming to Norwood.

Rev Mr. Bostwick, a minister of considerable promise, held services in the church at this place both morning and evening.

Dr. Cash has had two or three very sick patients out on Crow River the past week. At present they are doing well.

Mr. Geo. Goodrich and Miss Fannie Boyle were united in marriage at the Catholic Church recently, Rev. Father Braun, officiating.

Norwood was thrown into quite an excitement Monday evening by the report that a band of burglars had gone through Shakopee on Sunday night, and intended gutting Norwood of what ready cash they possessed, just to keep in practice until they could make larger towns (as a circus does). Either we were not given the correct time for their appearance, or we were so blind drunk we did not see them. But the general opinion of our citizens is that this town will not be a very healthy place for such informants hereafter, we wont stand such nonsense anymore.

"Death to traitors!"

This would be a good time to sell safes. Booth says he wants one that is burglar-proof with a ventilator in it, and large enough to hold himself and his wife. Agents take notice.

Flags, fire crackers, toy pistols and caps, suitable for celebrating the 4th with, can be found at the drug store. Oranges constantly on hand.

Hancock Items.

Assessor Teubert is busy finding out how much property each one of our farmers is worth.

Jas. Welch, Patk. Cavanaugh and G. Anderson lost 27 sheep by dogs recently and the parties owning the dogs promptly settled all damages.

The town board of Supervisors of this township have appointed Pat. Colbert, Town Clerk in place of his honored father recently deceased. He also has been appointed district school clerk in this district for the same reason.

Mr. Colbert is a competent young man, and will undoubtedly fill the positions to the satisfaction of all concerned.

Hollywood Sprigs.

Frohsin's School District embraces, in area, one Fourth of a Township, less one half of a section.—Is it any wonder that there are many children, and too many, according to Supt. Vreyens!

Jacob Schoch is a popular and very able road boss. Carl Block, the same.

Mr. Carl Block has been very ill, suffering from an affection of the eyes. Dr. Lewis, of Watertown has the case in hand.

The time of Mr. Jos. Weber as school Director expires in Fall.

Rev. Wm. Fritz has been continued as the Evangelical Pastor, in this place, for another year, by his Conferenee. Congregation heartily respond. "Amen."

Some of our farmers went to Minnetonka, the other day, to procure feed; were absent two days.

Some write for pleasure, some write for fame,——

But I write simply to sign my name.

ALERT.

Watertown Items.

Weather very fine.

Wheat is looking splendid, corn not quite so well.

Assessor Miller is making his grand rounds, and figuring up how much we are worth.

S. B. Kohler has been making improvements by painting the inside of his saloon.

Frank Jacobs and Geo. Cunningham were our new policemen on last Monday, vice Edwards and Teas resigned.

One small fracus on last fair day, one arrest and one man cut his way out of the "cooler" with a jack knife.

Road overseer Flood is on the war-path, and is fiixing up our high-ways.

Mine host, Barnett, of the old Zeyer hotel, has changed the name of the house, and is ornamented with a new sign, one of Teas's best.

The Catholic Church society will hold a pic-nic on the Fourth and the proceeds will go towards the erection of a parsonage. And the fire department will hold a dance in Kohler's hall in the evening of the 4th, the music being furnished by the Holcomb & Teas's Band. Dont fail to be there if you wish to enjoy a good dance.

F. A. Barth opened his new store on Monday last—fair day—and had a very large run of trade.

We wish Frank success, and we believe he will have it.

We noticed among the visitors last fair on our streets, Hon. L. H. Rawson, of Rockford, Wright County.

Mr. John Dougan has a new dwelling in progress and we have heard of several others who will commence soon. Wade right in gentlemen, that is what we want.

Notice of Mortgage Sale.

Default has been made in the conditions of a certain mortgage executed and delivered by E. H. Henschen and Henrietta Henschen, his wife, mortgagors, to Otto J. Hale, mortgagee, dated the 26th day of May A. D. eighteen hundred and seventy nine, and recorded as a mortgage in the offic of the register of deeds in the county of Carver in the State of Minnesota on the 5th day of June A. D. 1879, at 10 o'clock a m. in book 'I' of mortgages, on pages 238, 239 and 240, given to secure the payment of seven hundred ($700) dollars, five (5) years from its date with interest thereon at the rate of 10 per cent per annum, payable annually on the first day of July in each year. Said mortgage stipulates that in case of nonpayment of principal, interest or taxes or any part thereof when due, the whole principal sum, with interest, should, at the option of said mortgagee his heirs, executors, administrators or assigns then become due and payable in the same manner as if then made payable by the express terms of said mortgage. Default has been made by the non-payment of the interest which became due July 1st, 1881, amounting to $70.00 It is the option of said mortgagee that the whole debt be due and payable. There is now due, therefore, upon said mortgage eight hundred thirty 20-100 ($830.20) dollars, and the further sum of $36.80, paid by the said mortgagee as taxes upon the said mortgaged premises, for which he holds the receipts of the treasurer of said county. No action or proceeding has been instituted to recover said debt, or any part thereof.

Notice is hereby given that by virtue of a power of sale in said mortgage, and of the statute in such case made and provided, the said mortgage will be foreclosed by a sale of the mortgaged premises therein described, which sale will be made at the front door of the court house in the village of Chaska, in the county of Carver and State of Minnesota, at public auction by the sheriff of said county on Saturday, the 17 day of June A. The French clericals have made up their minds to deal with the school question which has arisen in France since the passage of the bill secularizing education and placing it in the charge of the state in much the same way as they have dealt with the same question in this country. They propose to establish schools of their own, and to that end are appealing for contributions.

NEBRASKA State university is in a bad way. Some of the papers say it is literally a wreck owing to bad management and lack of proper discipline on the part of the faculty. It is frirly endowed and possibly may recuperate in the years to come. Nearly all the state universities have had their dark days, but some have emerged into brighter light and pfomise to meet in some degree the hope of toeir fonnders

There seems to be a constant and steady increase in the consumption of beer, principally of the genial lager variety. In 1881 New York city disposed of 2,656,077 barrels of beer, an increase of 316,000 barrels—about 1,000 barrels a day—over 1880; Philadelphia disposed of 865,178, an increase of 133,000; St. Louis, 876,061; an increase of 176,000; Milwaukee, 844,662; an increase of 160,208. Brooklyn absorbed 749,228 barrels, Boston, 607,240, Cincinnati, 731,788. In only two cities, Albany and Buffalo, was there a decrease. It is claimed that people are gradually discarding stronger liquors for beer and light wines.

France has a new divorce law and as a consequence a terrific deluge of scandals in the divorce courts. It was so in England twenty years ago, when divorce was first established there. An intelligent Paris correspondent, taking one consideration with another, doubts if the passage of the law will have the salutary effect upon matrimonial affairs in France that is confidently expected by its advocates. To work any radical change in that respect, the present system of French marriages must be wholly changed. What they need in France is a better appreciation of the sacredness and strong moral obligations of the marriage relation.

There is no calculating the material growth or the immensity of the undeveloped resources of the United States. In the lands of the country exclusive of the unsurveyed territory were equally divided, each family would possess one hundred and eighty-six acres. But the Indian and unorganized territories would give this allowance to the increasing and incoming population for a long while to come. The acres which even as settled, are now worth from five to fifty dollars will many, if not most of them, be worth in a brief time from fifty to five hundred dollars an acre. It is considered certain that no more lands will be granted to railroads or for any other illegitimate purpose. Hereafter they are to be held for the benefit of the settlers thereon.

THE St. Louis Republican, in speaking of the well-advertised and forthcoming "Life" of Jesse James, asks these questions: "If on the same day that the red-handed outlaw met a fate he had richly merited, there had died in the same city a venerable servant of God, who had spent a long life in doing good, feeding the hungry, clothing the naked, ministering to the sick, and teaching the ignorant—would his biography have been written and printed before the grass grew upon his grave? Would advertisements, placards and circulars, thicker than the falling leaves of autumn, have been thrust under every eye to tell the reader where and how he could procure a full and faithful history of the departed saint? Would pictures of him, in and out of his coffin, have been displayed, in shop-windows, and every means used to increase and intensify his post-mortem fame?" Without giving explicit answers to these conundrums, it may be said that the exploits of pirates and bandits have always interested the public. The names of Dick Turpin, Capt. Kidd and Lafitte will be remembered long after nearly all of their preacher contemporaries are forgotten, and there is no reason to believe that Jesse James is not destined to be immortal. All this is a sad commentary on public taste. Later days may bring a change.

There is no end of explanations for the high prices of meat. There does not seem to be much mystery about the matter. The greater trouble is to tell when the scarcity—for nothing but that makes the high prices—will end. Consumers must not forget the great drought of last summer, which extended from the New England states to Texas, and from the Atlantic to the Pacific, burning up the corn, grass, potatoes, etc. Besides, the winter of 1880-'81, when thousands perished by cold and hunger, and the floods of the present year also drowned many, all combined to make meats scarce and high; but the dry summer is the main cause. What was fatted on grass was killed partly fat, taking more in number to make the pounds that they ought to, or would make, if there had been plenty of grass; and when it came to feeding them through the winter with grain, there was little grain to feed them with, therefore light weight and scarcity at the present time; and the same causes apply to hogs, sheep, etc. Is it any wonder that beef sells so high at the present time with but 2,000 head of cattle at the drove yard in Philadelphia, when 3,000 is the usual supply, and New York 2,000 short, and the great markets of the west all drained every week, to send such a small quantity east? And part that does come is shipped to supply the foreign demand. All combine to make meats scarce and high. The scarcity will prevail to some extent for many months to come, and there need be no fear about remunerative returns on all prime cattle that can be got ready for market. The outlook for the farmer, crash or no crash, is one that is full of encouragement to industry and enterprise.

Sudden Dumbness.

A remarkable case of loss of speech is reported by the Louisville Courier Journal: David Calder, a machinist, about 55 years old, in excellent health and spirits, walked down to his work the other day, suddenly lost the power of speech and could not finish the sentence he had begun. After several fruitless efforts to speak he made signs to his fellow-workmen to be taken home, and was conveyed there. He was placed under medical treatment, but the cause of the trouble has not been discovered, and he is still unable to speak a word. There is no paralysis whatever of any of the organs of the throat or the tongue. He can laugh, cough and use his mouth and work his tongue freely—in fact, everything but speak, and consequently the case is a most curious one.

NEWS OF THE DAY.

News from Washington.

The ladies interested in the move for establishing homes for negroes in Indian Territory or in some other western territory are much grieved at the stand which Senator Plumb has taken against their proposition. Plumb expressed his fears that the movement has been already so extensively published as to result in disaster to the state of Kansas and the colored people who might be wrongly impressed upon the subject.

Col. Irish, superintendent of the bureau of engraving and printing, lost his official head last Saturday. It was dropped in the basket by Secretary Folger on the basis of some revelations made by Pressman Jackson of that department.

News of the Railroads.

The following are the recent changes in the Omaha railroad. J. H. Hiland general traffic manager, with the authority and duties of his predecessor, F. B. Clarke, who has resigned to accept the position of vice-president of the Northwestern Car and Manufacturing company. W. H. Truesdale, assistant traffic manager, with his office at St. Paul; J. A. Munroe, assistant traffic manager, with his office at Minneapolis; T. W. Teasdale, general passenger and ticket agent with his office at St. Paul; F. B. Whitney, general agent with his office at Omaha.

The Western railroad of Minnesota elected a board of directors and officers on Wednesday last. The directors include these solid names: C. B. Wright, Philadelphia; Frederick Billings, T. F. Oakes and Geo. W. Case, New York; Alexander Ramsey, F. R. Delano, George L. Becker and R. M. Newport, St. Paul; S. E. Neller, Minneapolis. George L. Becker is president; F. R. Delano, vice-president; E. T. Williams, secretary and treasurer.

Among the good results of Mr. Villard's visit to the west is the order that hereafter there shall be sold to no person more than 160 acres of Northern Pacific railroad lands. For months past the west, and especially the Yellowstone valley, has swarmed with eastern speculators buying up large tracts of land to be held for a rise. Mr. Villard's order completely checkmates the speculators.

Another Boston railroad, the "Bee Line," both ends of which are in the United States, is the last project practically commenced. It begins at National City, three miles from Sandiego, Cal., at present the terminus of the California Southern railroad and runs southeast through northern Mexico 470 miles to Calabas, A. T., running only twelve miles in the United States at its western end.

Col. R. M. Newport has resigned his position of land agent of the Northern Pacific for the Dakota, Missouri and Yellow Stone divisions to take effect July 1. He has resigned to engage in other business in St. Paul. Mr. Villard paid him a very graceful compliment by asking him to reconsider his resignation.

The St. Paul, Minneapolis & Manitoba railroad has leased five locomotives from the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul road for thirty days to help it through the immigrant blockade and freight traffic.

Record of Fires and Casualties.

At Minneapolis, a young man named S. R. Walters was arrested and locked up on the charge of robbing the Masonic Mutual Aid association. It appears that Walters procured a membership in the order for his father, Sterling Walters of Haricon, N. Y., and reported his death recently. He procured the required affidavits purporting to be those of Dr. J. G. Smith, the physician who attended him, and the undertaker. The certificate represents that the death was from typhoid fever, and is in due form sworn to by J. R. Walters before R. W. Cummings, a notary, upon it the association paid the claim of $1,304, but inrormation was received of the swindle and the young man was arrested just as he was preparing to leave the city.

Andrew S. Skunberg, a prominent farmer living near Barnesville, was drowned Thursday while crossing Grove lake. He attempted to cross in a small boat, taking some sheep with him. The animals became restless from long confinement in one position, and during their struggles upset the boat. Skunberg made a desperate attempt so reach the shore, but falied and went under.

The steamer Centennial at Lake City, in rounding the point ran down and smashed a fishing boat, the four occupants being thrown into the water, and one of them, Frank Collins, drowned. The others, a Swede named Sanquist and his son and Geo. Bush were picked up by the other boats. His body has not since been seen. He was formerly a clerk in the drugstore of Henry Müller.

At Virginia City, the premature explosion of a blast in the Consolidated mine instantly killed John Black and James Rown; John Blargo was fatally injured and R. Hicks seriously injured.

Crimes and Criminals.

The finding in the district court against Kitty Smith for keeping a house of ill fame in St. Paul, was affirmed by a decision of the supreme court, and Kitty's reward of merit was that she shall be sent into retirement at Stillwater for six months. But Kitty was too slick for the sheriff. After receiving her sentence the sheriff accompanied her to the house, and while she was changing her wardrobe and packing her linen under the eagle eye of the officer and a deputy she suddenly and mysteriously vanished into thin air, and the officers return will probably "not be found in my baliwick.

James Murray and Benjamin Green, a brace of beasts from Providence, appeared on Coney island and engaged in a professional bruising match but were interrupted by the police, whose non-attendance had not been provided for beforehand, and the fight ended by the arrest of one of the principals while the other developed qualities that would ensure him success as a pedestrian and escaped. The managers explained the fact that the principals did not fight in Providence by saying there wasn't room in Rhode Island for a fair fight.

In an attempt by the deputy sheriff at Southwest City, Mo., to arrest a circus proprietor for exhibiting without a license, a preformer named McBride was shot three times and killed. The deputy was shot badly in the breast. David Robinson, assistant deputy, was shot in the skull and all the circus were arrested.

The Irish bishops have issued an important address promising the support of the clergy to the people in peacefully agitating for their rights, but condemning as the worst enemies of the cuontry men who recommend illegal courses, particularly those belonging to secret societies. The exercises attending graduating day at the West Point military academy took place last Monday. Gen. Howard presented the diplomas. Col. Elwell S. Otis, Twentieth infantry, made the address of the day, and was followed by Senator Harrison of Ind., and Representatives Blackburn of Ky., each of whom made short and seasonable addresses. Gen. Sherman was then presented and had a most cordial reception. He told the graduates that if he had them in the section room he would talk to them like a father. With his whole heart he welcomed them into the brotherhood of the army; and with Senator Harrison, he charged them not to gamble or drink, and added that it is the usual practice in the army to abstain from those vices. Those of us in New York and other places look to Arizona and the far West for examples of refinement and culture and for society. That's what makes them move so slow out there. (Great laughter.)

He held a list of graduates in his hand, and in looking back found that the first admission to the West Point academy was at the beginning of the present century. The first man came from South Carolina and the other from Massachusetts. He was glad to know there are two Missouri boys in the class, also one from Iowa, but he found no one in the list from Virginia. He wished all the graduates a glorious career, and told them he would try to secure a large portion of them posts of duty in the Indian country. Gen. Sherman was vociferously applauded.

The list of graduates and their order in the class is as follows:

1. Edward Burr, Missouri.
2. Oscar T. Crosby, Mississippi.
3. Lansingh Beach, Iowa.
4. Graham D. Fitch, Illinois.
5. Eugene J. Spencer, Missouri.
6. Warren R. Newcomb, Connecticut.
7. Harry C. Benson, Ohio.
8. Ormond M. Lissak, California.
9. George F. Barney, Vermont.
10. Adelbert Cronkhite, Arizona.
11. John T. Thompson, Kentucky.
12. Harvey C. Carbadgh, Illinois.
13. Edward A. Miller, Kentucky.
14. Charles C. Treat, Wisconsin.
15. Richard W. Young, Utah.
16. Samuel Rodman, Jr., Massachusetts.
17. Benjamin Alvord, Jr., D. C.

A New Literary Field.

Mr. Edward Eggleston, who lived in Minnesota without fame, has undertaken to write a history of Life in the Thirteen Colonies, which will constitute the first part of a History of Life in the United States. The work, as he projects it, is in a field which has been scarcely entered at all, or which has been touched upon only as an incidental matter. The colonies, [illegible] and migrations of the colonists, their personal and social traits, their manner of thought, their struggles and adventures, their creeds, churches and schools, [illegible] and other associated topics fall within the scope of this work. It has engaging themes, and Mr. Eggleston has long made these matters a special study.

AMERICAN MEDICAL ASSOCIATION.

Annual Meeting in St. Paul—A National Gathering—Nearly 1,000 Doctors in Council—Notes of the Affair.

The national event in the northwest last week was the annual meeting of the National Medical Association at St. Paul, representing almost the entire regular medical profession of the United States. The association was organized in 1847, and this is its thirty-third meeting, the only two lapses in the annual gathering being during the years of the civil war. The first meeting was held in New York city, and 150 members, all told, made up the roster. Since then a large majority of the eastern and middle cities have been favored as the scenes for the annual convention, but never before has the northwest been honored.

The primary objects of the association are the advancement of medical science by the reception of a host of theses, carefully prepared by acknowledged experts, on a wide variety of topics, and the opportunity for the formation of acquaintanceships among members of the profession widely separated in this land of leagues by the legion but one in interest and aim. So successful were the first meetings that it soon became a desideratum among the regulars to belong to the conclave, and to-day the membership is more than 4,000, representing a clientele of more than 50,000 doctors. The number in attendance upon the annual meetings has varied in the last decade from 600 to nearly twice that number, and any delegate sent by a State Medical society to any meeting becomes thereby a lifelong member of the main association. There were about eight hundred present at the meeting in St. Paul, some of them highly distinguished in their profession, viz:

W. Various, president State Medical society of Pennsylvania, Titusville, Pa.

F. D. Cunningham, professor in medical college, Richmond, Va.

J. T. Carpenter, ex-president State Medical society of Pennsylvania, Titusville, Pa.

J. L. Atlee, the well known ovariotomist, Lancaster, Pa.

E. S. Dunbar, professor of obstetrics, university of Michigan, Ann Arbor, Mich.

Frank H. Hamilton, professor of surgery, Bellevue hospital, New York city.

L. Connor, professor surgery Detroit Medical college, Detroit, Mich.

Wm. B. Atkinson, permanent secretary American Medical society, Philadelphia.

Dr. John A. Octerlony, professor of the practice of medicine in the Kentucky School of Medicine.

P. O. Hooper, Little Rock, acting president of the American Medical association.

Dr. Frank Hamilton, the celebrated New York physician.

N. S. Davis, professor of practice in Chicago Medical college, and the "Nestor of the profession," Chicago, Ill.

Richard A. Dungleson, treasurer American Medical association, Philadelphia.

Dr. Lewis A. Sayre of New York, who has received distinguished honors abroad.

Dr. J. M. Toner of Washington, who is in the city, recently added his magnificent medical and miscellaneous library to the Congressional library at Washington.

Dr. C. T. Parkes, professor of anatomy of Rush Medical college, Chicago; and Dr. L. S. McMurtry, professor of anatomy in the Kentucky School of Medicine, Louisville.

J. A. Oderlong, chairman section practice materia medica and physiology, Louisville.

And many others of national reputation.

President, Surgeon J. J. Woodward, U. S. army, is at present absent in Europe recruiting from the strain undergone during the illness of President Garfield. And first vice-president, Dr. P. O. Hooper, of Little Rock, Ark., presided over the meeting and delivered the annual address.

The mission opened on Wednesday at the opera house in St. Paul. The view from the stage was a striking one. There was no cause for sentimental musings, but he could rank with bruitish beasts who failed to grasp the fact that the concentric circles of faces were those of men to whom thoughtful action had grown into a second nature. The prevalence of men who have reached or passed middle life was noticeable, though there was by no means a lack of the younger type.

Dr. Stone of St. Paul, chairman of the local committee of arrangements called the meeting to order, and introduced Gen. Lucius F. Hubbard, Governor of Minnesota, who, he said, would welcome the doctors "right royally." Gov. Hubbard stepped to the front of the platform and standing at ease and with much fervency of manner delivered a welcoming address that was loudly applauded. Right Rev. Bishop Ireland (Catholic) read an appropriate prayer. Chairman Stone invited the vice presidents and ex-presidents to take seats upon the platform, and the following gentlemen were provided with seats, the advent of each being hailed with applause: Dr. Sayre, New York; Dr. Davis, Chicago; Dr. Toner, Washington, and Dr. Cole, California.

First Vice President P. O. Hooper of Arkansas then delivered the annual address.

After calling the roll, the convention divided into seven different sections, that on Medical Practice holding sessions at the Opera House, and those on surgery and anatomy, on eye, ear and throat, obstetrics and women's diseases, dental speculists, etc., seven in all holding meetings in different halls of the city, where valuable papers were read and interesting discussions took place. The titles alone and names of authors, to say nothing of the names of those who discussed various topics, would fill a much larger space than can be given in this notice. It is said by those competent to judge from attendance at previous meetings, that the papers and discussions were never excelled.

The following officers were elected for the ensuing year, each name being greeted with great applause:

President—Dr. John L. Atlee, Philadelphia.

First Vice President—Dr. Eugene Grissom, North Carolina.

Second Vice President—Dr. A. J. Stone, Minnesota.

Third Vice President—Dr. J. A. Octerlony, Kentucky.

Fourth Vice President—Dr. H. S. Orme, California.

Treasurer—R. J. Dungleson, Pennsylvania.

Librarian—Wm. Lee, Washington.

Members of Judical Council—N. S. Davis, Illinois; J. M. Brown, United States navy; N. C. Scott, Ohio; M. Sexton, Indiana; N. C. Hunsted, New York; Wm. Lee, Maryland; J. D. Rives, West Virginia.

In addition to the above officers of various sections for the ensuing year were appointed as follows:

Practice of Medicine—J. H. Hollister, Illinois, chairman; J. G. Lee, Pennsylvania, secretary.

Surgery and Anatomy—W. F. Peck, Iowa, chairman; Paul F. Eve, Tennessee, secretary.

Obstetrics—J. K. Bartlett, Wisconsin, chairman; G. A. Moses, Missouri secretary.

Medical Jurisprudence and State Medicine—Foster Pratt, Michigan, chairman; Thomas L. Neal, Ohio, secretary.

Ophthalnogy Otology and laryngnology—A. W. Calhoun, Georgia, chairman; Carl Seiler, Pennsylvania, secretary.

Diseases of Children—R. Blount, Indiana, chairman; J. H. Sears, Texas, secretary.

Dentistry—D. H. Goodwillie, New York, chairman; T. W. Brophy, Illinois, secretary. Also standing committee on Necrology, publications, etc.

It was announced that state boards of health were in existence in all the states save Florida, Kansas, Maine, Missouri, Nebraska, Nevada, Ohio, Pennsylvania and Vermont.

The question which has created the most excitement was in regard to excluding the delegates from the New York Medical association, which adopted in February a new code as follows:

"Members of the Medical society of the state of New York, and of the medical societies in affiliation therewith, may meet in consultation legally qualified practitioners of medicine. Emergencies may occur in which all restrictions should, in the judgment of the practitioner, yield to the demands of humanity." This is a rule which is in direct conflict with the code of ethics of the national society, which claims for itself—and its claim had thus far been readily recognized—primal jurisdiction in questions of medical ethics. All other societies—state, county and city—of regular physicians are auxilary to the main body and if entitled thereto by numerical strength have representations therein. There is a clause in the code of the American Medical association to the effect that "no one can be considered as a regular practitioner or a fit associate in consultation whose practice is based on an exclusive dogma, to the rejection of the accumulated experience of the profession and of the aids actually furnished by anatomy, physiology, pathology and organic chemistry." (Par. 1, art. 4, Code Ethics American Medical association.)

According to this rule an allopathic physician who consults with a homeopathic or eclectic physician is subject to discipline.

The sentiment of the convention, reinforced by Dr. Lewis A. Sayre of New York, who was elected but declined to be a delegate from that state, but was present, was overwhelmingly in favor of sustaining the national code and for the exclusion of the New York delegate. There was no personal feeling in the matter and all sides freely intermingled during the sessions.

The following resolutions in regard to expert testimony was introduced from the section on state medicine, by A. L. Gihon, U. S. A.

Resolved, That it is the sense of the American Medical association that it will be condusine to justice and the dignity of the profession that medical expert testimony shall be given without having the appearance of being in behalf of either side, but to be stated simply as facts.

The resolution was accepted and adopted amid loud applause.

Dr. Dennison, Colorado, offered the following resolution which was adopted:

Resolved, that no action of this association, either in its code or its annual meetings, shall be construed to commit members of the American Medical association to the adherence of any dogma, and members should have a care not to allow their names to be erroneously registered as allopathists, etc., in state and city registration of physicians.

The social features of the gathering were greately enjoyed by all participants. St. Paul, which is not apt to overdo anything of this kind, fairly astonished herself. Free railroad passes were tendered to all who wished to visit any part of the northwest—good for the whole month of June—and a very large number availed themselves of the opportunity to go to Dakota, Superior, Winnipeg, and every section that could be reached by rail. On Tuesday evening there was a grand reception and banquet at the Metropolitan Hotel, attended by about one thousand people. On Wednesday evening, the hospitable mansions of ex-Governor Ramsey, Dr. D. W. Hand, Dr. J. H. Murphy, Dr. A. J. Stone, J. J. Hall, Esq., Hon. George L. Becker, and others were thrown open to the Doctors and hundreds of them were present. Nothing was overlooked to render the occasion one of pleasure to the guests of the city. There was no stiff formality, but as far as possible an effort was made, and it was a successful one, to make all feel at home. Each morning and evening hundreds of carriages were occupied by the Doctors and driven about the city and suburbs. A very large number of parties and gatherings occurred at the residences of citizens in honor of acquaintances and friends of the profession.

Probably the most elaborate and brilliant affair was the party at Stillwater on Thursday night by Hon. D. M. Sabin. Two trains embracing 1000 people, left at 5 o'clock, and at seven were sailing or steaming on the beautiful St. Croix. One of the incidents on the lake as the steamers threaded their way among the lumber booms, was deafening cheers from the throats of 500 red-shirted lumbermen, who were ranged on the rafts. On landing they were taken to Mr. Sabin's spacious mansion. The lawn, in the language of the Jenkinsion reporter, was "a blaze of light." Hundreds of electric incandescents, myriads of Chinese lanterns and adamantines lent a glow to the foliage and fountains, which aided in the production of a scene of fairy-like beauty. Then and there was slaughter dire among the dishes toothsome, and for a full half hour the rattle of those weapons of good-fellowship, the knife and fork, resounded like a fire by file. The eating ended, the smooth platform was prepared for the dancers. All were delighted with the entertainment.

On Friday evening the Sir Knights of Damascus Commandery of St. Paul entertained right royally in their asylum, the Medical Sir Knights from other states.

On the whole, to sum up the meeting of the association, the gathering of so many physicians, and the knowledge they will obtain of the country and people, is generally regarded of vast importance to the future of the northwest.

The Yorktown Junketing.

The Yorktown, (Va.) celebration last fall was a good deal of an orgie at the expense of the government. The bill for wines, liquors and cigars was made out with unblushing particularity, and appeared approved by Senator Johnson and paid. The managers of the affair had worked it very shrewdly. They paid all the questionable bills out of the $40,000 appropriated, and left the legitimate expenses to be met in the deficiency bill. In this way the deficit was run up to over $32,000. In the bill presented by the committee are the following items:

9 gallons Madeira at $6	$54
3 doz cases Madeira at $12	36
8 gallons cob sherry	48
2 doz sherry	24
15 gallons 1830 brandy at $15	255
5 gallons pale brandy	20
5 gallons dark brandy	50
5 gallons port wine	30
2 cases whisky	24
230 cases champagne wine at $30	3,900
25 cases French claret	250
15 cases pale claret	150
68 gallons whisky	340
2 cases of Tom gin	25
3,200 Rina cigars at $120	400
3,600 Conchas at $165	594
2,000 Sandres at $170	340
4 cases Scotch whisky	30
3 cases lemons	36
1 gross fine cut	9
2,000 Lone Fisherman cigarettes	12

—with innumerable cases of beer, curacoa, appolinaris, congress water, etc., the total amounting to $17,460,70. There were returned goods to the amount of $930. The bill is approved by Senator Johnson, of Va., and allowed by congress.

Father Roverdy, vicar general to the bishop of Colorado, refused to allow the rites of the Catholic church administered over the remains of the late Don Miguel Oterea, a millionaire and one of the foremost men in New Mexico. The reason alleged was that Otereo died a Mason. A member of the Masonic order, assisted by an Episcopal clergymen, conducted the services.

Rev. T. Rucker of Banner, Waupaca, Co. received a call from Trinity Episcopal church, Aurora, Ill., and will move his family there at once.

MINNESOTA NEWS.

Minnesota Grand Lodge of Odd Fellows.

The thirtieth annual session of the Grand lodge of Odd Fellows of Minnesota convened in Masonic hall, at Hastings, on Wednesday last. The attendance was very large, so large that all sessions were held in Masonic hall, the halls of the societies there being entirely too small to contain the crowd in attendance. All the grand officers were present.

The report of the grand master showed the institution of seven new lodges, having from 30 to 115 members each. Contributions to the amount of $894.90 were reported raised from the various lodges for the benefit of the New Ulm sufferers.

The report recommended that the minimum for each degree be reduced to $1; that all desirous of availing themselves of the benefit of this reduction must do so before the first day of August, 1882.

The R. W. grand secretary and treasurer, Sherwood Hough of St. Paul, submitted his annual report, which was read and approved. The report showed that the number of lodges is 78; members in good standing, 4,349; paid for relief of brothers, $5,157.85; total relief, $8,494.47; total receipts by lodges, $41,690.06. The grand treasury receipts were $6,093.25; disbursements, $3,174.20; assets $2,874.25.

It was decided to postpone the competitive drill for the Encampment banner until such a time as terms could be mutually agreed, upon, probably some date next fall.

The following are the names and address of the grand officers of the R. W. Grand lodge of Minnesota, I. O. O. F., for the year 1882, elected at Hastings.

H. J. Strouse, Most Worthy Grand Master St. Paul.

H. C. Woodbury, Right Worthy Deputy Grand Master, Waseca.

E. C. Stacy, Right Worthy Grand Warden, Albert Lea.

Sherwood Hough, Right Worthy Grand Secretary and Treasurer, St. Paul.

Walter G. Dye, Right Worthy Grand Reporter, Winona.

APPOINTED OFFICERS.

Alexander Wilson, Grand Chaplain, St. Paul.

G. Hargensheimer, Grand Marshal, Rochester.

Charles Hensel, Grand Conductor, St. Peter.

Charles G. Hashaw, Grand Guardian, Minneapolis.

Joseph Lewis, Grand Messenger, Owatonna.

The next session of the Grand Lodge will be held at Owatonna, on the first Tuesday of June, A. D. 1883.

Minnesota Supreme Court Renders Another Bond Decision.

The supreme court last week filed a decision denying D. A. Secombe's application for an injunction restraining the state treasurer from paying interest on the new issue of railroad bonds, on the ground that the "Loan Bill" amendment to the constitution authorizing the issue of the old bonds was invalid. Secombe's application was first made to Judge Lochren of Minneapolis, and, being denied by him, appealed to the supreme court. The following is the syllabus of the decision:

The amendment to section 10, article 9, of the constitution of the State of Minnesota, adopted April 15, 1858, under the authority of which the Minnesota State railrord bonds were issued, valid and operative as a part of the constitution of the State.

Whatever irregularities, if any, existed in the mode of submitting it to the people, or of their adopting it, must be deemed cured by the subsequent admission of Minnesota as a State into the Union, and by the action of the State subsequent to its admission in recognizing this amendment as valid, and rectifying it by acting under its provisions.

Order denying the application of plaintiff for judgement enjoining the state treasurer from paying out of state funds the interest upon the state bonds issued under the act of November 4, 1881, in adjustment of the state railroad bonds, affirmed.

The governor's staff have been duly mustered in. They have decided to adopt the regulation uniform, substituting the military hat for the cap. Most of the staff will participate in the July encampment at White Bear in July next.

The Blue Ribon lodge, I. O. G. T., at Faribault, having failed to meet running expenses, concluded to cease work, and discontinued their meetings until they can reorganize under more favorable auspices.

At Moorhead, Lizzie Palmer, the seventeen year old daughter of Zachariah Palmer, mate on the steamer Grandin, was sent to the river to get a pail of water, fell in and was drowned. A drag net found the body.

Rev. Mr. Wilson, pastor of the Methodist Episcopal church in Red Wing, has caused some excitement by declaring his disbelief in a personal devil, and that the writings of Moses were of the nature of a fable.

Articles incorporating the Bishop Whipple school to be located at the city of Moorhead have been filed at the state capitol. The amount of capital stock shall be $25,000, divided into 500 shares of $50 each. The government of the school is vested in a board of trustees to be elected by the stockholders.

John Sundine's oldest daughter, Annie, was badly bitten by a vicious dog in Carver last week. Her cheek, neck and shoulder were badly torn, making a ghastly wound.

Numerous petty thefts from private houses have been made recently in Red Wing and Le Sueur.

At Lake City, Tim Foley, a leisure-loving young man, and Sam Strong, who has been employed as engineer on the steamer Clipper, but was lately discharged from that position, had a fight on Saturday. Strong resorted to his pocket knife, and while down he cut his assailant badly on the legs and slightly on other parts of the body, making six wounds in all.

A new settler who was turning up the virgin soil near St. Vincent plowed up a boot containing the bones of a human foot. The remains were examined and found to be those of Nathan Hutchins, who perished in the terrible blizzard which occurred in December, 1879.

Mrs. Ashelman of Fergus Falls, who has been suffering for some time past with an incurable disease, died at her parent's home in Northfield.

Vice President Hill of the Manitoba road, has completed the purchase of Hon. George L. Otis' beautiful property on Summit avenue near Third street, St. Paul, and it is further announced that the price paid was $60,000.

The state Horticultural society will have its summer meeting in Minneapolis on Tuesday and Wednesday, June 27th and 28th, in the agricultural department of the State university, when it is expected there will be a large exhibit of strawberries, raspberries, plants, flowers and garden vegetables.

An Unlucky Postmaster.

In the United States court of Winona, Minn., on Thursday last, Charles H. Slocum was araigned on two indictments, one for unlawful detention of a letter in the post-office at Blue Earth City while in the employ of the government as posmaster, and the other for embezzling the contents of the same. To the first indictment he pleaded guilty. The prisoner made a plea in his own behalf to the court, stating that last fall a man named Giblin, living in Iowa, sent a letter containing a draft to a man named Dolan at Blue Earth City. The accused, in his capacity as postmaster, delivered the letter to another person of a similar name, who forwarded it to a relative that had removed from Blue Earth City. This latter party returned the letter and draft to the postmaster at Blue Earth City, as on opening he found it was not intended for him. The accused continuing said he placed the letter with the draft in a private drawer among valuable papers for safe keeping until it should be called for, and was unaware that Dolan had made frequent inquiry for the letter. He stated that he had no intention of appropriating the draft to his own use. He alluded to his previous good character as substantiated by a list of prominent citizens of the state, which he submitted to the court, and concluded his appeal by imploring leniency. Mr. Slocum was completely overcome and gave way to tears as he closed. Judge Nelson after alluding to his violation of the postal laws thereby rendering himself amenable to punishment, said there were circumstances surrounding the case which would cause the court in its discretion to sentence him to pay a fine of $250, and be committed to the Winona county jail for thirty days.

Sentenced to Ten Years for Embezzlement.

In the United States District Court at Winona Minn. The grand jury presented four indictments against Douglas Vanderhoof for embezzlement of money from the First National bank, St. Paul. He was arrainged at the bar and pleaded guilty to one. United States District Attorney D. B. Searles then addressed the court, recounting the manner and times of the embezzlements so far as is known, and said while he felt great sympathy for the relatives and friends of the prisoner, he had no sympathy whatever for a man so lost to every sense of honor as to betray the confidence of his employers as Vanderhoof had done while occupying a responsible position as book keeper in their bank. It was known that the amount of his embazzlements reached $50,000 and it was beleived that they would approximate $100,000, and he believed a criminal so cool, so calculating, deserving of the fullest penalty of the law.

At the conclusion of his remarks Mr. C. D. Strong, the father-in-law of Vanderhoof, addressed the court in an earnest and pathetic appeal for leniency in passing sentence upon the prisoner. He reviewed his past history from his earliest acquaintance with him down to the present time, feelingly alluding to the trouble his indiscretion had brought upon innocent parties. Mr. Strong spoke for about half an hour, the court room, which was crowded, being hushed to stillness by his heartfelt appeal.

When he had concluded, Judge Nelson proceeded to pass sentence, saying in substance: I have known you for many years in the community where you have grown from youth to manhood. In a guilty moment you have committed a serious crime. You betrayed the confidence reposed in you by a national bank of St. Paul, where you held a responsible position. You embezzled the money belonging to this corporation and have incurred the penalty of a violated law. You had peculiar advantages for perpetrating this crime. For years you had enjoyed confidential relations with the chief manager of this association and they had no doubt of your integrity. You had every inducement to lead an honest life. You had a faithful and loving wife who relied on you you were revered and loved by children. It is distressing to think, that, casting aside all these influences to honest livelihood, in one guilty moment you destroyed your reputation, disgraced your family, and forfeited your liberty. He was sentenced to ten years at hard labor in the penitentiary at Stillwater.

After sentence was pronounced Vanderhoof was taken in charge by the sheriff and returned to the jail. He says his sentence is harder than he had anticipated, as in view of his having returned to the bank some $40,000 of the funds embezzled, he had hoped that his imprisonment would be limited to five years. He had invested the stolen funds in business enterprises of various kinds; $20,000 in one place, $5,000 in another and so on, besides using much of it in fast living.

Another Minnesota Lynching.

On Saturday, the 3d inst., the dead bodies of Edward Washington, surveyor and late inspector for the Minneapolis Mill company of Minneapolis, and Fred Feherbach were found at Red Eye, seventeen miles north of Perham, Otter Tail county. Washington was shot back of the right ear with a load of buckshot. Feherbach had his throat cut, a bullet wound in his left cheek and back of the left ear. Over the right eye a cut to the scalp, done by a club found near, covered with blood. Suspicion fell to Tibbetts, who fled into Dakota, and on Tuesday was captured at Bismarck and returned to Perham, Minnesota. On Tuesday morning about one o'clock, about twenty resolute men broke through the surrounding crowd and began to break in the outside door of the jail. It offered little resistance and they were soon inside.

The lynchers found hard work breaking in the door of Tibbett's cell. The sounds of the blows upon it could be heard a great distance. The crowd kept coming closer and closer, but were warned back in menacing tones by the lynchers. At last the door yielded to the blows, and their victim was at their mercy. They took hold of him roughly, and he exclaimed, "Don't boys; this is too rough." "G—d d—d you, you will think it rough!" was the harsh answer. He was taken out, and driven a short distance. A ladder had been provided and was braced up against a telegraph pole. A rope was thrown over one of the rounds, placed around the neck of the murderer, and in a few minutes all was over. No one but the lynchers were allowed to come near the scene of the hanging. All others were warned to keep away, and the warning was enforced by the showing of revolvers.

Tibbetts made a full confession Wednesday evening. He said he was alone in committing the deed, and told calmly the full story of the bloody affair. His story was substantially the same as the account already published. He killed Washington first, who died instantly, but he had a desperate struggle with Feherback. Yesterday he laughed at the crowd which met him on his return, but toward evening he became depressed, and seemed to have a presentiment of his fate. He sent for Father Buh and was baptized into the Catholic church. The lynching was well done and there were no baulks.

TIBBITTS IN BISMARCK.

While in the jail at Bismarck the lad was hysterical, alternating fits of hyenic laughter with flights of profanity which would put a pirate to blush. Dr. Bentley was called in to dress his finger and after the dressing had been applied he was asked how the injured member felt and tartly replied that it was in better shape than his neck would be when he got below. When taken to the train by the sheriff of Otter Tail county, the crowd began curging in to get a glimpse of him when he remarked to the conductor, for Christ's sake shut the door and charge an admission fee, and he remarked to the bystanders that they would have some fun when they arrived at Fargo. When a gaping member of the crowd was observed eyeing the young reprobate rather closely he sneeringly asked the fellow what he thought of his appearance. An old timer answered the query by remarking that he would look better under a flexible limb with a hempen cravat about his neck. To this sally he quickly and tartly responded, "well, I guess there will be a picnic of that kind when I get below." As the sequel showed the spirit of phrophecy rested heavily on him. His whole demeanor was that of a case of depravity, the joint inspiration of vicious literature, lax training and violated physical laws. In appearance Tibbitts was below the medium height for his age, stout, thick set and muscular. His face was of the square order of architecture, with massive jaws, low, receding forehead. His eyes were dark and deep set, and shot frutive glances out of the car window in the direction of the Black Hills with an occasional wistful look at the sheriff, who was watchful and on the alert. He was dressed in a rough but new and neat suit of grey clothes and slouch hat. When arrested he had but little money, having spent his ill-gotten gains on the boys at Fargo. He expected to work his way to Pierre on the Peninah, and then rely on a huge forty-four caliber Smith & Wesson revolver and forage off the country for a cow boy pony and provisions.

Another Alleged Defalcation in Scott County, Minn.

Shakopee Argus: Some trouble was had in affecting a settlement with Mr. Roderick O'Dowd when that gentleman was removed from the office of county treasurer, but the public supposed his accounts were finally adjusted. It will, therefore, be a surprise to the public when informed that ex-Treasurer R. O'Dowd is a defaulter to an amount yet unknown.

A few days since a widow living on Eagle creek went to the treasurer's office to pay the interest due upon a small principal due upon the purchase of school lands. To her surprise she was informed by the treasurer, Mr. Wm. Wilson, that last year's interest had not been paid, and none of the principal. She claimed to have paid, last year, $145 principal, and the interest due to that date, $11.90 and in substantiation of her statement exhibited Treasurer O'Dowd's receipt to that effect.

The Argus is reliably informed of other defalcations. They are coming to light day by day. Where they will end no one can tell.

A fine residence built by the late Hon. A. B. Foster at a cost of $100,000, in Waterloo, Canada, is reported to have been purchased for $30,000 by some nuns from Montreal for a nunnery.

Mary Clemmer, it is said, will soon unite her fortunes with those of a Washington correspondent of a Boston paper. Her first husband, Mr. Ames, from whom she has been divorced, was a Methodist minister.

CONGRESSIONAL.

WEDNESDAY JUNE 7.

SENATE.—The president sent the following nominations to the senate to be members of the tariff commission: Wm. A. Wheeler of New York, chairman; John L. Hayes of Massachusetts, Henry W. Oliver, Jr., of Pennsylvania, Austin M. Garland of Illinois, Jacob Ambler of Ohio, John S. Phelps of Missouri, Robert B. Porter of the District of Columbia, John W. H. Underwood of Georgia and Duncan F. Kenner of Louisiana.

The senate passed three bills for public buildings at Lynchburg, Va., Clarksburg, W. Va., and Camden, N. J., respectively.

A resolution from the committee on privileges and elections to pay the administratrix of John C. Underwood $5,000 for time and expenses of prosecuting his claim to a seat in the senate from Virginia, met with considerable opposition. Cockrell and Saulsbury disputed the assertion in the committee's report that Underwood was regularly elected, and Cockrell added "that at the time of the pretended election, Underwood was judge of the United States court, receiving a salary as such."

Mr. Sherman of the committee recommending the bill, said he had not been aware of that fact and intimated that he regarded it as fatal to the claim. The bill was then laid aside.

HOUSE.—Another raid on the treasury was inaugurated in the house, as soon as the journal had been read, by Mr. Scranton of Pennsylvania, who secured the passage of a bill appropriating $75,000 for a public building at Scranton. Emboldened by his success, Mr. Manning of Mississippi endeavored to secure similar action for Oxford, Miss.; but when he stated the town only had 3,000 inhabitants and paid but $80 per annum for the rent of a building for public purposes, the house rejected the bill, which asked for a $50,000 building.

Mr. Sparks rose to apologize to Sunset Cox for calling him "a little scamp" during the debate yesterday on the deficiency bill. The gentleman from New York kindly forgave the allusion.

The general deficiency appropriation bill was considered, and an interesting discussion took place on a motion to strike out the clause appropriating $150,000 for the bureau of construction and repair of the navy, in which the house was treated to the refreshing spectacle of Robeson criticising the naval policy of congress. The motion was voted down.

THURSDAY JUNE 8.

SENATE.—Mr. Hawley reported from the military committee a joint resolution appropriating $10,000, or as much thereof as may be needed to furnish food to people made destitute by the Mississippi floods in the state of Mississippi. He said planters there had been paying field hands in the expectation of being remunerated by the coming crop, but the new flood had dissipated these expectations, and made necessary this additional provision. The joint resolution passed.

The District of Columbia appropriation bill passed.

HOUSE.—The house unanimously passed a bill entitled "An act to amend the pension law by increasing the pension of soldiers and sailors who have lost an arm or leg in the service. But this is not what it really is. In the text is a significant clause which includes all those on the pension rolls, or who shall hereafter be granted a pension, "who shall have suffered disability equal thereto, shall be entitled to a pension of $40 per month." This clause, in the opinion of a pension office official, will flood the pension office anew with a very large class of pensioners, and if as liberally construed as other laws, will take a large amount from the public treasury. The bill was introduced by Bingham of Pennsylvania.

FRIDAY, JUNE 9.

SENATE.—Mr. Van Wyck introduced a resolution that action on the nomination for tariff commissioners be taken in open session. A bill passed authorizing and prescribing regulations for the extension of mail routes.

HOUSE.—The day was spent in consideration of the legislative, executive and judicial appropriation bill, and a proposition to equalize the salaries of house and senate employes by reducing the salaries of the latter was agreed upon.

The feature of the proceedings was the debate engendered by a proposition to turn the botanic garden over to the agricultural department and reduce the appropriation for its maintenance from $16,700 to $5,000. Mr Cook, the author of the movement, was supported by Calkins and Lefevre, but despite this strong array, the proposition was voted down by a decided majority. The attempt to deprive the members of their floral perquisites brought out the fact that no law exists for continuing the botanic garden, but that it has been tolerated for the past thirty or forty years, and liberal sums of money voted it, simply because it was convenient for the members to secure free flowers for female favorites.

SATURDAY, JUNE 10.

SENATE.—Not in session.

HOUSE.—The day was spent in discussing the legislative appropriation's bill. Everything moved smoothly until the war department was reached, when Mr. Steele of Indiana moved an amendment providing for the transfer of claims for stores from the quartermaster general's office to the court of claims. A heated debate sprang up, and the amendment was rejected. An attempt was made to raise the salary of the second deputy commissioner of the pension office from $2,400 per annum to $3,600, making the same as paid to the first deputy. Rejected. The feature of the day's proceedings was the discussion on an amendment proposed by Mr. Kasson of Iowa relative to the qualifications necessary for the additional clerks, whose duty it will be to expedite pension claims. They must be between the ages of eighteen and fifty years, of good moral character and physically able to perform the work.

Ex-Gov. Curtin of Pennsylvania, said that the government was under obligations to creditors made by solemn enactment for their services in putting down the rebellion, and delay in settling their cases could not be justified by splitting hairs and technicalities. When he had finished Mr. Robinson of Massachusetts, who was temporary presiding, decided the amendment not in order; and gave an elaborate reason, in which he quoted rule 21 of the digest for his authority.

MONDAY, JUNE 12.

SENATE.—The senate passed the Iowa judicial district bill in such a shape that it comes back to the house. The senate struck out the courts at Cedar Rapids and Davenport. The bill as it now stands leaves the present courts at Keokuk, Des Moines, Council Bluffs and Dubuque, and establishes in addition courts at Sioux City and Fort Dodge. The Sioux City and Missouri railroad was authorized to build a bridge across the Missouri. The judiciary committee reported a bill repealing the laws prescribing the iron-clad oath for ex-confederates. The Japanese indemnity bill was discussed and an amendment adopted paying back $785,000, the exact sum received from Japan. During the debate Ingalls and Morgan engaged in a bitter personal controversy.

Mr. Windom, chairman of the committee on foreign relations, from which the bill was reported, said he spoke deliberately when he asserted that to pass the bill as amended would be a burning shame to the United States. It was now admitted that $785,000 belonged to Japan and had been unjustly withheld.

HOUSE.—The senate amendment to the army appropriation bill fixing the age at which retirement shall be compulsory at sixty-four instead of sixty-two years, was concurred in, despite the recommendation of the conference committee to the contrary. Following is the compulsory retirement clause of the army appropriation bill as it finally passed the house:

"That on and after the passage of this act, when an officer has served thirty-five years either as an officer or soldier in the regular or volunteer service he shall, if he make application therefor to the president, be retired from active service and placed on the retired list; and when an officer has served forty years, either as an officer or soldier in the regular or volunteer service, or is sixty-four years of age, he shall be retired from active service and placed on the retired list, and no act now in force shall be so construed as to limit or restrict retirement as herein provided for."

Mr. Dunnell introduced a bill for a public building at Winona and has written to Mayor Lamberton for statistics of federal business in that city. The entire cost of the building provided by the bill is $100,000. Of this $20,000 is appropriated to be expended for the purchase of a site and towards the construction of the building.

A bankruptcy bill and a bill creating a board of inter-state commerce as a bureau of the interior department were reported, and the house spent the rest of the day on District of Columbia matters.

DEFECTIVE PAGE

THE RESTLESS BOY IN CHURCH.

How he turns and twists,
And how he persists
In rattling his heels;
How uneasy he feels,
Our wide-awake boy in church!

Then, earnest and still,
He attends with a will,
While the story is told
Of some old hero bold,
Our dear, thoughtful boy in church!

But our glad surprise
At his thoughtful eyes
Is turned to despair,
As he twitches the hair
Of his little sister in church!

Still, each naughty trick flies
At a look from the eyes
Of his mother so dear,
Who thinks it best to sit near
Her mischievous boy in church.

Another trick comes?
Yes. His finger he drums,
Or his kerchief is spread
All over his head,
And still we take him to church?

He's troublesome? Yes,
That I'm bound to confess;
But God made the boys,
With their fun and their noise,
And He surely wants them in church!

Such children, you know,
Long, long years ago
Did not trouble the Lord,
Though disciples were bored;
So we'll still keep them near Him in church

FIRST AND LAST QUARREL.

BY ROSE TERRY COOKE.

"I don't care!"

"Well, I dono as I do!"

And they had just been just six weeks married, these two.

Pretty Sallie Masters and Will Gray were poor people; he was a farmer, and she had worked in a factory in Lynn.

It was like a new life to get out into the sweet country, but she knew nothing at all about farm work and cared less; it was all new to her, and at first was very hard.

Then she had a quick temper and a quick tongue, and Will was the only son of a widow and had always had his own way.

His mother was dead when he married Sallie, or he could not have brought a wife to the lonely farm, for it would not support three people as yet, though Will worked hard to make it pay, and the year before he had received five hundred dollars from a railroad company for the right to run their road straight through his front yard.

This seemed a fortune to Will, and he thought very little of the road being only a few rods from his door, in comparison with the money which enabled him to buy a wood-lot bordering on his farm and a piece of meadow on the other side. But when Sallie came there she complained a good deal of the noise the engines made, and scolded to think the wagon never could come up to the door, for she was afraid to cross the track in it, and the barn lay on the other side of both road and railway.

However, a thing that can't be cured must be endured, so she set herself to the endurance.

But butter-making and cooking were worse troubles to her, and to-day Will had grumbled at the specks in the butter, and pushed his plate away at breakfast because the buckwheat cakes were so sour. Sally had been afraid they would freeze in the pantry, so she set them on the shelf above the stove, and they were spoiled.

How she wished that she had had a home and a mother to teach her home duties, instead of being an orphan ever since she could remember and working many years in a factory.

But Will never thought of that; he fancied a woman knew housework if she did not anything else, and he had to take a long drive to-day and should miss the good breakfast he really needed, and he felt very cross.

He pushed his chair back and said:

"I can't eat those things!"

"Well, you no need to!" snapped Sally, who was just ready to cry, but would not show it for the world.

"I had ought to have some breakfast to go thirty miles on, and I'm goin' over to Mystic to-day."

"I hope'n trust you'll get somethin, you can eat over there. I s'pose 'Phrony knows how to make good things."

"I bet she does!" said Will, emphatically.

Now 'Phrony was a pretty, bright; capable girl, Will's own cousin, and he had never thought of marrying her. She was just like his sister, for till very lately Uncle Dan had lived on the next farm, and the children had always played together.

But Sally had met Sophronia before and after her own marriage, and in her foolish heart had grown jealous of her beauty and capacity to do all kinds of home work.

This morning the mention of Mystic, the village where Uncle Dan lived now, was the drop too much.

Sally's face flamed and her eyes grew dark.

"Perhaps you'd better go to Mystic when you get there seein' things ain't to your likin' here!" she said with bitter emphasis.

"Mabbe I had, if you can't learn how to cook vittles half way decent," was Will's spiteful response.

"I'm sure I don't care," she answered.

"Well, I dono as I do," he replied, and walked across to the barn.

Sally was so angry that she flew around the kitchen as if she stepped on air; she was in one of those rages that exalt the body with the passion of the mind, and make any action easy while the inner tempest lasts.

It seemed to her as if she heard in her own ears the boiling of her rage; she certainly did not hear out-door sounds at all; it was accidental that in stepping past the window, she saw Will drive off down the hard road without so much as looking back to his home. She had not heard the sleigh-bells at all.

If some one else had been there for her to talk to, probably she would have cooled down sooner, as speech is a safety valve many times in an over-burdened heart.

But she was all alone in the house, and the nearest neighbor lived round a hill out of sight.

And as she flew round putting the dishes away and setting back the table in the bare, silent room, its only outlook sheets of dazzling snow, grey woods with here and there a dull-green cedar, or a round, flat cyprus on the barren hillside, and one expanse of stainless, sunny blue above, her thoughts ran riot.

She looked back to the time of her marriage, and scorned herself for having believed Will ever loved her. Just for a few hard words you ask? Yes, only that.

"Words break no bones," the proverb says, but they break hearts, which is worse; and words mean very much to women, though very little to a man.

Will, by this time, was whistling along in the old sleigh, not thinking at all of his parting with Sally, but of the feed and flour he must buy in Mystic, the price of cranberries and the probable weight of his pig—it was so near killing time.

But poor Sally, pitiable as well as blameable, for to have a quick, high temper is worse for its possessors than for anybody else, still brooded over her trouble.

She blamed Will for his hateful words, excused herself and pitied herself for her lonely, motherless life and inexperience, and planned a great many things to say and do that should show Will she would not be trodden on and abused weakly and meekly. She finished her active work, built up the fire and sat down to her mending; but by this time she had come to tears—she felt so sorry for herself—and they fell so fast she could not darn.

Just then the morning train thundered by and spun out of sight round a sharp curve.

She remembered that she must go out and gather the eggs as she always did about that time—she was so afraid to cross the road unless a train had just passed.

She did not put on her hood, for the day was so bright—and her head was so hot with anger and crying that the cool air was refreshing—but ran across hastily; there were plenty of eggs to-day, but she had no basket large enough to hold them, and to her astonishment she found Will had not fed either the cow or the pig, and her abated anger rose to think that he had gone off without doing the barn-work.

"That's a little too much," she said to herself. "I ain't a-goin' to do his chores for him, anyway! I've got enough to do in the house, and don't suit mister at that. If he think's he's got a dumb slave to work for him, he's mistook. I—'" here the cow lowed and the pig took up his own grunting complaint. They had heard her voice and knew that there was a chance of breakfast.

Sally has a tender, pitiful heart for all her temper.

"Poor critters," she said, "I dono as I had ought to be ugly to them, 'cause he's ugly to me. I'll run over and fetch a basket and get my hood and mittens anyway. I'll feed 'em, so there!" and boiling over again with fresh wrath she left the barn and slammed the door behind her.

Meantime Will went on his way to Mystic, where he arrived in due time, did his errands and went to Uncle Dan's, where he found a good and abundant dinner, and a plentiful meal of chicken pot-pie, mashed potato, boiled turnips, new rye bread, and baked Indian pudding put him into excellent humor, so when 'Phrony, who had been before too busy serving and eating to talk, asked: "How's Sally?" he said, very honestly—

"Why, she's well, real well; but she got kinder put out with me this morning and I don't blame her a bit, for I began it, kinder faultin' my breakfast, and I guess I made her mad; shouldn't wonder."

"Why, Will!" said 'Phrony, with an accent of reproach that said more than her words.

"'Twould be strange if she did know about housework at once," said mild Aunt Gray; "she never had no mother nor no folks so's she could learn; be sort o' softly to her, she's a lonesome little creetur, with nobody but you to hold on to, ye know."

Will's really kind heart began to trouble him; he went out again into the street, ostensibly to finish his errands, but really to buy Sallie a rose-pink silk tie that would look so pretty in contrast with her rich dark hair and eyes, and perhaps cast a glow on her too pale, smooth cheek.

For Will had an instinct of taste in his uncultivated nature, and knew very well how pretty and refined-looking his wife was even beside 'Phrony's less delicate and more blooming beauty.

So he stepped into the sleigh and drove off, thinking how he would "make friends" with Sallie, and how that dimple in her cheek would come and go and her lovely eyes brighten when she saw the pink tie.

The road seemed very long, for he knew he had left home in a passion, and now he was sorry. He got there at last just before sun-down, and driving into the barn was received with a chorus from crow and pig.

"Jerus'lem." "I never fed them critters this morning! I did loose my head, that's a fact. Well, I've got to tend to 'em now. Wonder Sally didn't. Mabbe, though, she didn't come over, or if she did she fetched the eggs and didn't look at nothing else.

Very speedily he fed the hungry beasts and put out his horse, resolving to go in to supper and finish the barn-work afterward for he was hungry.

There was no light in the house, which looked rather cheerless, but Sally was frugal, and sat far into the twilight without a lamp, so he went on and opened the kitchen door.

A cold chill struck him; the place was empty, still, fireless; a rat ran across the floor as he stepped in.

Nobody was there.

The low light of the setting sun struck across the snow-fields with a wan glitter into the bare room; the fire was out, the stove cold. Behind the door into the shed hung Sally's hood and shawl, and her mittens were on the shelf. Sally must be in the bed-room, sick no doubt.

With an anxious heart will opened the door into it. Nobody was there, the room was in its usual cheerless order; the bed white and smooth as the outer drifts; the white curtained windows shutting out even that wintry sunshine. Probably Sallie had put on her Sunday cloak and bonnet, the same dark-ren velvet turban and jaunty, jet-trimmed sacque she had looked so well in when they were married. Almost as if he were afraid of seeing a ghost, Will opened the door to see, there the things hung against the wall, straight and smooth, sacque and shawl, too, and the toque was on the shelf above.

Then he opened the tiny parlor with awful misgivings. The andirons shone in the open fire-place; the wax-fruit was under its glass shade, between the glass candle-sticks on the shelf; and the Bible, the photograph album, the copy of Tupper's Proverbial Philosophy—all wedding presents—occupying a little round table in the middle of the room, and took a ghastly tint from the green paper shades and the wan light of dying day.

Everything was as prim, as dull and as musty as ever. Sally was not there.

There was but one room up-stairs, and either side of it a dark attic; he lit his lantern and searched there, but found nothing.

Then he took a bee-line for the nearest neighbor's house, but though the family were full of pity and astonishment and suggestion, he did not find his wife.

"Hev ye s'arched the barn?" queried old Grandsir Phelps from the chimney-corner.

Will had not thought of that; so Royal Phelps went back with him and peered into every nook and corner of the bin, mow, harness-shed and cellar.

They found the eggs she had left in the hay, but they did not find Sally. Then the two men went over the house again, peered suddenly down into the well, and weighing the bucket with heavy stones and lengthening the rope, let it down till they heard the wood strike hard against the rocky bottom from whence bubbled up that living spring. Nobody was there.

"You haint tramped around the lots any, hev ye?" inquired Royal Phelps.

"Nowhere only tow'rds your house," answered Will.

"Well, then, when mornin' comes we kin track her; for it snowed about an hour here arter breakfast, and there haint ben no passin' onto the road sence, for I've ben a-choppin' 'long side on't the hull time to-day; and I took a bite along so's not to stop; I was boun' to finish up to-day."

But would that morning ever come? It seemed not to Will, he walked the house while Royal snored in the rocker, and recalled with despair and distress how he and Sally had parted in the morning in anger; parted now, it seemed for the last time.

He had not much imagination, but he had enough to conjure dreadful things about his wife's fate. All alone there in the farm-house what might not have happened? Or, more probably, had she not fled from him forever, afraid of his temper and his tongue? He blessed the shower of snow that had fallen in his absence and must tell the story of her flight; and he made a few but very earnest resolutions, as to his future conduct towards her—if indeed, any future found them once more together.

But morning came, and on no field or road, not even on the railway track in either direction, was there a foot-print except those of Will's old horse and the two men.

Sally's light feet had not traversed that yielding surface; nobody had been there.

Then Will broke down; without food or sleep, oppressed by the awful mystery of his loss, as well as by the loss itself, he grew half-crazy, sobbed, raved and tramped the house, till Royal Phelps at last went over to fetch his wife, with the sage remark:

"He's past my handlin'; I guess women-folks'd know better how to fetch him to."

So Mrs. Phelps came over, made some hot coffee and persuaded him to drink it, set things to rights a little, and prepared to get dinner; but Will still lay on his face in the bed-room, as wretched and hopeless as a man could be.

Suddenly a horse's hoofs beat on the crusted snow up to the back door.

Will jumped up and rushed out, and a man handed him a telegram; he did not hear, while he was opening it, the bearer's explanation.

"It come to Taunton deepott for ye, and the operator said that 'twas real important, an' you'd give me a dollar to fetch it."

Will did not answer; His brain reeled as he read:

"William Gray, Taunton. Your wife is at Seyms Station, very ill."

Can I go back to Taunton with you?' he said to the man, handing the telegram to Mrs. Phelps, with a light in his eyes that told the relief he was scarcely conscious of as yet.

"Reckon you kin, for another dollar" and with a nod to the astonished Mrs. Phelps, Will was off, and in an hour was seated in the train for Seyms Station.

The story is strange but true; when Sally clammed the barn-door behind her she pulled her apron over her head and ran across the road safe in the knowledge that the morning express had passed. The light fall of snow pulled the sound of a special freight-train slowly rounding the corner just at that moment, and Sallie was struck by the cowcatcher as she stepped on the track, and was thrown violently to one side.

Stunned by the blow, she lay on the ground unconscious. She did not hear the cry of the engineer, who had witnessed the accident, did not know that the train had stopped, or that she was surrounded by a group of strange men. The engineer and one of the brakemen entered the house and found it deserted. No other dwelling was in sight.

To leave a woman laying insensible in an empty house was out of the question and so, at last, after calling in vain for assistance, they laid her in the conductor's car to carry her to the nearest station some miles further on.

When she regained her consciousness, it was her turn to feel those pangs of regret and repentence that Will suffered, and to make resolves of her own, if ever she returned to live up to them.

She could not move or speak when the train stopped and the men took her from the car supposing she was perhaps fatally injured.

TOLD IN HIS OWN WAY.

Testimony in the Trial of Bob Tompkins.

From Texas Siftings.

A colored man named Bob Tompkins was on trial last week before an Austin Justice for assault. Old Uncle Mose was one of the leading witnesses for the state. The main point was whether or not Tompkins had given any provocation to bring on the row.

"Now, tell this jury all you know about the affair," said the Justice.

"Kin I tell de jury all I knows in my own way?" asked old Mose.

"Yes tell the jury what you know in your own way."

Old Mose turned solemnly to the expectant jurymen:

"Gem'mens ob de jury, you am de meanest-lookin' crowd I eber seed——"

"Stop!" bawled the attorney for the state.

"Your Honor will incarcerate the witness for contempt of court!" howled the attorney for the prisoner.

The foreman of the jury got up and asked the court to protect the jury from insult.

"Witness, if you insult the jury again I shall certainly resort to extreme measures."

"I'm not gwine ter consult nobody ef you don't interfere wid me," said old Mose, sullenly.

"Proceed."

"Gem'mens ob de jury, you am de meanest-lookin' crowd eber I seed outside ob a jail——"

The prosecuting attorney jumped up and down. The foreman of the jury once more howled "Your Honor!" The constable laid his heavy hand on the collar of old Mose, when the latter calmly repeated to the jury:

"You am de meanest-lookin' crowd eber I seed outside ob a jail. Dem was de berry words de prisoner dar used when he fust come inter de bar room, and which led to de row."

The foreman sat down quick. The attorneys doubled up like jackknives with suppressed laughter. His honor smiled. The spectators roared; while old Mose, with a surprised look of childish innocence, once more said emphatically to the cowed jurymen:

"You am de meanest-lookin' crowd eber I seed outside ob de jail."

The Great Grandson of the Two Most Powerful Monarchs.

The birth of a son and heir to Prince Frederick William of Prussia produces what is probable an unprecedented state of affairs, There are now four generations of Hohenzollerns, the emperor of Germany being at the top and the baby born a few weeks ago at the bottom of the tree. The emperor is hale and hearty, in spite of his 85 years. Next comes his son, the Crown Prince, who married the Princess Royal of England in 1858. In the following year their son, Prince William was born, and in Februray, 1881, this prince married the Princess Augusta Victoria of Holstein-Augustenberg. A few weeks ago this princess presented her youthful spouse with a bouncing boy. Whether the latest addition to this long-lived race will ever get a chance to try on the imperial diadem, which represents probably the greatest power in Europe, remains to be seen; but assuredly he is a most important atom of humanity. His cradle contains the great grandson of two of the most puissant monarchs in the world—the emperor of Germany and the queen of England—and it is to be hoped that the old people won't spoil the little fellow.

The Duty of Newspapers.

When experienced, practical and unprejudiced physicians widely endorse and recommend a medicine, knowing from the ingredients it contains that it is nature's best assistant as a health renewer, especially in curing impure blood, dyspepsia, kidney and lung diseases, female complaints and general weakness, then indeed, should the newspaper press of the country give publicity to the fact. We refer to Dr. Guysott's Yellow Dock and Sarsaparilla, a medicine of which over a million bottles were sold last year, without one single instance of complaint.—Times. Ask your druggist to get it for you.

A little granddaughter of Andrew D. White, of Cornell University, just born in Paris, receives the name of Elizabeth Cady Staton.

An editor who does not wish his name mentioned, writes as follows: "Excessive mental activity seriously affected my health. My kidneys and liver gave me greatest annoyance. Severe headaches often made me unfit for work. Milky urine and other symptoms gave evidence of physical decay, Dr. Guysott's Yellow Dock and Saraparilla banished every felling of distress. I think it the best medicine in the world, and shall do all I can to increase its sale."

Prince Halim is the most probable successor to Tewfik Pasha as khedive of Egypt. He would be hailed as a wise ruler by the foreign element on the Nile.

FARM AND HOUSE.

Cooking Receipes.

LEMON PIE.—Three cups of white sugar, three tablespoonfuls butter, three eggs, three large lemons, three teacups boiling water, three tablespoonfuls corn starch. Directions: Mix butter and sugar in a bowl; then wet the corn starch with a little cold water, keeping it over the fire until it thickens. Now pour it over the butter and sugar, and set it away to cool. When it is cold, add the juice and grated peel of the lemons (removing the seeds) and the beaten eggs. Two pies. Bake without top crust.

PARSNIP FRITTERS.—Scrape, and, if large, cut them; put them into well salted boiling water and boil until tender; then mash them, adding to four or five parsnips a heaping teaspoonful of flour, one or two eggs well-beaten, pepper and salt to taste. Form the mixture into cakes three-quarters of an inch thick and two and a half inches in diameter, and fry them on both sides a delicate brown in a little hot butter. Serve hot.

VEAL SWEETBREADS WITH MACARONI.—Choose two large sweetbreads and lard them with bacon; let them boil for 15 minutes, then plunge them into cold water. Place them in a pan, dredge them with flour, and half a pint of water, a little mace, pepper, and salt; set them in the oven to brown for about 20 minutes. Have some macaroni boiled, drain it, and cut it into very small rings; place it in a dish, lay the sweetbreads upon it, add an ounce of butter to the gravy, thicken it with a little flour, squeeze a little lemon juice into it, let it just boil up and pour over the sweetbreads. Serve with sliced lemon and curled parsley.

SPRING CARROTS AND CREAM.—Choose very small carrots, scrape them well, cut them into halves, and blanch them for two minutes in salted water; put them into a stew-pan with some butter, add a little salt and sugar, let them fry gently until the moisture is reduced; sprinkle a little flour over them, add a small quantity of good white stock; let it boil and remove it to the side of the fire; when the carrots are done thicken them with the yolks of two eggs beaten smooth with milk or cream, and add a pinch of grated nutmeg and a piece of butter; as the butter dissolves dish them up.

Comforting to Maiden Ladies.

Jennie June (Mrs. Croly) very sensibly questions why the childish timidity and prejudice that characterize so many women is an outgrowth of conditions, or an element of character? And to this she adds; It is proved that women can live, can love, can work together—that in short they possess in themselves all the springs of a life as active, as far-reaching, as true, and as divine as any that has ever been experienced by men. There is no doubt that it is a good thing for men and women to live and love and marry, and lay the foundation of good government in happy homes; but life is good of itself, and the woman's horizon is not, and ought not to be bounded by marriage. Her capacities for loving and enjoying exist just the same, whether she has a husband or not; and their are springs in life which domestic routine, though willingly accepted and joyfully performed, may fail to satisfy. For those women who do not marry, life has still a storehouse of treasurers, which need only to be believed in and worked for to be given up as fully and freely as to men. It is something for women to be no longer debarred from doing; it is something for women to be no longer debarred from loving. It is much to have learned that women can not only feel love, but inspire love for each other; that they can cultivate a sense of duty and obligation toward each other as well as toward men, and live happy lives together unmixed by anxieties, unmarred by jealousies and unfaithfulness.

The Complete Summer Costume.

A speciality of the season is the complete dress, black or cream color, with lace veiling, and accompanied by bonnet and parasol complete. The distinction is largely due to the depth and beauty of the lace trimming and the finish and harmony of the entire costume. The foundation is usually satin surah, the lace, Spanish point, often so deep that two widths of it—one laid across the front of the skirt the other in close paniers upon the sides—will cover it except the fine kilted flowers, and a scant puffing which serves as a heading to these. The lace is also deftly and tastefully woven into the drapery at the back, forms the mantle or vigite with its neat ruffled collar and flouncing, and borders the rich parsol which alone shows a sky of old gold or ruby high upon the inside. The effect of the lace on the richest costumes is augmented by a fine embroidery of jet which is used in broad bands and panels, and is suplemented by a small bonnet entirely of jet. Of course the costume is weighty, but it is very effective, and for a lady who desires a dark and striking toilet without much regard to cost there is nothing more distinguished. A lighter all black dress, and one whom those ladies would prefer who do not like and will not wear jet, is of black embroidered nuns' veiling over satin surah used in the same way as Spanish lace. The hat is a black chip, large, and of the "creole" or indented form, and trimmed with a profusion of feathers and a facing of silk net. Nearly all special summer costumes are accompanied by parasols, and many by a fan to match. The new French sateens are sent in boxes, accompanied by these accessions, and I have in a previous letter described the cheese cloths with cretonne appliqued, or bands embroidered, which were completed by the addition of bonnet and parasol. The fashion is a pretty one in cottons, but it is an expensive one in silks and satins covered with lace or embroidery, and not likely to become popular. The "lace" effect upon and in materials, cotton, and wool, have not had the success that was anticipated for them by dealers. Upon cotton such effects are thrown away in the simple striped mesh which only disfigured the surface of the fabric. Had they been made in lace patterns, and arranged as borders, perhaps the result would have been different, but hardly, for trimming laces are so pretty and cheap that there is no object in so palpable an imitation which has not the grace of the original.

The woolen lace seemed to deserve success, for as a material for overdresses it is charming and obtainable in black, white, and collors; but it is somewhat expensive, ($1.50 per yard) and being open requires to be made over silk, so that it is a costly purchase by the time the requisite Spanish lace trimming has been added. The cream patterns are, however, lovely over pale blue, and can be arranged even more gracefully and to better advantage than lace itself. It may also be used in the cream tints over black, pink, heliotrope, and cream satins, thus greatly reducing the expense while the effect is preserved, and the costume rendered even more appropriate for summer afternoon wear, little fetes, croquet parties, and the like.—Jennie June.

Haunted Me.

A workingman says: "Debt, poverty and suffering haunted me for years, caused by a sick family and large bills for doctoring, which did no good. I was completely discouraged, until one year ago, by the advice of my pastor, I procured Hop Bitters and commenced their use, and in one month we were all well, and none of us have been sick a day since; and I want to say to all poor men, you can keep your families well a year with Hop Bitters for less than one doctor's visit will cost."—Christian Advocate.

A Specimen of Plain Talk.

In promulgating your esoteric cogitations, articulating your superficial sentimentalities and amicable, philosophical, or physchological observations, beware of platitudinous pondorosity. Let your conversational communications possess a clarified conciseness, a compact comprehensibleness, coalescent consistency, and a concatenated cogency. Eschew all conglomerations of flatulent garrulity, jejune babblement, and asinine affectations. Let your extemporaneous descantings and unpremeditated expaciations have intelligibility and veracious vivacity, without rhodomontade or thrasonical bombast. Sedulously avoid all pollysyllabic profundity, pompous peolixity, psittaceous vacuity, ventriloquil verbosity, and vaniloquent vapidity. Shun double ententes, prurient jocosity, and pestiferous profanity, obscurant or apparent. In other words talk plainly, briefly, naturally, sensibly, truthfully, purely. Keep from "slang"; don't put on airs; say what you mean; mean what you say. And don't use big words!

During the war I was injured in the stomach by a piece of a shell, and have suffered from it ever since. About four years ago it brought on paralysis, which kept me in bed six months, and the best doctors in the city said I could not live. I tried Brown's Iron Bitters and now after taking two bottles I am able to get up and go around and am rapidly improving.

Referee Sale.

The referee of the Horace Thompson Estate, will sell lots 2 & 3, sec, 9, Young America township, at St Paul on July 31, 1882. The notice of Referee Sale appears in this issue of the HERALD. Those wishing to purchase should bear the time of sale in mind.

Allen's Cough Balsam is the Best in the world. We can confidently recommend this article as being far superior to all others. We have sold it for years, and have yet to hear of a single case where it failed to give perfect satisfaction. It is exceedingly pleasant to use. Children cry for it. It is perfectly harmless and very efficient. Price, 25c, and 50c, $1. per bottle. For sale by Jos. Franken, Druggist.

☞ Rumors of "Burglars" intending to make Chaska a call, aroused our people, and caused them to prepare for business, and we predict for them a warm reception at the hands of our citizens whenever the call is made.

☞ Fresh Pickles at Youngs.

Our Fire Department.

We are informed that our village council at their last meeting, determined upon purchasing a "Fire Engine" for our Fire Department and instructed the committee upon public improvement, consisting of Peter Iltis, John Dols and Henry Strobach, to correspond with different manufacturers in regard to price, quality of engines &c. The fire department also appointed a committee of three to act with the council in this matter, and determine what kind of an engine will best serve the purposes of a village the size of Chaska. The Foreman appointed the following committee on part of the company. F. W. Henning, Joseph Ess and L. W. Noble.

We hope now that the two committees will go to work at once and give us something that will enable us to protect our property in case the "fire fiend" should break out in the business part of our village.

Building Operations.

Leonard Grates has commenced work on the foundation for his new brick residence, which will be 32 x 44, two story with basement and gravel roof. The building when completed will be one of the best private residences in our village.

Work has also been commenced on the foundation of the new frame residence for the Pastor of the Moravian Church. The site chosen for the new building is just west of the Church, fronting on 3d St., and will occupy a very commanding position. The building will be a two story structure with wing, and will be a credit to our pretty village when completed. The lumber is upon the ground for the same.

John Janitzki, has a new one and a half frame dwelling house up and enclosed, situated on the corner opposite Matt. Schmidt's dwelling house.

Several other small buildings have been erected in various parts of town by laborers on our brick yards, whose names are unknown to us.

Burkhart Bros., new store building is being plastered and will soon be ready for occupancy. It is the largest store building in town, and a credit to the village and the enterprising proprietors.

John Etzell's new Hotel building is being plastered this week by Mr. Grates and will be veneered with brick the latter part of next month.

The 4th of July.

In the last issue of the Valley Herald it was briefly suggested that some one should "set the ball rolling" with regard to the celebration of the 4th of July. Now, as far as "balls" are concerned I do not think there will be any material scarcity, judging from precedent, but as far as a really patriotic celebration is concerned I would like to say my mite in the way of encouraging. The "4th" is one of our national holidays and as such it serves to aid in keeping our nation bound together.

In a country like ours where there is a constant influx of immigrants almost entirely ignorant of the prineiples on which our government is based, we should rise at least one day in the year, like the "4th", for the purpose of implanting in the breasts of these, as it were new-born citizens, as well as our rising generation the true motives and ideas of freedom. The "4th" should be a day of national enjoyment, on which we gratefully remember the selfsacrificing deeds of our forefathers, but not a day of BESTIAL jollification on which we forget the respect due the dignity of our manhood and descend into the lower degrees of conduct unbecoming sovereign citizens of this free Republic. Therefore, let us have a genuinely patriotic celebration, one calculated to awaken in all the love of freedom and of a free country.

C. D. S.

PERSONAL.—Our old friend Fred Damschen, of Pelican Rapids, Otter Tail County, and formerly one of the prominent citizens of Carver County, paid our office a visit last week, and we regret our absence from home very much, as we always found it a pleasure to meet Mr. Damschen. Fred has rented his farm and is now running a saw mill at Pelican Rapids, and reports his business excellent, which will be gratifying news to his many friends in this County.

Mr. A. G. Ansell, of the Glencoe Job office, was in town on Tuesday, and made us quite a pleasant visit.

Gottlieb Radde, of Waconia was in town on Monday, and we acknowledge a pleasant call.

Peter Iltis, went down to the cities to secure "attractions" for the 4th which he proposes to celebrate in grand style.

Mrs. Geo. Mix of Waconia, and Mrs. Frank Gifford of Louisville, Scott County were visiting in town on Tuesday.

Delicacies.

Swiss cheese, Milwaukee summer sausage and Prussian sardines just received at H. Young's.

Pic-Nic.

The Public School Pic-nic which was held in Brinkhaus's grove last Friday was an enjoyable affair for young and old, especially the young.

At half past nine o'clock the pupils formed in line at the schoolhouse, each bearing a flag; and while singing "The Red White and Blue," marched through town and out to the pic-nic grounds where suitable preparations had been made for their entertainment. After a short rest and a song the real business of the day began. For a time it seemed that a famine would be the inevitable result of the onslaught made upon provisions, but fortunately no such result followed. After dinner, games, swinging, singing and speeches was the order of the day until after four o'clock P. M. when young and old homeward plod their weary way; and many af the older ones who had climbed the hill in the afternoon's sun, agreed with the poet, that—"a man of pleasure is a man of pains."

☞ We are without our usual batch of Waconia items this week. We presume our correspondent's letter failed to reach us in time, and trust that in the future they will be on time.

The case of the State of Minnesota vs Ferdinand Brandeburg, of Laketown, was tried before Justice Iltis last Monday, a jury being empanneled, who after hearing all of the evidence returned a verdict of 'not guilty.' The complaining witness Andrew Manuel, paid the cost of the trial. It seems to be a kind of a neighborhood quarrel.

☞ The "Carver County Bank" have been repainting the interior of their offices, and otherwise improving things, and now looks as neat as a new pin.

Hillman, who has been under careful treatment at the Sargent House in our village. The Rev. gentleman has been sojourning at the "Home-like retreat" of the Judge for some time already, and has been the recipient of many sympathetic calls from the members of his charge, and others; yesterday, an old Key Stone State acquaintance of 16 years standing, whom he had not seen for nearly eight years, and who had been, for six years a college class mate with him, paid him a visit.

FOR full telegraphic news see second page, inside columns.

They have a University in Minneapolis where they make bachelors of the ladies. See Pioneer-Press of June 2d. We don't believe in this; the institution ought to be suppressed, there are bachelors enough in the country now.

A terrible tornado swept over Grinnell and Malcome, Iowa, on last Saturday night, killing upwards of 45 persons and injuring some 150 or more, and destroying $500,000 worth of property. The storm was the most destructive that ever visited that section of the Country.

Up in the fifth congressional district the fight between Kindred and Knute Nelson, has assumed the "appearance and aspect" of a regular "Kilkenny fight" in which the palmy days of "Boss Tweed" are vividly brought to mind. Money and bar room influence seems to be "king in that realm." The people should take the matter in their own hands and "nominate and elect" a new man who is entirely free from the undue influences used by both of the present candidates. However, it is a republican fight and no "funeral of our own."

A brave policemen of St. Paul, by the name of Daniel O'Connell, was found dead on Summit Avenue, last Saturday morning with a bullet hole through his brain. It seems that he attempted to arrest two night burglars who had secreted themselves in a vacant lot at 3,30 in the morning and while in the act of searching one, the other shot him dead. A reward of $500, is offered by the Mayor of St. Paul for the arrest of the guilty parties. A subscription is being taken up for the benefit of his family. His funeral was very largely attended.

CARVER.

W. C. Bredenhagen, Esq., is building a handsome new residence on a commanding site in the western part of town on the side hill. Messrs. Enger & Hanson have the contract.

Olof Hanson, has purchased a lot and will shortly commence building a family residence for himself. Olof deserves a good house.

Mrs. Jacob Buche, has just given her building a new coat of paint, which helps its appearance amazingly.

The brick manufacturing interest of the village is rapidly developing into considerable magnitude and will prove a great benefit to the village in a few years.

Several small dwellings have been erected in various parts of town this spring and summer of which no mention has been made.

Hollywood Sprigs.

Monday, June 5th was signalized by a visit of Co Supt. Vreyens to school no 8, where about 5 hours were spent among the children. In the address of Mr. Vreyens to the school, two points were particularly brought out, viz; that he was their friend, and that "knowledge is power." There was an attendance of 35 on that day; 69 are enroled. It appears that Hollywood is the banner township, among the rural districts as regards good attendance and enrollment at the summer schools, and is even ahead of the attendance to be met with in some of the village summer schools.

August Ninnemann, our popular assessor has been around.

There has been considerable improving of the public highways in our town. Sadly needed.

What the public schools of our town cost I dont know; however, this I do know that it is the duty of all citizens who are taxed for them, or not taxed, to see that every child gets the benefit of them. Ignorance is a crime, and parents and citizens permitting it should be held guilty.

Up to June 7th, 53 dogs had been licensed by clerk R. Zegelin.

Mr. Jacob Blum has 109 young ducks; when all together they present an interesting spectacle.

Helvetia has a good blacksmith, and in Mr. Hirschfeld a first class boot & shoe maker.

Some of our farmers have cleared considerable additional timber land in the past months, and much substantial fencing has been done.

Christian Hauter has purchased 320 acres of prarie land, (R. R.) in Dakota, somewhere near the Devils Lake and the Mouse River. Price was $2,60 an acre. Mr. H., was highly pleased with all he saw; praises the soil and good water, tho lamenting the want of pasturage.

Andrew Nelsons mother in-law tho' 84 yrs old, is still hale and hearty, and very active in work.

Republican County Convention.

The Republicans of Carver County will meet in convention at Waconia on Saturday the 24th day of June next at 12 o'clock M. for the purpose of choosing four [4] delegates to attend the Republican Congressional Convention for the 3d district of Minnesota, to be held at Glencoe July 13.

The several towns upon the basis adopted by the county committee, of one delegate for each town, and one for each twenty [20] republican votes or major part thereof cast for Governor in 1881, will be entitled to representation as follows.

Francis Oscar Gren of Minneapolis died last Saturday from an over-dose of Morphine. The doctor prescribed half a grain divided into four part,s one to be given only. Emily Wolfram who keeps the drug store and prepared the powders that resulted in the boy's death, testified that since her husband's death, March 26, she had "run the store alone." Her experience in drugs was that gained by helping her huspand in the store for the past thirty years. She had put up the prescription, supposing that it read fifty-five grains, but thought that was a big dose and concluded that it must be thirty-three. The jury returned a verdict exonerting the physcian, censuring Mrs. Wolfram and advising the passage of a law regarding the sale of poisonous drugs and the employment of competent cler

Personal and Impersonal.

The funeral of the late Frank M. Gove, took place in Milwaukee on Thursday. A large number of the friends and relatives of the deceased were in attendance, and the rooms and casket were appropriately decorated with neatly designed floral gifts. Among these were a handsomely coustrncted floral pillow, the offering of his wife, and a beautiful design of gates ajar, sent by the employes of the type foundry. The services at the house were conducted by Rev. Dr. Artly, and were in charge of the local order of the Loyal Legion.

Capt. Davidson and Pilot King of the steamer Centennial were arrested at Red Wing on the down trip and taken to Lake City for preliminary hearing on charge of drowning Frank Collins on the up trip. They were held to bail in $2,000 each, which they gave, were released and will overtake the boat by train. There was considerable feeling against the accused and they were lodged in the lockup, but were finally allowed to have their hearing before daylight in the morning.

At New York, Michael Davitt vigorously denied the charges of attempting to split the land league, rival Parnel as a leader, going for communism, etc, He said: "My first resolution shall be to discard all feeling of hatred to the English people and keep down all promptings of revenge, while striving for the peace, happiness and prosperity of Ireland."

From Foreign Lands.

London Special says: As Earl Spencer, lord lieutenant, was riding through Dublin Tuesday, he was stopped by Anna Parnell, who attempted to speak to him. Earl Spencer told her he was unable to hear what she was saying, but that he would talk to her at the castle. Miss Parnell writes to the evening papers that she had been shocked to hear that the erection of huts for evicted tenants in Limerick had again been stopped and that she had asked Earl Spencer whether this report was true. From his position he could not hear her. Miss Parnell believes he was ashamed and that he would gladly escape from the odious position in which he has placed himself. She urges all who are connected with the building of huts to persevere. If one man is arrested, she says, let another take his place, so as to leave no shadow of excuse for the continuance of this outrage on humanity. She believes that if the people do not show a little determination, children will be murdered by exposure.

A correspondent of the London Times at Cairo states that the English consul general desires English residents to quit Egypt without an official request, which might product a panic. He will remain here a few days more to reasure public feeling. Soldiers are openly asking for the deposition of the khedive and declare they will, if necessary, oppose Turkey herself. Not only women and children are leaving the country but men with large material interests are begging passages and leaving their property behind. Many large capitalists are arranging to leave Egypt permanently, not in a panic, but after calmly calculating such a step.

No wonder Ignatieff was forced into retirement in Russia. His downfall is attributed to the four-fold coalition of the Germans, the Jews, the court party and the holy synod. The new minister, Court Tolstof, is said to be the incarnation of every thing despotic and retrogressive, and it is alleged that he is disliked at St. Petersburg and abhorred in the provinces. The silent but fateful forces are at work in Russia, which will eventually work out a revolution that will wale into insignificance the seas of blood which swept over France, and out of which chastening came the republic.

A dispatch from Rome says that, in view of the wishes expressed in Garibaldi's will, the minister of public instruction presented in the chamber of deputies a bill for which exigency was voted for the purchase of a crematory apparatus with which to cremate the body of Garibaldi. The papers publish an agreement of members of Garibaldi's family to give the island of Caprera to the Italian nation.

Convicted of Manslaughter.

The trial of the Ohrleins' brothers at Buffalo, Wright county, for the murder of John Ross, resulted in a verdict of manslaughter. with a recommendation to mercy. In view of the appeal to clemency, Judge Lochren imposed the least possible punishment, that of two years in the penitentiary, whither they will be transported at once. The prisoners received their sentence quite coldly, showing neither exhultation at the shortness of their term of imprisonment nor despondency that it was not less.

The Ohrleins own a farm of 160 acres adjoining that of Ross. The cross-examination developed the fact that Ross and Ohrleins had been both friends and enemies by spells; several times before they had had wordy quarrels, but never come to blows.

The Courier-Journal's correspondent tells the story of D. G. Owens, of Ghent, Kentucky, who was the sole witness to a murder thirty years ago, and never breathed it to a living soul. He finally told the murderer about it and told the story with such circumstantial detail the man was almost stricken speechless for the time as the story of the killing had never been known.

The governor general has received a grateful reply from Queen Victoria to the address presented on behalf of the women of Canada.

THE AWFUL CYCLONE.

A Terrible Tornado Sweeps Over Grinnell and Malcom, Ia., on Saturday Night.

Forty-One Persons Killed and Nearly 100 More or Less Seriously Injured.

Last Saturday night there was a tremendous tornado in Iowa, which was first seen at Kelly, a small station on the Des Moines division of the Chicago & Northwestern railway, forty miles west of Grinnell, and from Grinnell a little south of east to Malcolm station on the Chicago, Rock Island & Pacific railway, nine miles distant, about parellel with the railroad line, thence to Brooklyn, seven miles east, and was last seen, so far as heard from, at Irish Ridge, fourteen miles east and south of Brooklyn. It appeared at Kelly at about 8 o'clock, and at Grinnell five minutes before it struck, and parties describe it as a monstrous black and green cloud making a noise like a heavy train of freight cars running through water on a rocky, ballasted track. First came the wind, which broke down the trees, and immediately following came the revolving, tunnel-shaped monster emitting electrical sparks, and it passed through the city in less than two minutes. Then followed a fearful flood of half an hour. The tornado passed through the northwest portions of the city, where were the best residences of the city, and swept away almost every building from ten or twelve entire blocks. They were upon the more elevated portion of the city, and there was a clear sweep from the open prairie. The Iowa Congregational college, a beautiful four-story stone structure, and a large brick dormitory near it, built a few years ago at a cost of about $50,000, after the college was burned, were both completely demolished, a small portion only of the walls standing. The path of the tornado is now well defined as having been about twenty-five miles long and half a mile wide, extending five miles northwest of Grinnell and twenty miles southeast.

Where the people took to their cellars there was little loss of life, only one person being killed in a cellar. The business men had not returned from the city centre, which accounts for the fact that it was mostly women and children who were killed. A citizen described the scene after the rain stopped as awful and heart rending.

The following bodies have been recovered at Grinnell:

Mr. Phipps' child.
Miss R. Morton.
Mrs. Gue's son, ten year's old.
B. H. Burgett, student, Deep River.

KILLED AT MALCOM.

At Malcom the following were killed:
Chas. Wheeler.
Mrs. Akers.
Mrs. Myers and Mother.
Van Middleman.
Peter Craft.
Isaac Wilson and two children.

Mrs. Akers was just ready to join her husband, a brother of State Superintendent Akers, in Denver.

The wounded are:
Margaret Murray.
John Doffus.
Miss Shearin.
Mrs. Weatherby.
Johnny Akers.
Lizzie and Della Bohrenfuse. The latter thought not to be fatally injured.
Mrs. Rodgers.

Surgeons report forty-one dead at Grinnell, and say five or six more cannot live through the night. Dognan, a Rock Island conductor, is dead. The surgeons reported that the wounded would exceed 150, and the number of houses destroyed or ruined is between 140 and 150. The total loss of property is now estimated at $600,000. It is feared that the number of deaths at Grinnell will yet reach seventy-five.

The whirling fiend struck straight across the Iowa Central railroad, and directly in its path lay loaded cars. The great mogul engine was lifted completely off the track, and the train tipped on the other side. Across the track of the wind was the building of Prof. J. W. Chamberlin, treasurer of the college, which was gathered up in sections and dumped in a disjointed heap, a portion upside down. It is a total ruin. Dr. R. N. Scott's house was turned almost completely around. C. W. Hobart's elegant residence and barn are completely gone. Near by stood the two-story house in which Miss Abbie Agard was killed. There is hardly a sign left of it. In the vicinity stood the house of Henry McConnell, who was going around almost demented. The house was a pile of lath, splinters and plaster. Retracing our steps among acres of ruins in the vicinity, we come to a block which contained nine houses, all but one leveled to the ground. In one house of this block four persons were killed—Mo. Ford, wife and hired girl and Mr. Tatter. In this vicinity E. W. William's house was unroofed. Prof. Herrick's and Mrs. Morris' two houses were launched together. Not far off stood Lucy Saunder's fine residence, and what of it that is not scattered over the adjoining country is dumped into the cellar. There were ten people in Saunder's cellar; all escaped. Mr. Taylor and Mrs. Day's houses are both gone; also the home of Hon. C. F. Raven and the large new residence of Andrew Larrabee. The side and top of B. Clark' house were blown off; also a barn. The home of Mr. Merrill of Kimball and Merrill is unroofed. Then followed rows of houses as flat on the ground as space will allow, among them John Corbants, Rufus Reckess, B. Schaffers, editor of the Signal, then Prof. Book's residence and L. C. Phelps and a house belonging to Wm. Hover. The hurricane took everything north of President Magowen's house, leaving that uninjured. In the northwest corner of the city the storm leveled the house of Wilson Ellis, as also that of J. M. Russ. His wife is slightly injured. A. J. Heaton's house was moved six feet from its foundation. The dwelling of Attorney Dunn was leveled; also G. B. Hunnell's dry goods merchant, new house. Mrs. Griswold was killed, and her house demolished. John Merrill's house was blown a distance apparently in the teeth of the wind, and not a sign is left. The house of Madison Howard and the house of George Hamlin, cashier of the First National bank, are in ruins; George Jennings' new $5,000 house is in kindling wood and broken plaster. Two houses belonging to Mr. Bates are obliterated; also the houses of James Hanlan, Philip Clendenning, Henry James, Henry Pitman, Marcus Wightman, Wm. Cralhow, Deacon Ford's houses, W. N. Nealeys, and Mr. Hoffer's. The house of A. E. Reinford is completely demolished, and himself and wife were taken from the ruins nearly dead. Mrs. Stewart's house was blown half a block, and fragments jammed into the corner of Mr. Jones' house, Frank Carroll, stealing a ride from Davenport was on the Rock Island freight train that was carried off the track, and lies at the Chapin house with a broken shoulder blade and nose.

Grinnell was one of the earliest platted towns in Iowa and was founded by Hon. J. B. Grinnell, one of the foremost temperence men of that state. He owned all the land on which the future city was to rise and made it a condition precedent to the sale of a lot that the intended purchaser should prove himself a rigid adherent to the tenets of temperance. As the city is noted for the staid character of its inhabitants, who, according to the last census report, numbered 2,417 and now reach 3,500. The town is the capital of Poweshiek county, one of the most fertile and productive in the state, and is the entrepot for the farmers within a radius of many miles being the most important place, next to Des Moines, fifty-five miles west, in that section.

OTHER TORNADOES AND CALAMITIES.

Reports from Iowa show that much damage was done by the severe storm that visited that section Friday night. Many buildings were damaged by wind, and trees and fences in places were torn down. Lightning struck several houses.

In Kanaas the storm of Friday was very severe. At Leavenworth, Mount Mary's academy, four miles south of the city, suffered terribly, The main tower was blown over, and Ada Golden, Anna McDonald and Maba McLanathen of that city, and Mary Austin of Carrolton, Mo., aged eleven to fifteen, were instantly killed. A score of other children were injured. The Kansas Central hall was blown down. Loss, $50,000. The loss in the city and county is about $500,000.

It would take columns to enumerate the damage at Kansas City. Among the more serious losses are the iron bridge between the city and Armourdale, three spans of which were carried away. The bridge cost $10,000. The street railway stables on the corner of Madison and Seventeenth streets were damaged $8,000 to $10,000, and the court house suffered to about the same extent. Coates' opera house lost its roof. All the hotels were more or less damaged, and business houses and dwellings in every part of the city suffered greater or less injury. The total loss will probably reach $200,000,

At St. Louis and on the river the damage is estimated at $250,000, but no serious cassualties are reported. In a flood last week at Winchester Kentucky, twelve colored men lost their lives, a sudden rising of a stream washing away their shanties.

MURDER IN ST. PAUL MINN.

Police Officer Daniel O'Connel Shot Through the Brain and Left a Corpse, by Two Burglars While he was Attempting their Arrest.

St. Paul was startled and shocked last Saturday morning by the news that in the early morning Police Officer O'Connel was found lying dead on a vacant lot on Summit avenue, having been foully murdered by burglars, of whose visit to a neighboring house he had been advised and of whom he was at the time in search. Though he was off duty and on his way home when informed of the presence of the burglars, he set diligently to work to hunt for them in the immediate neighborhood of their attempt, and the known circumstances make it obvious that while prosecuting this search he had stumbled on the hiding place of the burglars and that they shot him dead to avoid being captured by him.

The particulars, as far as known, are as follows: Early in the evening a daughter of Mr. A. O. Bailey, residing on Dayton avenue near Summit, observed two men passing down the carriage drive and attempting to make an exit through the drive gate.

No further thought was given the matter until morning, when the outer doors were found unlatched, opened doubtless from the inside, as no mark of violence were found on either windows or doors, and Mr. Bailey's pocket book, in which were a few gold pieces and bills, was missing. They had "gone through" the lower part of the house.

About half-past 3 o'clock Mrs. Wm. Bickel, wife of Interval Revenue Collector Bickel, residing on West Third street but a short distance from the Bailey residence, was awakened by a noise at her bed-room window, as though some one was trying to affect an entrance. Standing hidden from sight in the door-way, she saw a man at the window make a motion as though calling some one, and almost immediately a second face appeared at the window, but being fastened securely on the inside their efforts failed. When the one man was seen Mrs. Bickel was not greatly frightened, and went into the hallway and called softly to her two sons who were sleeping in a room above. While waiting for their appearance the second man was seen. Then fearing they would break in, she ran to the window of the sitting room opposite, looking out on the lawn and called aloud to a large Newfoundland dog which usually slept in the barn. The dog with peculiar instinct scented the burglars, rushed towards them, barking loudly, and they took refuge on a high stone fence which runs back to an alleyway, through which they disappeared.

The entire family had been aroused by the alarm given by Mrs. Bickel, and before they had again retired, Officer O'Connell, wending his way homeward, attracted by the lights in the house, stopped and inquired the cause of the disturbance. On being informed he said:

"I am on my way home and off duty, but I'll take a look 'round the neighborhood first."

Alone and unaided, save by his strong right arm and manly courage, he climbed the hill. As is supposed, when just beyond the residence of George L. Otis, thinking the would-be robbers were likely concealed in the undergrowth and shrubbery of F. B. Clark's vacant lot, he began his search. What took place or how it occurred will probably never be known, but the residents of neighboring houses, especially Mr. Bickel's family, had not as yet time to go to sleep, and heard plainly one shot—the shot that sent poor O'Connell to his last resting place. It is supposed that the murderers were hidden in the bushes, and determined to resist capture, committed the bloody deed. There is no doubt that they were discovered by O'Connell, who had attempted their capture, for in his hand, found when he lay dead, was a small looking glass, evidently taken from one of the men, while his revolver was drawn, and the ground showed marks of a brief encounter. The bullet, which was remarkably small, weighing only thirty-two grains, had penetrated the left temple and was found flattened on the inside of the opposite side of the skull. Powder marks on the face suggested the nearness of the murderers to their victim.

Poor O'Connell was found lying dead on the brow of the hill on his face, his head in a clump of bushes, with a bullet wound from which the blood had flowed profusely—still and dead. The body when found was cold and stiff, showing death, which must have been instantaneous, to have occurred some hours previous. O'Connell's hat was found several feet distant from his body, while his revolver, cocked but not discharged, lay between his legs.

No one will ever know the particulars of the death scene, but the most probable story, and that accepted by the police, is that O'Connell caught one of the men, and after struggling with and overpowering him, was searching him or about to do so, when the companion fired the fatal shot. All this is guess work, however, and of clews to the truth there is lamentable lack.

The scene at the home on the hill toward which O'Connell was wending his way when death overtook him, is described as heartrending when the young wife was told of her sudden widowhood. The people of St. Paul propose to provide handsomely for the bereaved family. O'Donnell was a large, athletic, fine looking man, full of good humor, with a jovial smile and hearty handshake for all, he was looked upon as a model man by his associates and friends, whom he reckoned without number. He had not been long on the force, and formerly lived in Lake City. Some arrests have been made and the mayor offers a reward of $500 for the right man or men.

The Messaba Iron company, with principal office at Duluth, filed articles with the secretary of state. The association is formed for the purpose of mining and melting iron, copper, steel and other metals. The names of the incorporators are W. W. Spaulding and H. P. Weiland of Duluth, Alexander Ramsey of St. Paul, William Harris of Lake Linden, Mich., W. D. Williams of Marquette, Mich.; Louis Stannard of Rockland, Mich.; and James Ontongon, Mich. The capital stock of $3,000,000, divided in 100,000 shares of $30 each.

CONGRESSIONAL.

WEDNESDAY, JUNE 14.

SENATE.—Mr. Pendleton gave notice that he would not call up his resolution in relation to the asessment of government employes for political purposes until Mr. Hale of Maine, who was one of the signers of the circular, returned from his trip north, which would probably be by next Monday. He also said that he had received a number of letters on the subject, enclosing the circulars from employes in different sections of the country, asking that some means be devised to protect them from paying the assessments. The consideration was resumed of the resolution to pay mail contractors in various southern states the amount due them for contracts in 1859, 1860 and 1861, and devoting $375,000 to the purpose. By a strict party vote, Mr. Davis of Illinois voting with the republicans, the measure was defeated by a vote of 30 nays to 23 yeas. The whisky in bond bill was the regular order after the morning hour and consumed the time till adjournment, Senator Williams delivering a lengthy argument in favor of the bill.

HOUSE.—The legislative bill came up and Mr. White of Kentucky charged Mr. Kelley, chairman of the ways and means committee, with making a bargain with the whisky men to serve their interests in consideration of aid from them in the tariff legislation. Kelley replied with great heat, and both members were formally rebuked by the house. The resolution of censure was withdrawn, however, after apologies by the offenders.

By unanimous consent, Mr. Springer offered an amendment, which was adopted, fixing the salary of the reporter of the United States supreme court at $5,000, and providing that hereafter the supreme court reports shall be printed at the government printing office and sold at the cost of publication and 10 per cent. additional.

Mr. Mills offered a bill providing that no part of the contingent fund appropriated by this bill shall be expended in payment of clerks employed by senators and members of congress. Adopted.

The committee then rose, and the bill having been reported to the house, was passed—yeas 125, nays 45.

Mr. Miller reported a resolution recommending the committee on appropriations to provide for the payment to George Q. Cannon of Utah his salary and mileage up to April 16, 1882, the day when his seat was declared vacant. Adopted.

THURSDAY, JUNE 15,

SENATE.—The resolution to appropriate $375,000 to pay southern mail contractors for ante-bellum services was discussed at length. A resolution was introduced for an investigation of the labor strikes. The bonded spirits bill coming up, Mr. Windom spoke strongly against it, and the bill and amendments, on motion of Mr. McMillan and by a vote of 32 to 20, were indefinitely postponed.

HOUSE.—The rive and harbor bill occupied the days session without action.

FRIDAY JUNE 16.

SENATE.—Mr. Hoar introduced a bill to provide for the performance of the duties of the office in case of removal, resignation, inability or death, both of the president and vice president. It vests the succession to the presidency in members of the cabinet in the order in which they were named in the Washington cabinet, beginning with the secretary of state and concluding with the secretary of the interior, and excludes cabinet officers not previously confirmed by the senate. The bill is almost identical with that introduced by Senator Morgan of Alabama in January.

A bill passed authorizing the Oregon Pacific Railroad company to build bridge across the Willamette river. A long debate took place on the bill for the extension of national bank charters. The senate committee amendment exempting national banks from attachments and injunctions of state courts was voted down—21 to 27; the affirmative vote being entirely republican, and Messrs. Dawes, Miller of California and Mitchell voting no with the Democrats. The bill went over without final action. Mr. Blair introduced a bill authorizing the Southern Pacific and other railroad companies to consolidate into a continuous line from the Atlantic to the Pacific. Adjoined to Monday.

HOUSE.—The senate amendment to the house bill authorizing the Sioux City & Pacific railroad to construct a bridge across the Missouri river was agreed to, and the house then went into committee on the river and harbor appropriation bill.

Mr. Springer moved to strike out the paragraph appropriating $300,000 for reservoirs at the headwaters of the Mississippi river, and argued that they were works of federal and not local importance. Pending the motion the committee rose.

SATURDAY JUNE 17.

SENATE.—Not in session.

HOUSE.—Mr. Springer's amendment striking out of the river and harbor bill the $300,000 appropriation for upper Mississippi reservoirs was rejected. After the various amendments the bill was reported to the house and passed—119 to 47. The bill as passed appropriates $17,347,875, and no opposition is anticipated when it reaches the senate. There was a lengthy debate on the appropriation for reservoirs in Minnesota and Wisconsin during which Representative Washburn and Dunnel ably defended the scheme. Mr. Washburne called attention to the reports of the secretary of war and the chief of engineers to show the benefits of the system. He said the war department had taken up the reservoir system some ten years ago. Gen. Warren, when he was in charge of that section of the country, noticed the immense flood of water running to waste in the spring and the low water which succeeded, and it occurred to him that it might be utilized for the purpose of navigation during low water seasons. He made the recommendation and from that time surveys have gone on for five or six years. He showed that by these natural reservoirs this entire water can be held for six months in the year. It can be held during high water and saved from rushing down and causing great distruction to property and distributed during the seasons of low water when more is required for navigation. Provision was made in the bill for paying Indians and others who may suffer damages

MONDAY, JUNE 19.

SENATE.—The judiciary committee reported the bill providing for the presidential succession in cases where the president and vice president are removed, dead,. have resigned or are otherwise incapacitated. The joint resolution appropriating $375,000 for the pay of southern mail contractors for services before the war passed. The national bank charter extension bill was considered, but without final action.

HOUSE.—Bills were introduced to abolish the internal revenue tax on tobacco and cigars and to establish an international peace commission. The rules were suspended and the bill passed authorizing the secretary of the treasury to receive trade dollars in exchange for silver dollars and repealing the trade dollar coinage law; also the pension appropriation bill, calling for $100,000,000. A motion by Mr. Dunnell, from the ways and means committee, to suspend the rules and pass a bill limiting the terms of internal revenue collectors to four years was lost, after a debate in which Mr. Bayne, a Republican member from Pennsylvania, vigorously assailed the administration in connection with removals from office. The vote was 79 Republicans and 2 Democrats in the affirmative and 83 Democrats and 17 Republicans (including Washburn) in the negative. The bills passed imposing a duty of 50 cents on each foreign passenger arriving at United States ports; establishing a bureau of animal industry and preventing the spread of cattle diseases.

The Tariff Commission Filled at Last.

The president sent to the senate on Friday the following nominations, to be members of the tariff commission: John L. Hayes of Massachusetts, chairman; Henry W. Oliver, Jr., Pennsylvania; Austin McGarland, Illinois; Jacob Ambler, Ohio; Robert P. Porter, District of Columbia; John W. H. Underwood, Georgia; Duncan F. Kenner, Louisiana; Alexander R Boteler, West Virginia Wm. H. McMahon, New York. The nomination of McMahon and Boteler were referred by the senate to the finance committee the others having been previously confirmed. MacMahon, is now employed in the appraisers office of the New York custom house, and was selected because of his knowledge of the present tariff laws. MacMahon is said to owe his appointment to the president's personal knowledge of his attainments and of his peculiar fitness for the position. In politics he is a republican. Boteler, the other newly selected commissioner, is a resident of Charlestown, W. Va., said to be a gentleman of means and liberal culture and is not identified with any special interests other than those of agriculture. He was highly recommended to the president by both senators from West Virginia, as well as by Senator Hawley of Connecticut. Boteler is a conservative democrat and known to favor tariff for revenue. He is about sixty years of age. There is considerable dissatisfaction with the commission, arising foom the belief that a majority of the members represent class interest which may be affected by the investigation, and that anything like unity of action will be impossible. Perhaps the outcome may be better than anticipated.

REORGANIZING UTAH.

The Commission Appointed—Gov. Ramsey Chairman.

The president sent to the senate on Friday last the members of the board of registration of election of Utah Alexander Ramsey of Minnesota; Algernon S. Paddock of Nebraska; C. F. Godfrey of Iowa; Ambrose B. Carlton of Indiana, James R. Pettigrew of Arkansas. The committee is composed of three republicans and two democrats. Gov. Ramsey, with brief intermissions, has always been in public life. He served several times as representative in congress from Pennsylvania; was territorial governor of Minnesota and afterwards governor of the state; mayor of St. Paul, for two terms United States senator from Minnesota, was secretary of war and of the navy in Hayes' administration, etc.

Mr. Paddock of Nebraska, has been representative, governor and United States senator of Nebraska.

Mr. Godfrey of Iowa is a distinguished lawyer of Iowa, and was an officer during the war.

Mr. Carlton of Indiana, is a lawyer! He was formerly law partner of Senator Voorhees, and at various times has been a member of the Indiana legislature, circuit judge and professor of law in the State university. He is about fifty-six years of age, and is said to enjoy a high reputation for legal ability and literary attainments.

James R. Pettigrew of Fayettville, Ark., has been a member of the legislature of that tate, and is now Journal clerk of the United States senate. His appointment to a place on the commission has been strongly recomended by Garland and other western members of the senate.

It is understood that all these gentlemen have been accepted and that the senate will confirm them.

Their duties in brief will be the enforcement of the anti-polygamy act passed by congress. Under this act no one who practices polygamy can vote for any elective officer: and all the registration and election offices are declared vacant, and all the duties relating to the registration of voters, the conduct of elections, the canvassing and return of votes and the issuing of certificates to the persons elected are to be performed provisionally by this board of commissioners. The election of members of the Territorial legislature and of local officers is to be carried on under their supervision, and they are to see that no polygamists are allowed to vote or be elected to any office. They are to continue in office until the legislative assembly chosen under this anti-polygamy regime shall make provision for filling the offices whose duties are entrusted temporarily to this commission. The salaries of the commissioners are $3,000 a year.

GUITEAU.

Writ of Habeas Corpus Denied—How Guiteau Felt About it.

In the case of the application of Mr, Charles H. Reed, the counsel for Guiteau, for a writ of habeas corpus, made to Mr. Justice Brady of the United States supreme court, the latter filed a decision with the clerk of the United States supreme court Monday morning, denying the writ on the ground that the trial of Guiteau was entirely regular.

Dr. Rush of Chicago accompanied Charles H. Reed to the jail to inform Guiteau that Justice Bradley had denied the application for a writ of habeas corpus in his case. Being a medical man of fine record in his profession as an army surgeon, although not in practice for some years, your correspondent inquired of him as to his observations upon the man when he received the news and its effects. Said Dr. Rush: "Reed went in his cavalry-like way, and shaking hands, said in his cheery, brisk tones: Well, the judge has gone against us and here it is, and took from his pocket a note he had received from the judge announcing his adverse decision. I looked at him sharply. I could see an instantaneous relaxation of the nerves, a quickening of the heart beat and respiration. He dropped the letter which Reed handed him, and then there was a tremendous struggle to gain self-control and not betray his feelings. By the time he had picked up and opened the letter he was himself again, and stood there and read it with all the nonchalance of air as though he were standing in the presence of 50,000 spectators and deporting himself for effect. He then became excited and said if this were done war would come to this country. He then turned to Reed, and I moved to one side, and I could hear him urge that he must not forget the inspiration theory."

Shocking Disaster at Indianapolis.

A few days ago at Indianapolis, Ind., while a party of fifteen or thirty were standing on a platform over Bogue's run, connected to an old warehouse belonging to the Union Railway company, the platform gave way, precipitating the entire crowd into the water. Some were rescued, others went rushing through the culvert into the depot and were rescued, while others were drowned. Five bodies have been recovered. They are those of Katie Gilderman, Geo. Scoville, A. K. Saunders, attorney at law, Edwin Tilford, son of S. E. Tilford and Geo. W, Smith of Clermont. Other bodies have been seen floating, but could not be reached. It is supposed that at least ten persons were drowned. A number of small cottages were swept away, with no loss of life, and like disposition was made of fences, culverts, sheds, etc.

A young man near Carbondale, Pa., purchased a ticket for Canada on Thursday, visited Brown's Hollow on the day following, and while in the tavern there was approached by a butcher named Stebbins, who challanged any man in the party to knock him down with one blow. Lowry accepted the challenge, and when Stebbins said he was ready, struck him a powerful blow in the chest. Stebbins fell dead upon the floor, the blow having resulted in the rupture of a blood vessel, which made his death instantaneous. Lowry proceeded on his journey toward Canada and has not yet been arrested.

MINNESOTA NEWS.

Minnesota's Deaf and Dumb.

The closing exercises at the institution for the deaf and dumb took place at Faribault on Thursday last. The exercises were very interesting. Prof. Noyes presented to the class their diplomas and awards to those whose names were upon the roll of honor, of which there were thirty-five, the highest award for good conduct and improvement during the year was given to Charles Thompson of St. Paul. Gov. Hubbard addressed the graduates, expressing himself as well pleased with their work and the workings of the institution and assuring them that the state felt great pride in them and that great interest was being taken in this work and that the state would do all possible to aid them. Following is the list of graduates. Theron T. Gage, Winona; Keon LeFever, Spring Valley; Robert Kuske, Rush River; Leonard L. Cooper, Taopi; August E. Benz, Delano; Fred Wm. Zuelsdorf, Henderson; Lillie Simpson, St. Paul; Mary Jane Sexton, Janesville; Betsey Brusletten, Kenyon; Clara A. Doyle, Victor; Anna Erickson; Spencer Brook; Mary Jane White, Hector.

Fire in Red Wing, Minn.

A few days ago at about 1 o'clock a destructive fire originated in the basement of the three story brick building at Red Wing Minn., belonging to the estate of A. J. Clark and occupied by G. L. Kellogg as a drug store, and by Drs. W. W. Sweeney & Son The stock of drugs was of course totally destroyed, the fire spreading with unprecedented rapidity, breaking through and appearing at every window of the building. Kerosene oil flowed into the adjoining cellars and the fire with it, damaging the stock of leaf tobacco owned by Milten & Liker. The insurance office occupied by Druce & Beveridge was also destroyed as was the front and plate glass in the adjoining building owned by James Lawther and occupied by James Ballanger, dry goods merchant, who had his stock damaged by water and removed. The estimate losses are over $15,000.

Death of Dr. Keith of Minneapolis.

Dr. George Hackett Keith, postmaster of Minneapolis, died on Thursday after a long and painful illness, borne with heroic fortitude. He was born in Orange county, Vt., in 1825, taught school in Meriden, N. H., and also in Indiana. He moved to the city of New York and began practice, paying considerable attention to dentistry. In 1855 he came to Minneapolis, and has since resided there. He was a member of the first state legislature, which met in 1858-59. During the Indian war of 1862 he was surgeon of the expedition sent to the relief of Fort Abercrombie. In 1863 he received the appointment of provost marshal for the second district of Minnesota, and held the position until the close of the war. Dr. Keith has been, during all the period of his residence in Minnesota, a prominent republican, possessed of a natural aptitude for party politics. In May, 1871, he was appointed postmaster; and was reappointed in 1875, and again in 1879.

Sad Drowning at Red Wing, Minn.

Thursday afternoon last, John Nelson, a prominent dry goods merchant of that city, while boat riding with his wife and little son and Miss Bradley, drifted close to the falling cable of the upper ferry and attempted to run under, but while so doing the cable was seized by one of the ladies and the boat thus delayed was caught and pressed into the water. The ferry was promptly stopped and everything done by the ferrymen to rescue the occupants, who were struggling in the water, but before aid could reach them Mrs. Nelson and Miss Bradley were drifted by the swift current some distance and were drowned. Mr. Nelson and son were saved. Miss Bradley was a niece of Mrs. E. W. Brooke, and had just come from Springfield, O. She was the sole support of an aged and blind mother. The city is in great excitement. It is the saddest accident that has visited the city in many years.

Minnesota Episcopal Diocessan.

The annual session of the Minnesota diocession Council was held at Christ Church, St. Paul last week, with an unusually large attendance of clergy, deacons and lay delegates. An organization was perfected with Bishop Whipple in the chair, and Revs. Hunter and Pope were appointed committee on credentials.

The annual sermon was delivered by Prof. E. S. Wilson of Faribault, and was an able and effective discourse.

After the sermon the sacrament of the Lord's supper was administered by Bishop Whipple, Rev. M. L. Gilbert, resident pastor of Christ's church, and other clergy.

After the morning service the council met in executive session, most of the delegates responding to their names.

Rev. C. T. Coen, who has for the past six years s[illegible] ved faithfully as secretary was urged to accept the position, but he declined, and the Rev. C. T. Plummer of St. Marks, Lake City, was re-elected treasurer of the Diocesan fund, and S. A. Marsh was retained as treasurer of the Episcopal fund. The bishop was continued as chairman, of course.

The ladies organized a National board of domestic missions, the same to meet each year at the time of the diocesan convention. The following officers were elected: President, Mrs. Mayo, St. Paul; vice president, Sister Annette, Minneapolis; secretary, Mrs. Fold, Minneapolis; treasurer, Mrs. Nixon, Stillwater.

The annual address of Bishop Whipple was presented. The address was voluminous, but highly interesting, and was attentively listened to by a large audience. The work of the past year, showing the increase and growth of every branch of work in the diocese was fully presented. The wonderful growth of the school system, the amount of good work done in Indian missions were set forth, the results being very gratifying to both clergy and people.

A large amount of business was transacted, of which the following is a brief summary: The treasurer of the church building fund reported the receipt of $225, and on motion of Rev. N. M. Gilbert the second Sunday in October was set apart as a day for a collection for this fund.

Dr. Hawley of Brainerd was chosen as trustee of the general theological seminary.

Mr. E. H. Holbrook of Minneapolis was elected treasurer of the episcopal fund, vice S. E. Marsh resigned, and Rev. Charles Cummings were appointed as the committee for a division of the North convocation. They reported favorably, and the report was accepted. Dr. Thomas, Dr. Ruckel and Rev. G. C. Yause a committee to nominate a board of missions, reported as follows: Missionary committee—Rev. Thomas, Rev. B. Whipple, Rev. J. B. Wells, D. D., Rev. Gilbert, C. N. Hardenburgh, Dr. J. W. Danields, R. Warner, Hon. Isaac Atwater, together with deans of the convocation and treasurer of the diocese.

The bishop announced the following standing committees for the ensuing year.

Examining Chatlains—Revs. F. T. Hawley, D. D., G. W. Wilson, D. D., E. Livermore, E. S. Thomas, M. N. Gilbert, D. D., Knickerbacker, D. D., T. B. Welles, D. D., G. C. Tanner, T. W. Tompkins, Jr.

Ecclesiastical Court—Revs. E. Livermore, G. C. Tanner, J. A. Gilfillan, T. K. Miller, Geo. L. Chase, D. D., Gen. H. Davis, E. I. Purdy, I. Karcher.

The temperance question occupied considerable time, and caused much animated discussion. Nothing definite was done, however, and action indefinitely postponed.

A deposit of $2,100 was made up by pledges of parishes and individual subscriptions. A resolution was offered providing an assistant for the bishop, whose declining years have brought with them poor health and increased labors in the rapid growth of the diocese. The resolution caused considerable discussion, but it was finally withdrawn.

This closed the business of the session. Bishop Whipple delivered a short address, urging the clergy and laymen to greater work; to make the record of the coming year surpass that of any previous year in the history of the church in Minnesota. The bishop then pronounced the benediction and the meeting adjourned.

Col. Taylor, state librarian, has nearly completed cataloguing and arranging the volumes in the state library. He is sadly pressed for want of room, nearly 2,000 volumes being crowded out for want of shelf room.

Articles incorporating the Bishop Whipple school to be located at the city of Moorhead have been filed at the state capitol. The amount of capital stock shall be $25,000, divided into 500 shares of $50 each. The government of the school is vested in a board of trustees to be elected by the stockholders.

Stillwater is to have a handsome union depot.

Samuel Wharton of Westfield, Mass., presented four old bonds to the state [illegible] payment yesterday, receiving therefor seven new bonds and about $100 in cash. There are yet outstanding thirty of the old bonds.

A house belonging to Mrs. Josie Downes of Faribault was burned on Monday last.

The free Methodists will hold a camp-meeting near the bank of the Long Prairie river, three-fourths of a mile south of the village of Motley, Morrison county, commencing July 5, and continuing one week.

Mr. Washburn has introduced a bill in the house for the relief of D. Rathburn.

A cyclone passed through the east part of Pipestone county on Saturday night. E. W. Day, county superintendent, lost his house and all the contents, valued at $1,000. Thomas Butterfield's dwelling was blown away and his wife had her left arm broken in three places and will possibly be crippled for life. Both of these houses were situated in the Rock River valley. The storm passed south, blowing down George Wait's house and one or two others whose owners' names are not learned. Mr. Wait was badly cut about the head and body. There will probably be more damage reported from this storm.

George W. Moore has been appointed by collector McMurtrie, as appraiser of customs at Minneapolis.

Hamline University Commencement.

The Hamline university (Methodist) commencement exercises took place last week. They consisted of a literary and musical programme and prize contests.

The annual address before Hamline Literary society was delivered by Rev. A. G. Wilson of Red Wing, and the address before the Philomathean society was delivered by Rev. D. L. Kiehle, state superintendent of public instruction. An interesting contest was the Hodgson prizes for excellence in composition and oratory, established by E. J. Hodgson of St. Paul, the prizes being respectively for $25, $15 and $10, to be given in the order of excellence. The judges at the conclusion of the programme, gave, their decision as follows: First prize, Miss Hattie Garvin second prize, D. H. Tandy; third prize, L. J. Dobner. Mr. Briggs and Elder of Fargo have offered prizes of $15, $10 and $5 for excellence in Latin, and Mr. W. H. White of the same city, and one of the trustees, offered similar prizes for excellence in Greek. The prizes were awarded as follows: Greek—First prize, E. P. Robertson, second, Geo. S. Parker; third, Lottie C. Gale.

Latin.—First prize, Miss Lottie C. Gale; second, Miss Annie M. Davis; third, Ferris White.

The degrees of Master of Arts was conferred on Miss Clara L. Merriman, of San Jose, Cal., and Prof. Harvey Webb, professor of mathematics in Wylie university. Tex. Miss Merriman and Prof. Webb were former students of Hamline under the old regime. The meeting of the board of trustees a good deal of business was transacted. The election of trustees to fill the places of those whose terms expire this year resulted in the re-election of M. G. Norton and Hon. W. S. Drew of Winona; J. H. Murphy, M. D., of St. Paul; W. H. White of Fargo, and Rev. C. A. Van Anda, D. D., of Minneapolis, for a term of four years. John E. Miller of St. Paul was elected a trustee to fill the vacancy caused by the refusal of H. J. Owen to accept.

The election of officers of the board resulted as follows:

First Vice President—Rev. J. F. Chaffee. Second Vice President—M. G. Norton. Secretary—Rev. Robt. Forbes. Treasurer—Prof. E. F. Merkle.

This point being settled the following members of the faculty were elected: Rev. D. C. John, D. D., president and professor of ethics and physiology. Rev. G. H. Prentice, A. M., professor of Greek language and literature. Rev. G. S. Innis, A. M., D. D., professor of Latin and chemistry.

The construction of a new building to be called Ladies Hall was ordered.

Prof. G. H. Prentice, the newly elected professor of Greek, is a son of Prof. Prentice of Wesleyan university, Middletown, Ct., and comes highly recommended by Bishop Foss and others.

Prof. Bradley was granted leave of absence by the board of trustees for one year, and with him will spend the coming year in Europe in study and travel. They sail for Glasgow July 1.

The board decided that the laying of the corner stone of ladies hall should be with public services at such time as Dr. John should name.

The executive committee were authorized to expend money not to exceed $600 during the coming year in grading the grounds, laying out walks and drives, erecting fences and setting out trees.

Blinders on Horses.

Is there any need of having blinders on horses? I doubt it, if the horses are trained properly in the beginning. I have known of many horses that travelled as well without them, and I believe much better. The shying and sudden fright of horses in harness is undoubtedly due to this practice of hoodwinking their eyes. The facial bones are thrown outward at the eye-sockets, thereby enabling the horse to see nearly as well behind as before him. When blinders are used, the range of vision is limited, and the horse is allowed only a small space to peep out, and that, too, not in the direction of true vision. Objects do not appear distinct or natural, and what wonder is it that the horse starts when he discovers what seems to him, because of indistinctness, some strange monster. Horses will run day after day in pastures among rocks and stumps and manifest no signs of fright, yet when driven in harness by these same objects will shy. This clumsy contradiction of nature is also a potent means of bringing blindness to thousands of horses in our land by retaining the heat and dust that accumulates about the eye. There are many improvements yet to be made in harness. We load our horses with too many trappings. One-quarter of the expense incurred is for useless straps, buckles and trimmings. The more light the harness can be made with reference to strength, the more ornamental it will be. The loads our horses are obliged to draw are enough without loading them down with harness.—George A. Myers, Cayuga Co., N. Y.

Homeopathic Statistics.

At the meeting of the American Institute of Homeopathy at Indianapolis, Ind., Dr. Talbot of Boston made a report of the bureau of organization and statistics. It shows there are 7,000 homeopathic physicians, 278 institutions in the United States and 4 national societies aggregating 1,049 members. There are 27 state societies with 1,783 members; 103 local societies, of which 66 report 2,355 members; 15 clubs, of which 7 report 79 members; 23 general hospitals, of which 18 report 1,298 beds. Fifteen of these hospitals reported having treated last year 6,675 patients. The cost and value of 11 of these is 7,765,000. Of 30 special hospitals, 15 report 850 beds, and 9 of them treated last year 1,669 patients. The cost value of these hospitals is $166,000. Of 39 dispensaries 27 report as having treated last year 11,469 patients. To these have been furnished 2,505,800 prescriptions. Twelve medical colleges have had 1,270 students, and graduated 412 physicians this year, and 5,080 since they were founded. The institute then adjourned.

Men of Large Brain.

Men of large brain sometimes suffer from feelings of extreme mental exhaustion. This feeling should not be neglected. Heed such symptoms as nervous debility, blotches, skin diseases, dimness of sight, cough, catarrh of the bladder, and general despondency. When thus afflicted hasten to use Dr. Guysott's Yellow Dock and Sarsaparilla. It strengthens mind and body exhausted by disease and suffering. It is the truest of all life-giving tonics, and Nature's best assistant in restoring the proper functions to every organ affected. Ask your druggist to get it for you.

Nature is a rag-merchant, who works up every shred and art and end into new creatoins.

Mr. Arthur McLane, of Greenburgh, Ind., writes: "After suffering many years from extreme mental exhaustion and nervous debility, and failing to find relief, I expected to die, having tried all advertised remedies for early decay, with no benefit. My mother was using Dr. Guysott's Yellow Dock and Sarsaparilla. I took a dose occaisonally and it made me feel better. I bought a bottle, it did me great good. I am now healthy as I ever was, and have no more disturbing dreams.

We owe to man higher succors than food and fire.

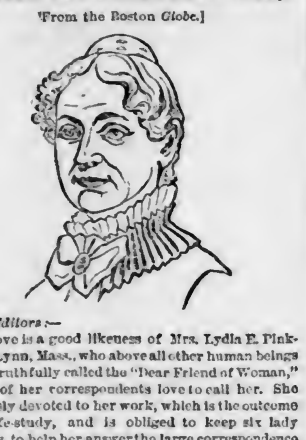
A NOTED BUT UNTITLED WOMAN.

[From the Boston Globe.]



Messrs. Editors:—

The above is a good likeness of Mrs. Lydia E. Pinkham, of Lynn, Mass., who above all other human beings may be truthfully called the "Dear Friend of Woman," as some of her correspondents love to call her. She is zealously devoted to her work, which is the outcome of a life-study, and is obliged to keep six lady assistants, to help her answer the large correspondence which daily pours in upon her, each bearing its special burden of suffering, or joy at release from it. Her Vegetable Compound is a medicine for good and not evil purposes. I have personally investigated it and am satisfied of the truth of this.

On account of its proven merits, it is recommended and prescribed by the best physicians in the country. One says: "It works like a charm and saves much pain. It will cure entirely the worst form of falling of the uterus, Leucorrhœa, irregular and painful Menstruation, all Ovarian Troubles, Inflammation and Ulceration, Floodings, all Displacements and the consequent spinal weakness, and is especially adapted to the Change of Life."

It permeates every portion of the system, and gives new life and vigor. It removes faintness, flatulency, destroys all craving for stimulants, and relieves weakness of the stomach. It cures Bloating, Headaches, Nervous Prostration, General Debility, Sleeplessness, Depression and Indigestion. That feeling of bearing down, causing pain, weight and backache, is always permanently cured by its use. It will at all times, and under all circumstances, act in harmony with the law that governs the female system.

It costs only $1. per bottle or six for $5., and is sold by druggists. Any advice required as to special cases, and the names of many who have been restored to perfect health by the use of the Vegetable Compound, can be obtained by addressing Mrs. P., with stamp for reply, at her home in Lynn, Mass.

For Kidney Complaint of either sex this compound is unsurpassed as abundant testimonials show.

"Mrs. Pinkham's Liver Pills," says one writer, "are the best in the world for the cure of Constipation, Billiousness and Torpidity of the liver. Her Blood Purifier works wonders in its special line and bids fair to equal the Compound in its popularity.

All must respect her as an Angel of Mercy whose sole ambition is to do good to others.

THE WASH-DAY DINNER.

Woe to the friend
Whose evil stars have urged him forth to claim
On such a day the hospitable rites,
Look black at first and stinted courtesy
Shall he receive. Vainly he feeds his hopes
With dinner of roast chicken, savory pie,
Or tart, or pudding. Pudding he, not tart,
That day shall eat; nor though the husband try
Mending what can't be helped, to kindle mirth
From cheer deficient shall his consort's brow
Clear up propitious. The unlucky guest
In silence dines, and early sinks away.

Barbauld.

IN DANGER.

"Miss Ruth, major says it's jes' on ter sundown, an' tole me to ax was he ter come out yere?"

"Tell him I'll come in, Cappie." Cap spun around on her bare toes a few times, then started slowly for the house, while Ruth swung idly in her hammock in the shade of the live oak, and I exclaimed:

"Think what you are doing, Ruth. He is not happy a moment without you. He loves you so that the thought of not being able to sail with you brings on a fever turn, and you know that he had a hemorrhage the last time you went riding without him. His life is bound up in you!"

"I know it, aunty, so I shall go riding and sailing no more."

"But such devotion will surely deceive him."

"When he came to us, wtih his doom plainly written in everyfeature, I resolved that if I could not nurse him back to the life he so much loves, his last days should be as happy as possible."

"Suppose he dies deceived, believing that you loved him—believing a lie?"

"Don't you think when he sees no more 'through a glass darkly' that he will understand?"

"But should he recover, do you think he would thank you for his life if you had taken all hope and brightness from it?"

"I assure you that his happiness should be, then as now, my first and only object."

"Ruth," I exclaimed aghast, "you would not marry him with no love to give him—loving another as you do!"

She raised herself slowly on her elbow, her beautiful brown eyes looking steadily through the long lashes wet with tears, and said.

"My life is something that I do not prize, but by dying I cannot give him life, so if by living I can make his life happy, why not? Whatever is for his happiness that I shall do. Now I'll go and watch the sunset with him."

I sat still under the spreading branches of the great old oak and watched the swollen river which seemed trying to force its way through the great wall of earth that confined it to its course, and thought of the beautiful girl who had just left me.

When Maj. Grant had come to us, sick and apparently dying, she had just met the first great sorrow of her life. A misunderstanding had arisen between herself and Frank Russel, to whom she had given all the loving devotion of her warm heart, and by the interference of her friends the lovers' quarrel became a serious matter, and the engagement was broken.

She believed herself deceived and cast aside for another, and life not worth the living, but she was proud, and lived on bravely, making no moan.

Maj. Grant had lost his health by exposure during his army life, but would not for a moment doubt his entire recovery. He was always better. He clung to Ruth—was never happy when she was absent and built castle after castle in the air when beside her. And now the two were watching the sunset—one believing the sun of her life had already set in clouds and darkness, and the light was fast failing for the other; she turning in dismay and dread from the life before her—he longing and striving for the life that was fast slipping from him.

A bunch of gray moss swung smartly in my face, and roused me to the fact that the wind was rising, for added to the muttering of the river was the moaning of the pines. I walked hastily to the levee. Everybody was there, working or watching, for should a jet of water force its way through undiscovered, a crevasse was certain and distruction sure.

There was great danger that the levee could not withstand the force of the water without the wind, but with a gale it seemed hopeless.

It was a yearly danger to which every one had become accustomed, so that no plans were changed, and all amusements went on as gaily as if distruction did not threaten every home for miles around, and our nearest neighbors had invited us to attend a country wedding with them that night. Ruth hesitated about leaving her invalid, but he urged her to go, assuring her there was no danger whatever; so when we heard the call at the gate, "Oh, Miss Ruth, are you ready!" we threw on our wraps and started, gloves in hand.

We drove beside the levee, but the angry rush of the river and the rising wind seemed to occasion no uneasiness in our companions. The house to which we were going stood on a point of land which the river had encroached upon year after year until it was almost an island, and it seemed the whole plantation would be washed away. I could only wonder at the gayety of my companions, and divert my mind from my own fears, asked:

"Has Miss Dora been long engaged?"

"Yes, five years. The wedding day has been fixed twice before; guests invited, the cake ready, and the bridal veil waiting to be put on. The first time Dora was sick, so very sick it seemed impossible that she could live through that day, but as soon as the hour for the wedding was passed she began to improve. The next time the groom fell and broke his leg an hour or two before he should have been maried."

"How strange!"

"Well, Dora is the last one of an old, old family. She had an old nurse who saw visions and foretold coming events, who told Dora that she would never be a wife or mother, and she has almost began to believe it. She says if she fails this time she will never try again."

"O here we are? Back up and dump your load." And amid much noise and chattering we scrambled to the ground and shook out our crumpled dresses.

We were received by a beautiful white haired old lady who kissed us all and made us welcome. After a glance at the bare hands about us we slipped our gloves into our pockets and were ushered into the parlor and joined one of the two lines that set facing each other for the ceremony to begin. The white haired old lady sat beside Ruth, who had evidently taken her fancy. I could see that the sweet-faced matron was telling my little girl the story of her own daughter's misadventurous love that was soon to be crowned with happy fruition. Had she divined that my Ruth was heart-sore and sick because of love? I think so.

The guests waited awkwardly as people gathered from far and near are wont to do. The servants moved officiously about to save the appearance of delay. At length the hostess, with the slightest flush of annoyance on her fair face, left Ruth to devote herself to others. Ruth came over where I was standing by an open window, and putting her hand on my shoulder turned her face from the light and said:

"Oh, aunty, I am so miserable. Why is it that every one else may be happy and I"—

"There, there," I said soothingly. "Do not be so weak." And then I added in a bantering tone, "No doubt Frank will come back"—

"Too late," she said, "I have promised to marry Major Grant."

"Why, Ruth!"

I had no time to say more.

The minister appeared; then came the bridal party; the promises were made, hands were shaken, congratulations uttered, refreshments were eaten, and the dancing began.

Three hours had passed. The revel was at its height. The fair bride, her long-delayed hopes fulfilled, floated in and out in the mazes of the dance, the gayest of the gay, Ruth, her face flushed, seemed to have forgotten her sorrow in the enjoyment of this auspicious occasion. By her grace and tact I could see that she was adding much to the enjoyment of others. The happy mother of the bride moved about among the older guests, dispensing smiles and bringing pleasure wherever she went. Presently Ruth came in and said with a face beaming with joy:

"Oh, aunty, I am so glad we came. I never knew it was such pleasure to make others happy. I am not a bit sad now. I believe I could even meet Frank with composure. Hark! What is that?" she exclaimed, turning toward the open window, through which came a dull, harsh murmur.

Before she had time to say more there was an uproar at the lower end of the room, a cry of "Crevasse! Crevasse!" from the afrighted servants, and Frank Russell rushing through a crowd of dancers, leaped upon a chair not three steps from us and shouted:

"The levee has broken; save yourselves at once, there is no time to lose."

There was an instant of awful silence; every breath was hushed, and rosy cheeks were blanched with terror; then the voice of the despairing bride rang out:

"It has come true! It has come true!" she cried, and as she fell into the arms of her husband the guests fled in every direction. The gray-haired mother sank upon her knees and we could see her lips move in prayer.

Frank's eyes wandered over the hurrying crowd an instant in search of some one he evidently expected to see. Even in that terrible moment I could not help thinking how brave and handsome he was. I did not wonder that Ruth had lost her heart to him. At length his eye rested on us. In an instant he was beside us. He put his arm about Ruth as if they had parted with kisses but yesterday, looked quickly back, and said, as his face blanched and his lips shut close;

"We can only save ourselves. Come!"

He swung Ruth lightly through the casement, clasped me by the arm, and we fled away from the house of feasting with the bride's heart-rending shriek in our ears and the mother's blanched face upturned in her hopeless prayer ever before our eyes as we dashed out into the night and joined in the wild scramble for life.

The blackness of the night, the roaring of the wind and the increasing thunder of the river were enough to appal the stoutest heart. But we were hurried on, stumbling over roots and stumps, caught and torn by vines and briers, dashed against trees by the raging wind, spattered by the spray of the rising water until we reached the place where Frank had left his boat.

The river was full of floating trees, the ruins of houses, and all of debris which the mad water had wrested from its conquerors. The current was so strong it seemed certain death to trust ourselves to it, but it was the only chance. We stepped in the boat and each seized an oar. We pushed out and the fight for life began.

We were trying to force our way through the crevasse up to higher ground when suddenly a bonfire some one had lighted hours before blazed up, and we saw clinging in the branches of a tree rushing past us the bride clasped tightly in the arms of her husband. Was the prophecy to be fulfilled, "never a wife or a mother?" Though the attempt was madness, we strove to reach them. Fortunately both Ruth and myself were accomplished oarswomen and accustomed to the river. Frank stood up and called to them while we bent to our oars with all our strength. The bridegroom heard us and waved his hand in acknowledgement. Frank changed our course and we shot off into the darkness again. After hours of desperate fighting for our lives, the faint light of dawn came to our aid, and at last we were able to land.

As soon as our feet were on firm ground again Ruth turned to Frank and held out both her hands with tears in her eyes and trembling lips, but said no word. He drew her to him and kissed her again and again. They were saved for each other, but I thought of Maj. Grant with a sigh.

We found him at the house of a friend miles back from the river, where he had been borne for safety, but the excitement and exertion hadbeen too great for his strength, and he was suffering from a severe hemorrage which was wasting his life-blood. Ruth went at once to him leading Frank by the hand.

Some hours after, as the sun was setting, we were all called to his room. Ruth knelt on the floor at his bedside with her face buried in her hands, and the major's hand rested on her head.

The dark curling hair lay in damp rings on his white forehead, and the large, sad eyes were lifted as if in prayer. "Ruth dear," he whispered. She raised her head. He drew her to him with a yearning in his eyes that would not be refused. Their lips met in one long, last kiss. Then he reached out and taking Frank's hand put Ruth's into it, and blessed them with a look of unutterable love till the light failed from his eyes for ever.

Widening the Gateway.

The condition of the rich man has become greatly ameliorated since eighteen centuries ago. It was once said that it was easier for a camel to go through the eye of a needle than for a rich man to enter the kingdom of heaven. As no camel could by any means get through a needle's eye, this reduced the rich man's chance to no chance at all. But hold. As rich men grow more numerous, and as churches become more dependant upon them, it was discovered that the needle's eye referred to was the gate of a cattle corral, through which camels passed and repassed at their pleasure—in short, it was as easy for a camel to go through the eye of this needle as it was for a scandal to go through a country village. The rich man's stock has been rising ever since the discovery and only the other day a Baltimore clergyman officially announced that love of money, instead of being the root of all evil, as was once supposed, is in reality the source of all good.

Mrs. Garfield's Finances.

Interview with a Clevelander.

"How is Mrs. Garfield?"

"She is just as modest, quiet a little woman as ever, though she is a rich woman now. That is to say, she is so much richer than she ever was before that she is considered rich by herself, her friends and her neighbors. I would like to take you around to see her if you come to Cleveland. She is a great pet in her town, though she does not seem to know it. Cleveland worships the memory of Garfield.

"What is Mrs. Garfield worth?"

"Well, you can sum it up. She has $300,000 in government bonds, the result of the subscription. Then her husband's life was insured for $50,000, which she promptly received. She was also paid the salary of the president for the unoccupied first year, amounting to about $20,000. That makes $400,000 does it not? Very well. Then add to it about $30,000, the total value of Garfield's estate. That was the total amount, after all the abuse that was received, that he was able to accumulate in a life of fifty years. I suppose that the income from this total of more than $400,000 will be perhaps $16,000 a year. She is also put on the pension list at $5,000 a year. So she is comfortable, and can raise her children well; but the loss of Garfield was a blow that will leave its scar as long she lives. Just think of that little woman, almost dying at the White House, when he took her to the seaside and returned to meet his death-wound; and she then rallying, watching over him for months, surviving him and being well to day!"

The London News prints crop reports showing that in France, Holland and Germany the crop condition is highly favorable. Opportune rains in southern Russia have caused a renewal of favorable progress. The weather in England the last few days is exrao rdinarily cold, checking vegetation.

HOUSE AND FARM.

Recipes.

ORANGE JELLY.—For a small dish of jelly take a half cupful of jelatine and dissolve it in a half cupful of water, letting it stand for an hour; then add the juice of four oranges and a little less than a pound of white sugar; after mixing thoroughly pour on a pint of boiling water. The mixture is not to go near the fire, but is pressed into a mold and set in a cool place. When ready to serve dip the mold for an instant in hot water and then turn out the jelly.

HAM TOAST.—Mince finely a quarter of a pound of cooked ham with an anchovy boned and washed; add a little cayenne and pounded mace; beat up two eggs; mix with the mince, and add just sufficient milk to keep it moist; make it quite hot, and serve on small rounds of toast or fried bread.

PIE-PLANT PUDDING.—Wash and cut the pie-plant in small pieces, cover the bottom of a pudding dish with it, then put in a layer of bread crumbs and plenty of sugar, and so on till the dish is full; add a little water, and only a little, as the pie-plant is very juicy. Make a sauce to eat with this of melted sugar, flavored with cinnamon.

SADDLE OF LAMB.—A saddle of lamb is a dainty joint for a small dinner party. Sprinkle a little salt over it and set it in the dripping pan, with a few small pieces of butter on the meat; baste it occasionally with tried-out lamb-fat, dredge a little flour over it a few minutes before taking from the oven. Serve with currant jelly.

CREAM CAKE.—Two cupfuls of pulverized sugar, two-thirds of a cupful of butter, four eggs, half a cupful of milk, half a teaspoonful of soda, one teaspoonful cream of tartar, three cupfuls of flour. Bake in jelly-cake pans and spread between the layers the following: Cream—half a pint of milk, two full teaspoonfuls of corn-starch, one egg, one teaspoonful of vanilla, half a cup of sugar; let the milk come to a boil and stir in the corn-starch made into a smooth paste with a little cold milk; take out a little of the boiling milk and add it gradually to the well beaten egg and sugar; stir this into the rest of the milk and continue to stir constantly until it becomes quite thick and smooth.

RAISIN CAKE.—Take three cups of light bread dough, work in a teacup of sugar, a cup of butter, three eggs, a teaspoonful of soda, one pound of raisins, nutmeg or cinnamon to the taste. Let it rise before baking. Bake one hour.

TURKISH PILAF.—This is an English dish and is considered very nice. It is made of one cup of stock or cold water, one teaspoonful of salt, one cupful of stewed and strained tomatoes, quarter of a spoonful of pepper, a small cupful of rice, half a cup of butter. Boil one onion with the tomatoes for fifteen minutes, strain and add the stock and seasoning; put in a saucepan on the stove, and when it boils add the rice. Boil until the liquor is absorbed, add the butter, set on the back of the stove, remove the lid and cover with a thick towel; let it stand twenty minutes, then turn on to a hot platter and serve.

ORANGE BISCUIT.—Boil four whole oranges in two or three waters, until the bitterness is removed, then cut them and remove the pulp and juice; beat very fine in a mortar, and add an equal weight of pulverized sugar. When well mixed to a paste spread it thin on china dishes and set it to dry before the fire; when half dry cut into shapes, turn the other side up, dry that well, and then pack in boxes with layers of paper between, until ready for use.

Children's Food.

Children probably suffer more than adults from the effects of an unhealthy diet. They are urged to eat meat, to make them strong, whereas strength lies rather in its avoidance. Milk is nature's food for children, but a modern mother lets her children eat whatever she does herself, from pork to mince pie; then she wonders why her children are puny and scrofulous, and mourns the degenerancy of the race, which Dr. Felix says is caused principally by unnatural food. Truly the Spartan Gerontes would have more than its hands full to look after the youth of the present, and put out of the way all those judged physically unfit to live. The children of the Scotch peasantry and middle class are brought up almost entirely upon oatmeal and milk, and make the healthiest and sturdiest men and women. Many a little one sleeps under the daisies who might have lived had the mother only obeyed the simple laws of health in the matter of food alone. I have in mind a sickly, puny, frail babe, now a sturdy, stout-limbed boy of seven, who owes existence to his mother's calm insistence in the matter of diet. He has never tasted tea or coffee, is allowed plenty of fresh milk, is never permitted to overeat, and gets cakes, candies and the like but rarely. Feed the children oatmeal, graham gems, fruit, fresh, stewed, baked or canned, vegetables, eggs, custards, maccaroni, such simple nourishing food, give milk instead of tea and coffee, give them little meat, and see if there is not an improvement in physical and mental condition, brighter eyes, more smiles, less tears.

Don'ts for Husbands and Brothers.

Don't suppose, when you are married that you have come into possession of a first class servant, endowed with everlasting strength.

Don't let your wife come in from the kitchen, after preparing breakfast and doing the milking, and find you snoring as if to frighten the flies away.

Don't forget when you and your wife go to town and sell the butter, that the money belongs to her as well as to you.

Don't forget that your wife, though a woman, has a heart which feels every slight and appreciates every tenderness, as she did a few years ago in her father's parlor.

Don't forget, when you return in the evening, and toss your hat on the floor, overcoat on a chair, and your dirty feet on the fender, and wait until wife or sister comes in from the kitchen, tired and suffer her to put them away and wash the fender.

Don't be too ready to give advice about her affairs. It is reasonable to suppose that a woman who has made housework a life study will possess a judgment superior to one Inexperienced. She will probably ask your advice, if she thinks you capable of answering.

Don't content yourself with reading about national affairs, but read whatever gives you and your wife pleasure. Do not allow yourself to argue, for it often leads to quarreling.

What Can be Sown in June.

From the American Agriculturist.

Those who have a time of "making garden" in early spring, and doing up the sowing all at once, do not get the greatest good from their gardens. There are many vegetables of which the season can be greatly prolonged by making successive sowings. A striking example of this is sweet corn, which, by judicious sowings, may be had every day until frost stops it growth. In many localities, the most thoroughly tropical plants such as lima beans, okra, and the mellons do better if put in now than if sown earlier. For succession after the first sowing, put in beans, beats (allowing plenty to be used as beet greens,) cucumbers and other pickle plants. Carrots kohl rabi, and salsify, are among those that may still be sown and make a crop before frost arrives.

Medical Virtues of Celery.

An English writer proclaims cooked celery as a cure for rheumatism, which it certainly will not harm if it fails to to cure. We read as follows: "Celery, cooked, is a very fine dish, both as nutriment and a purifier of the blood. I will not enumerate the marvellous cures I have made with celery for fear the medical men should, like the corn dealers, attempt to worry me. Let me fearlessly say that rheumatism is impossible on such a diet. Plainly let me say cold or damp never produces rheumatism, but simply develops it. The acid blood is the primary cause and the sustaining power of the evil. While the blood is alkaline there can be no rheumatism, and equally no gout. I must return to cooked celery. Cut the celery into inch pieces, and boil in water until soft. No water must be poured away unless drank by the invalid. Then take new milk, slightly thicken with flour, and flavor with nutmeg; warm with the celery in the saucepan; serve up with diamonds of toasted bread around the dish, and eat with potatoes.

Overfeeding Hogs.

There has never been a time when the question of overfeeding live stock of every character has received so much attention at the hands of breeders as is now the case. Hog breeders are at present considerably exercised on account of the fearful losses sustained by the cholera, and it has slowly dawned upon the minds of many of the gentlemen that perhaps the practice of overfattening has something to do with these continued losses. Science has yet failed to prove the truth of this assumption, but practical feeders and breeders are coming to that conclusion, and in many localities are governing themselves accordingly by discontinuing the practice of crowding their stock. Of all domestic animals the pig goes it upon his cheek, and at the ordinary fair or fat stock show this very fullness of cheek is too apt to govern the awards. Consumers however, do not endorse these paunchy, round, overfed and stuffed porkers, knowing that good pork cannot generally be found where animals are seemingly fed for lard purpose and that alone. What is required and demanded both at home and abroad is the long-bodied hog, which affords a deep shoulder, lean ham, and sides upon which meat instead of fat is the rule. There has been a growing disposition to stop the practice of overfeeding hogs, and so general has the demand become for good lean pork, that, notwithstanding the universal practice to feed to the utmost capacity, breeders are now changing their views and sending to market pigs that will guarantee good paying block qualities. It is very reasonable to suppose that an animal overloaded with great masses of absolute fat and grease connot be as healthy as the one which, while sufficiently fed, is not burdened with a mass that is only profitable to the lard manufacturer. Foreign dealers in American pork do not hesitate to assert that the stock of this country is overfed, and it is to these exporters that the American breeders are indebted for the change that cannot but result to the benefit of the feeder, the dealer, and the consumer.

Chinese in Oregon.

Henry Villard, president of the Northern Pacific Railroad, said in Philadelphia: "An interesting feature of our work has been the effect of the Chinese immigration bill. We have suffered for want of labor. We had only eighteen hundred men at work when we wanted twice as many, and such was the demand that the price of Chinese labor had gone up 40 per cent, within six months. When it was evident that the Chinese bill would pass the six companies hastened to bring out as many Chinamen as they could. At one time we had only thirteen hundred men at work, of which four hundred were Americans, and I ordered that all the force which we had at work for the Oregon Railroad and navigation company should be transferred to the Northern Pacific. Soon the influx of Chinamen began to be felt, and we now have four thousand men at work, and the chief engineer telegraphs me that he has ordered two thousand more put on at once. We are pushing the line as fast as we can, and no matter what happens we shall finish it within fifteen months."

Haunted Me.

A working man says: "Debt, poverty and suffering haunted me for years, caused by a sick family and large bills for doctoring, which did no good. I was completely discouraged; until one year ago, by the advice of my pastor, I procured Hop Bitters and commenced their use, and in one month we were all well, and none of us have been sick a day since, and I want to say to all poor men, you can keep your families well a year with Hop Bitters for less than one docter's visit will cost."—Christian Advocate.

The Growth of Nervousness.

Nervousness is a rapidly growing ailment. When there is no organic disease, its origin is usually imperfect digestion. Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, a remedy peculiarly efficacious in cases of nervousness, acts primarily upon the stomach, restoring its activity, promoting the secretion of the gastric juice, over-coming the immediate bodily disturbance resulting from dyspepsia, and remedying that depletion of muscular substance and strength, and the nervous symptoms which it utimately produces. With the renewed activity of the digestive functions, nerve quietude returns, an increasing inability to rest soundly is counteracted, mental despondency is supplanted by a feeling of cheerfulness and the relish for food is augmented. The remedy is safe and unobjectionable, and may also be relied upon to overcome and prevent fever and ague, biliousness and constipation.

AMMONIA.

Its Use in Baking Powder, and Its Importance as a Culinary Agent.

Pioneer Press, St. Paul, June 4.

The Scientific American, not only an absolutely independent journal, but the highest possible authority, gave what follows as an editorial in its issue of May 57 last. As bearing upon the subject in question, nothing can well be more conclusive:

The recent discoveries in science and chemistry are fast revolutionizing our daily domestic econimies. Old methods are giving away to the light of modern investigation, and the habits and methoes of our fathers and mothers are stepping down and out, to be succeeded by the new ideas, with marvelous rapidity. In no department of science, however, have moro rapid strides peen made than in its relations to the prewaration and preparation of human food. Scientists, having discovered how to traverse space, furnish heat, and beat time itself, by the application of natural force, and to do a hundred other things promotive of the comfort and happiness of human kind, are naturally turning their attention to the development of other agencies and power that shall add to the years during which man may enjoy the blessings set before him.

Among the recent discoveries in this direction none is more important than the uses to which common ammonia can be properly put as a leavening agent, and which indicate that this familiar salt is hereafter to perform an active part in the preparation of our daily food.

The carbonate ammonia is an exceedingly volatile substance. Place a small portion of it upon a knife and hold it over a flame, and it will almost immediately be entirely developed into gas and pass off into air. The gas thus formed is a simple composition of nitrogen and hydrogen. No residue is left from the ammonia. This gives it its superiority as a leavening powder over soda and cream of tartar when used alone, and has induced its use as a supplement to these articles. A small quantity of ammonia in the dough is effective in producing bread that will be lighter, sweeter, and more wholesome than that risen by any other leavening agent. When it is acted upon by the heat of baking the leavening gas that rises the dough is liberated. In this act it uses itself up, as it were; the ammonia is entirely diffused leaving no trace of residuum whatever. The light, fluffy, flaky appearance, so desirable in biscuits, etc., and so sought after by professional cooks, is said to be imparted to them only by the use of this agent.

The bakers and baking powder manufacturers producing the finest goods have been quick to avail themselves of this useful discovery, and the handsomest and best bread and cake are now largely raised by the aid of ammonia, combined of course with other leavening material.

Ammonia is one of the best known products of the laboratory. If, as seems to be justly claimed for it, the application of its properties to the purpose of cooking results in giving us lighter and more wholesome bread, biscuit and cake, it will prove a boon to dyspeptic humanity, and will speedily force itself into general use in the new field to which sience has assigned it.

We earnestly hope and pray that no one else will let their sick suffer as we did, on account of predjudice against so good a medicine as Hop Bitters."—The parents.—Tribune.

Nature.

In the fall of the year, in cold climates, nature forms a coat of carbon or fat under the skin. This is the case not only in the lower animal kingdom but also in the human system. This carbon or fat acts like a blanket to protect us from the cold; if it were not for this it would be impossible for any one to stand the severity of our climate. Before nature has time to change her dress, warm weather comes upon us and we feel heavy and stupid. To The Editor Valley Herald.

SIR :—Having understood that a movement has been started with a view to changing the public highway, now located in front of my house in the Town of Laketown, and running from Chaska to Bonifacius, I beg leave to state through your columns why and how that road got its present location, and also why a few jealous individuals now want it changed.

Last summer after the Minneapolis & St. Louis Railway had been constructed it was found that on account of the deep cut running directly across the old highway it was impossible to maintain the highway on its old location, inasmuch as it could be only done by building a bridge at an expense of $1000 or $2000, which bridge would also be a matter of considerable expense to the people maintaining the road.

After consultation with the R. R. Company, The Board of Supervisors of Laketown, and the County Commissioners, the road was established on its present location. Before its location, however, it was necessary that the proposed road should be thoroughly examined, and this was done by the proper authorities. More than this was also done for I had to purchase with my own means land sufficient to make the road its present width and present it to the public. After all this had been done the road was pronounced by all parties interested in it to be a better road than it could be, established in any other place in the vicinity.

The persons who seek the change are but few, in fact I may say that that the head and front of the movement to disturb this road is composed of but two persons, one of whom is a broken down saloon keeper formerly residing at Murdock in Swift Co., who owns no property here and is getting green-moulded with jealousy because he sees that I can succeed better than he was able to, and the other is also a saloon keeper who does not appear by the public records to hold the property which he occupies.

So long as this movement has no more solid foundation than mere jealousy and a desire to injure me, I trust that the traveling public will always find everything in good order in the neighborhood of,

Yours Truly,

—Regular terms of Probate Court, every FIRST and THIRD Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday of each month.

JULIUS SCHALER, Judge.

CONGRESS will probably adjourn on July 10th. The House passed a resolution to that effect, but the Senate has not yet concurred.

GUITEAU will be hung to-morrow, Friday, June 30, as sentenced by Judge COX. Strenuous efforts have been made upon President Arthur for a short reprieve, but without avail. He is doomed.

MAJ. STRAIT has a "solid" delegation from Carver County, and as they are all able men, will make their influence felt at Glencoe on the 13th of July.

THE Glencoe Enterprise will have to (w?)ring the collars of the Postmasters on the Carver County delegation to the Congressional Convention, viz: Halgren and Mix; but then they know on which side their bread is buttered.

HALF of the counties of the 5th Congressional District have "double headed delegations" and a spicy time is anticipated at the convention. We suggest that they send for U. S. Marshall Denny to keep order. Oh! what a happy family our republican friends have in that district.

THE Glencoe Enterprise has a Congressional candidate in the person of Lewis Harrington, of that county. Mr. H. is an able and pure man, but stands no more chance of being nominated in this district than an honest man in the notorious 5th district. Take warning from the sad fate of Thacher in the old second district, and withdraw your candidate, Mr. Enterprise. He is too good to go to Congress.

An Accident.

We copy the following article from the Perham JOURNAL, regarding an accident to Theo. Streukens, brother of our genial Co. Auditor, L. Streukens, and well known in Chaska and Benton:

Theodore Streukens narrowly missed a fatal accident last Thursday evening. He was in Mutchler & Streuken's yard attending to their stallion, and attempted to pass between the horse and the fence. The horse was rather fractious and reared as Streukens passed, his knees striking Streukens in the chest, knocking him down. Streukens fell insensible, his face striking some castings and timbers lying close by, producing some serious gashes and bruises. He was promptly assisted by Aug. Mutchler and Mr. Kephart, and is now under Dr. Richardson's care doing well."

Proceeding Republican County Convention.

The Republican convention which met at the Sherman House Waconia, was the most respectable one we ever saw in the county.—The roads being bad, it was 3 p. m. before the delegates got together, when Mr. Geo. Mix was elected chairman and Wm. Whitehill secretary. Committee of credentials reported the following gentlemen entitled to sit as delegates.

WATERTOWN.

Hon. Chas. Halgren, J. A. C. Flood, having no credentials were admitted by a unanimous vote of the convention.

The business before the convention being to elect four delegates to attend the District convention at Glencoe, to be held July 13, the following delegates were elected to represent Carver County.

Philip Henk, Chaska, Hon. C. G. Halgreen, Watertown, Geo. Mix Waconia, Hon. A. W. Tiffany, Young America.

It was also moved that the delegation to the convention at Glencoe use their utmost endeavors to re-nominate Hon. H. B. Strait for Congressmann to represent the district, as in the sense of the convention, he has done, and is capable of doing more good for the general welfare of his constituents, than any other known man who could be selected.

The convention was a most harmonious one, and all the gentlemen present desire to express their high appreciation of the kindness and courtesy of their hosts Ben. Meiser & Adam Habergarten. For ourself we would like to see the gentlemen all together often.

WACONIA DEPARTMENT.

Wm. Whitehill Reporter.

Main and Elm Streets will be the most beautiful streets in the county. Come and look at them.

Mr. Andrew F. Schutz and Mr. Albert Kohler have purchased a Fairbanks hay scale. This will be a public convenience.

Visitors to Waconia say they never come here, but they see something new in the way of improvements.

Ben. Meiser has just set up a new "Monarch" Brunswick & Balke combination billiard and pool table. It is the finest in the town, and will come in for its share of public patronage.

The front of Triechel's building is embellished with a magnificient sign. It reads "Grand National Ball" to be held here July 4th.—The artist is Herman Manteuffel whom we pronounce to be the best sign painter in Carver County.

Waconia had another unfair day for her fair. The heavens wept as usual, but much cattle came in, prices were good, and the demand good. As we remarked after last fair, cattle are improving in appearance.

Meiser & Habergarten have a Hotel worth lookidg at, we predict success for it.

We have an excellent jeweller and watchmaker in the person of Mr. P. Hanneberg. He has also a very fine hardware store, and keeps a line of goods second to none.

We desire to state to the public that we are agent for insurance for the best companies in the United States. St. Paul Fire and Marine, Hartford, Aetna, Home &c &c., and parties desiring to deal with us will be treated fairly. Notwithstanding the statement of one we consider an animalculum, we can ensure on as reasonable teams as any one. Come and be convinced.

Those desiring to insure their crops against Hail and Storm will do well to call on us. Vennor predicts a cold summer, and in the neighborhood of lakes and rivers heavy storms of hail are likely to fall. We have noticed that so far as Minnesota is concerned, Vennor has been correct. Run no risks.

Several of the delegates last Saturday having expressed a desire to sail on the lake, Dr. Van Krevelin, was roped in.

The Dr., who is always obliging, conveyed the happy party out on his pretty little craft. The wind was blowing stiffly, but what cared we, we had just been to a republican convention, but alas! and alack! when near the middle of the lake and just as Nobles had bent himself to duties of an able bodied seaman, and was prepared to hoist the top-gaff-s'l in obedience to the order of the captain, (given through a speaking trumpet) down came the whole rigging, gaffs mainsails, gibs booms and tackle, about the ears of passengers and crew, "Was there a man dismayed." Not any, as I remarked before, we had just come from a republican convention, and represented the great unterrified. Mix took command and gave instant orders to clear away the wreck Halgren nobly stood at the helm, Flood—who was a steerage passenger—lay in the fo'x'll nonchalently smoking a cigar, Nobles did not belie his name but worked nobly to save passengers and crew. The Doctor ably seconded his efforts. Taylor looked a little white in the gills, while your reporter——as a reporter should——took items.—However the poor shipwrecked crew had the good fortune to be thrown on a friendly shore near Mike Zahlers brewery where they were taken the best of care of and where they splieed the main brace, where each one was duly sent to his home, where he may congratulate himself and family that he survived in one day, the dangers of a republican convention and shipwreck.

CHASKA, - - MINNESOTA

America is far ahead of all other nations in the number of patents issued, the number thus far reaching 250,000. A large portion, of course, are of no practical value, but they show ingenuity and inventive genius.

The total increase of population in this country by immigration from 1820, when the record was first kept, up to May 31, 1882, is eleven millions four hundred, and ninety-three thousand, eight hundred and eighty-three. The calendar year 1881 gave us 720,000 additions to our population.

Mexico is throbbing with all sorts of enterprises for increasing transportation facilities, which the government is subsiding and encouraging liberally. Large sums are promised for round trips of steamers to New Orleans, New York, Liverpool or Italy; for canals and railroad lines, intended to open new country and new fields of trade. American engineers and mechanics are finding remunerative employment in every direction, while native laborers who are willing to work are making more money than ever before.

The lecture field, so popular of yore, is now almost deserted by those who once adorned it. Their places have been taken by cranks of all sorts, often made notorious by connections with crimes and scandals. But after all, the lecture is one of the best means of healthy entertainment and instruction and must again take its proper position. The old lights have gone out—some leaving a bad odor—but men of character and standing and bright intellectual attainments will still be called to electrify the public from the platform.

The most rapid sales of the revised version of the New Testament were naturally when it was first issued, but sufficient time has elapsed to show that predictions that it would soon supplant the translations in common use have not been verified. Rather the reverse seems to be the fact. The demand for the revised version is reported as very light, though, as yet, a very small portion of the people have been supplied. It has steadily lost in public regard, and throughout the country is now little used and seldom quoted, save by scholars and critics.

It is amusing to read in some pretentious newspapers this side of the water, oracular comment on current foreign news. One might think the callow writers were on intimate terms with all the crowned heads and the boon companions of Gladstone, Bismarck and the ministers of every nation, and that crises that can have no other solution than general war are things of daily occurrence: But the truth is that the writers know but little or nothing of what they are writing about. A heavy editorial on foreign affairs is deemed a necessity of journalism and they endeavor to meet the exigency as best they may.

During the summer season of four months last year, more than 22,000 Americans went to Europe as first-class steam-ship passengers. This year the increase is so great that the unprecedented record of 1881 will probably be beaten more than one-third. Applications for berth-rooms are so numerous that notwithstanding the addition of many new steamers to the carrying capacity, all the lines are crowded. There are now twenty-one steam-ship lines plying between New York and Europe, and there is scarcely a berth to be had on any of them until after the middle of July. This gives an idea of the number of people who are making money in the United States.

The high cost of meats has increased the interest in the propagations of food fishes. The states quite generally, and congress frequently, have passed laws to encourage it, and very favorable results have been reached. The work is important. Fish, as everybody knows, is an admirable article of diet, and the raising of fish for market is as laudable as the raising of cattle or of grain. At the east the consumption of fish has greatly exceeded anything ever before known, and even if meats should decline in price, the fish eating habit will remain. While it will not pay as a general thing to quit farm work "to go a fishing," or hunting, the stocking of contiguous takes or streams with fish is something that should not be neglected.

A financial writer, who takes an extreme view of the situation, while admitting that dissimilar causes led to the financial crisis of 1837, 1857 and 1873, sees a combination of all the circumstances, at present, which in each preceding instance was the precursor of disaster. Without recapitulating the alleged causes of previous disasters the great exhaustion of the railroad system in the south and southwest, and Mexico is, cited; speculations in mines; real estate, and the tendency to advance securities of all kinds to a fictitious valuation, a reaction in which is already being disastrously felt; and the increase of imports over our exports, as well as a general overproduction in the country, are all instanced in corroborations of the dread entertained and the prediction made of a forthcoming revulsion, or of a stagnation whose effects are equally dreaded. At the present time many stormy petrels are flying over us, and it is not unlikely that their dismal creakings may operate in a way that may keep off the evil days.

Earl Grey, a distinguished British statesman, in a late issue of the Nineteenth Century magazine, has an article from which this pregnant extract is taken: "Government can create no wealth; all that it can do is to remove any obstacles which may impede its being created by the industry and thrift of those over whom it rules; it is they, not the rulers, who produce it. The rulers, therefore, can give nothing to one set of men except what they take from another. And all experience shows that when a government endeavors to improve the condition of one class of its subjects by arbitrarily giving to them what belongs to others, it not only fails to confer any permanent benefit on those who are the objects of its favor, but in the end it very greatly injures the whole community." These are simple rudimentary principles of political economy very rarely expressed, but it is just these principles which every man ought to know by the public mind, the specious pleas that everywhere abound for special privileges, bounties, subsidies, and the like, [illegible] would cease to influence, as they now do, the action of the representatives of the people.

NEWS OF THE DAY.

News from Washington.

Commissioner Fink has issued the new schedule of west-bound freight rates, to take effect July 1, which are as follows: First class, 90 cents per 100 pounds, against 45 cents, the old tariff; second class, 50 cents; third class 40 cents; fourth class; 30 cents. A special class, including sugar, molasses and syrups, has been created, with a rate of 25 cents per 100 pounds. It is claimed that none of the roads have renewed their old contracts, nor made new ones. It is also asserted that the new rates will be maintained, as the railroad was being ended the motive for carrying the traffic at less than cost has been removed.

A Washington special says: Washburn had an interview with the secretary of the interior with reference to the question of opening up the Turtle Mountain reservation in Dakota. The secretary indicated unmistakably that he had no doubt that the Indians had no title to the lands. He also left Mr. Washburn to infer that while congress was in session, and had the matter before it, he did not think it was proper for him to take action in the matter, but that he would do so immediately upon the adjournment of congress, provided that congress itself did not take any action.

Senator Ferry, chairman of the committee on postoffice and post-roads, announced a bill directing the postmaster general to return all dead letters free of postage to the writers. It appears by comparison with former years that this branch of the postal service has been very inefficiently administrated. In 1870 there were received at the dead letter office 2,882,868 letters. Of these there were delivered to the sender 1,487,021. In 1881 there were received 2,898,753, but there were returned and delivered to the sender only 621,339—nearly 900,000 less than in 1870.

The president in offering to appoint Mr. John T. Agnew a member of the tariff commission wrote to him personally and also offered him the presidency of the commission. Mr. Agnew in his reply declining the appointment expressed his sincere thanks for the compliment paid to him by the president.

Midshipmen Harry M. Finley resigned his place in the navy last week, because he feared he could not pass the final examination, went to his home at Bucyrus, O., and shot himself dead with a revolver. He was twenty-four years old and the son of ex-Congressman Finley.

The superintendent of the general recruiting service will cause forty recruits to be prepared and forwarded under proper charge to Fort Snelling, for assignment to the fifth infantry.

Secretary Folger has ordeerd an investigation of the affairs of the cabinet shop connected with the treasury department under Forman Hesler.

Gen. Crocker will not make a circus out of the Guiteau hanging. Only a few spectators will be admitted.

News of the Railroads.

It is now almost definitely certain that the Chicago, Milwaukee & St Paul road will enter Kansas City from Council Bluffs, via the St. Joseph and Council Bluffs line, upon the completion, its road to the latter city.

W. H. Vanderbilt is reported to have purchased $5,000,000 worth of stock in the Milwaukee & St. Paul and a large interest in the Manitoba.

The earnings of the Chicago, St. Paul, Minneapolis & Omaha for the second week in June were $83,621, a decrease of $9,739.

Record of Fires and Casualties.

Black measles and scarlet fever are raging fearfully amongst the children of Russian half breeds in Alaska. The liquor law is enforced so strictly that no prescription in spirits can be had for medical purposes.

At Toledo, a plaining mill, sash, blind and door manufactory owned by C. H. Seroeder was burned. Loss, $25,000; insurance, $13,500.

Crimes and Criminals.

Two men struggling with a third, who had a revolver, and a handsomely dressed woman as spectator, were discovered at Central park lake New York City. Two of the men were arrested, the third and the woman escaping. One said he was Charles Vannor, editor of the States Zeitung, and the other gave his name as Joseph M. Wallach. The latter said he had met Mrs. Vannor out west and had gone to the park in reponse to a telegram from her. Vannor said Wallach had wronged his wife, and he forced her to write to Wallach making an appointment, with the intention of meeting him and whipping him.

Prof. H. C. Friend, president of the Grape and Cane Sugar Refining company of Chicago, was arrested there Tuesday, charged with obtaining $1,500 by false pretences. The complainant is a stockholder of the company, who claims that Friend has appropriated money to his own use that had been subscribed to the stockholders for another purpose. Friend was released on $2,500 bail.

Another bold burglary occurred at Northfield Thursday night resulting in the abstraction of about $25 in small change from a desk in the harness shop of Charles Watson. Mr. Watson is treasurer of the M. E. church and this money was collections lately received, composed of small pieces.

William J. Land, probably the most prominent analytical chemist in Georgia, and who for a long time was state chemist, committed suicide Friday night in his room in Atlanta, by shooting himself through the brain with a pistol.

A terrible storm visited Findley, Ill., Thursday night. Three men named Charles G. Sensene of Fort Wayne, Ind.; John G. Wilson and Chas. G. Holmes were instantly killed by lightning.

Miss Emma Malloy, a celebrated Indiana temperance lecturess, has caused William Wahlgomuth another laborer in the temperance field, to leave his wife for his co-laborer.

At Chicago, the jury in the case of James Tracey, on trial for the murder of policeman Huebner last February, brought in a verdict of guilty and fixed the penalty of death.

Miscellaneous News Notes.

Mr. Charles C. Brandt writes as follows: "A few days ago a turtle, about as large as the head of a barrel, was captured in an outlet of Clear lake in the town of Sigel, Brown county, Minn., with the figures 1811 inscribed on the back of its shell. The turtle which is about as large a one as ever seen in this part of the state is now alive and in possession of Mr. C. Forstors, who lives on a farm adjoining the lake. Did any explorers, trappers or missionaries penetrate to this part of the state as early as 1811?" It did not seem to occur to Mr. Brandt that the figures might have been put on last year as well as 70 years ago.

The town of Garfield, in the oil regions, had only three inhabited houses a month ago. It now contains 130. A hotel of nearly 100 rooms has risen "like an exhalation," and board at private houses is $2 a day, with the privilege of sleeping out-doors. The telephone and the telegraph are already there, and the railroad is expected soon. This is quite Dakota-like.

Some 70,000 cattle are now on the trail or grazing in the Indian Territory and other herds which will swell the aggregate to 100,000 are going in from Texas, Arkansas, Missouri and Kansas. There are also 10,000 horses in the territory. All these animals are feeding and will be ready for the northern and eastern markets in a short time.

Rev. R. Moffat, acting pastor of the First Presbyterian church of Brooklyn, N. Y., is accused of having forged his certificate of ordination and his credentials. He is very popular among his congregation, which is largely increased since his installation.

The Democrats of California have nominated the following candidates for congress: At Large—J. R. Glassock, C. A. Summer. First District—W. S. Rosecrans. Second—[illegible]. Third—Barclay Healy. Personal and Impersonal.

Col. Cook, the venerable father of the lamented Adjt. Cook, who fell with Custer on the fateful field of the Little Bighorn, has returned home to Chicago from a visit to the battle ground. He reports the new monument to the memory of the dead heroes in a bad state of preservation. The stone of which it is formed has not proved hardy enough to endure the harsh climate of the section where it is planted.

At New York, Michael Davitt vigorously denied the charges of attempting to split the land league, rival Parnel as a leader, going for communism, etc. He said: "My first resolution shall be to discard all feeling of hatred to the English people and keep down all promptings of revenge, while striving for the peace, happiness and prosperity of Ireland."

From Foreign Lands.

In the house of commons John Bright said that it was obvious that the condition of Ireland was made greatly worse by subscriptions raised in America, and by those persons who came from America to participate in conspiracies. He did not hesitate to say that those subjects of the queen who had taken part in the Chicago convention were traitors to the crown. The object of clause twelve of the repression bill was, he said, to prevent conspirators of the very worst dye from exciting the people to disorder. Sexton warned the government that the feelings generated among Irishmen driven as aliens from their careers of industry must cause trouble to Great Britain at no distant date. The clause was carried—132 to 30.

Mr. Scarlett, the representative of the Dublin Freeman's Journal and several other Irish newspapers, is at present in Ottawa, en route for the Northwest. He intends writing a series of letters to the newspapers, with a view to placing before the Irish people his views of the claims which Canada presents as a field for Irish immigration. He thinks it possible that with proper effort a considerable emigration from the country in question might be secured.

G. O. Trevelyan, chief secretary for Ireland, in opposing various limitations to right of search, appealed to members to expedite the repression bill. Every day, he said, give the Irish executive fresh reason with regard to the position of the country, with deep and increasing anxiety and added seriously to the responsibility of those who prolonged the discussion.

More Storm Casualties in Iowa and Dakota.

A terrific wind and rain storm passed over Emmettsburg, Iowa, at 7 a. m. Saturday. The new $4,000 school building was demolished. The residence of George Saunders and James Boswell were completely wrecked and inmates all injured, Mrs. Boswell very seriously. Other houses were blown from their foundations. The damage in that city is over $8,000. The storm came from the west and it is feared is a wide spread one. Much damage is reported among farmers.

At Hospes, a little station on the St. Paul & Sioux City railroad fifty miles northeast of Sioux City, the Holland Lutheran church, freight depot and two grain warehouses were blown down, and freight cars ditched.

At Canton, a large store, partly built, had its walls blown down, and freight cars blown from the track. At Yankton the press office was partly unroofed and a wind mill on the grist mill of H. H. Smith was wrecked, the damage being $2,500. At Marcus, on the Illinois Central, the grain warehouse of Gunn was blown down. At other stations east, west and north of this city cars were blown off the track, buildings moved from foundation and trees and telegraph poles prostrated. It was not a cyclone but straight wind from west to northwest. At Yankton the government gauge registered a wind velocity of forty-eight miles per hour.

At Spencer, Iowa, it struck and did much damage, unroofing buildings, tearing up sidewalks, and blowing down residences, barns and business blocks. In the southern part of Clay it blew down twenty houses, killed five people, and injured about twenty-five.

At Britt, Iowa, A. M. Tuttle's large hay barn blew down and many small buildings. The damage in the village is not very great, but the people were pretty badly scared.

At Ellendale, Dak., the damage was about $4,000

The Tariff Commission Filled at Last.

The president sent to the senate on Friday the following nominations, to be members of the tariff commission: John L. Hayes of Massachusetts, chairman; Henry W. Oliver, Jr., Pennsylvania; Austin McGarland, Illinois; Jacob Ambler, Ohio; Robert P. Porter, District of Columbia; John W. H. Underwood, Georgia; Duncan F. Kenner, Louisiana; Alexander R. Boteler, West Virginia Wm. H. McMahon, New York. The nomination of McMahon and Boteler were referred by the senate to the finance committee the others having been previously confirmed. MacMahon, is now employed in the appraisers office of the New York custom house, and was selected because of his knowledge of the present tariff laws. MacMahon is said to owe his appointment to the president's personal knowledge of his attainments and of his peculiar fitness for the position. In politics he is a republican. Boteler, the other newly selected commissioner, is a resident of Charlestown, W. Va., said to be a gentleman of means and liberal culture and is not identified with any special interests other than those of agriculture. He was highly recommended to the president by both senators from West Virginia, as well as by Senator Hawley of Connecticut. Boteler is a conservative democrat and known to favor tariff for revenue. He is about sixty years of age. There is considerable dissatisfaction with the commission, arising from the belief that a majority of the members represent class interest which may be affected by the investigation, and that anything like unity of action will be impossible. Perhaps the outcome may be better than anticipated.

Monstrous Icebergs.

Captain Hansen, of the Hamburg steamer, Frisia, says that, June 5, on the way to New York he saw an iceberg, and—"Its height above the water was fully two hundred feet, and as that portion always represents but a seventh part of the entire mass, it must have been fourteen hundred feet high. On the rear portion of the iceberg a number of Northern birds resembling eider ducks were visible. A black object also appeared for a moment between the crevices of the ice, which one of the men who saw it through a telescope declared to be a sea-horse. We saw two more icebergs of an average height of one hundred feet before the day was over. This was latitude 42.06. longitude 49.04."

Nearly all the steamers arriving at New York report encountering vast [illegible].

CONGRESSIONAL.

TUESDAY, JUNE 20.

SENATE.—The presiding officer (Mr. Davis) in presenting the credentials of Henry B. Anthony, re-elected senator from Rhode Island, said for the second time in the history of the government a member of this body had been chosen for the fifteenth consecutive time, and expressed the hope that Mr. Anthony would be blessed by providence with good health and happiness during his remaining years.

The bill appropriating $3,000,000 for the extension of the executive mansion passed. The national bank charter bill was debated and an amendment offered providing that silver certificates as well as gold certificates may be counted as part of the lawful reserve of banks.

The president sent to the senate the following nominations:

Indians agents: Henry C. Linn of Kansas at Pottowattomie and Great Neincha agency, Kansas; Wm. H. Parkhurst, Rhode Island, at Crow Creek, and Lower Brule agency, Dakota; Wm. H. H. Llewellyn, Nebraska, at Mescalero and Jescareti agency, New Mexico; Edwin Ellis, Washington Territory, at Nisquilly Kokomis, Washington Territory; Oliver Wood, Ohio, at Neah Bay and Quinislt agency.

The Senate confirmed: Tariff commissioners: Jas. J. Hayes, Mass., chairman; Henry W. Oliver, Penn.; Jacob A. Amble, Ohio; Robert P. Porter, District of Columbia; John W. Underwood, Ga.; Duncan F. Kenner, La.; Alex B. Boteler, W. Va., and William H. McMahon, N. Y. The final vote on confirmation was 31 years, 21 nays. Four or five Democrats voted with the body of the Republicans in the affirmative, and one Republican (Van Wyck) voted in the negative.

The senate bill passed authorizing the secretary of the treasury to examine and report to congress the amount of claims of various western states and territories for expenses of suppressing Indian hostilities. A bill was introduced taxing distilled spirits 50 cents a gallon, and beer, etc., 80 cents a barrel, and allowing a reduction of 7½ per cent, on stamps sold to brewers. Mr. Updegraff of Iowa reported and the house discussed a substitute for the same bill regarding presidential electors and the settlement of contests over the presidential title. It was rejected after debate, and the house refused to order the senate bill on the same subject to a third reading, the bill being recommitted to the committee.

Mr. Washburn's bill to authorize the construction of a railroad bridge across the Salt Ste Marie river was reported favorably to the house. The bill to permit Canada farmers to bring their grain to be ground at mills in the United States under direction of the secretary of the treasury also peported favorably to the house.

WEDNESDAY JUNE 31.

SENATE.—A discussion arose over new public buildings in Virginia, and Mahone finally succeeded in having a bill passed for a $50,000 structure for Abingdon, and one at Harrisonburg at a similar cost. The national bank charter extension bill was again taken up and an amendment adopted making silver certificates, as well as gold certificates, part of the banks' reserve fund, and to be used in settling clearing house balances; also—by 29 yeas to 20 nays—one requiring the secretary to suspend the issue of gold certificates whenever the amount of gold in the treasury reserved for the redemption of United States notes falls below $100,000,000. In executive session, the following nominations were confirmed: Utah Commission—Alexander Ramsey, Minnesota; Algernon S. Paddock, Nebraska; George L. Godfrey, Iowa; James R. Pettigrew, Arkansas; Ambrose B. Carleton, Indiana.

Isaiah Lightner of Indiana, agent at the Santee agency, Neb.

Among the postmasters confirmed were: G. S. Marsh, Depere, Wis.; Henry Strong, Beloit, Wis.; J. H. Brinkerhoff; Waupun, Wis.; Frank D. Harding, Hudson, Wis.; Orio M. Laraway, Minneapolis, Minn.

HOUSE.—During a debate on the bill for the erection of a congressional library building, a great uproar was caused by Mr. Townshend of Illinois charging that the measure was a job of eastern parties interested in the proposed site of Capitol Hall. The bill; after an angry debate, was postponed until December. The bill reducing internal revenue taxation $23,000,000 was considered and Mr. Kelly explained it in a long speech. An immense number of amendments were offered. Mr. Kelly said in his speech: The bill in question proposed to make a reduction in the revenue of less than $17,000,000 to take effect immediately, and less than $6,000,000 to take effect the first of May, 1883. Last year the government had a surplus of $100,000,000. It had then collected $360,000,000 from all sources. This year it would collect over $400,000,000 and its expenditures had been greatly reduced. The bill which he was pressing on the attention of the house did not reduce the revenue much more than one-third of the increase. The government had $100,000,000 surplus last year, and when the revenue could be abated by these $17,000,000 it would have this year about $135,000,000. He then proceeded to advocate the proposition contained in the bill, which, however, did not go as far as he might have wished.

THURSDAY, JUNE 22.

SENATE.—Mr. Windom introduced a bill for a $125,000 public building at Winona. After a long debate, Messrs. Sherman and Allison making the principal speeches, the bill providing for the extension of national bank charters passed—34 to 13.

Senator Allison made a strong argument in favor of a double standard of gold and silver, in which he was ably seconded by Senator Vest of Missouri. John Sherman had considerable parrying on his hands to ward off the thrusts of these two financial giants, but acquitted himself very creditably, as he generally does when his hobby is under discussion. The financial operations of the government from 1873 to the present were carefully reviewed, and the evils of a single standard portrayed in a vivid manner—although interest in the debate was confined to a few senators.

HOUSE.—Mr. Morrison of Illinois made a strong speech in opposition to the internal revenue taxation bill. Other speeches were made, and no other business of moment done.

Mr. Anderson of Kansas, made a speech to-day that attracted some attention. He maintained that the section of a district of population of forty-five and over to the square mile were in favor of legislation to benefit capital, and this party had a majority of 100 in the house at present. He claimed that in this sense Illinois and Indiana were Eastern States, and favored the reduction of capital taxes, but the more thinly settled agricultural states were naturally opposed to that policy.

FRIDAY JUNE 23.

SENATE.—A large number of bills were passed, including one creating the Oregon short line railway in Utah, Idaho and Wyoming, and one for the relief of Nebraska and Kansas public land settlers. The bankruptcy bill came up and Mr. Hoar offered as a substitute what is known as the Lowell bill.

The house resolutions commemorative of Representatives Allen (Mo.) were recieved, and after impressive remarks upon his life and services by Messrs. Cockrell, of Mo., Dawes of Mass., Brown of Ga., and Vest of Mo., the usual resolutions were adopted. Senator Vest is one of the very few orators of the senate and his speech was a gem. It was waited for with interest by a warm and hungry senate. It was eloquent and simple as all such efforts should be. Just before he sat down Vest referred to the custom among the Hindoo women when their loved ones lay dying of placing on the Ganges a lighted candle in an earthen vessel and watching until it was out of sight, confident that if the flame burned until the vessel could no longer distinguished that the spirit loosing itself from the body before them, would pass as tranquilly out of mortal sight. "So," said the eloquent little senator, "the dear ones of our dead friend watched, through his long illness, the flickering flame of his life float down the river of time until it passed out of mortal sight to burst, we trust, into grand effulgence on the ocean of eternity."

HOUSE.—Debate was resumed on the bill to reduce internal revenue taxation. Mr. Hewitt of New York made a vigorous speech in opposition to the bill, and Mr. Dunnell also spoke against the measure. Speeches eulogizing the late Representative Allen were made. Interest in to-day's proceedings were entered on Alexander H. Stephens of Georgia, who wheeled his invalid chair into the area facing the speaker and in a weak voice signified his approbation of the bill reducing taxation. He even went farther and favored a total abolition of revenue taxes, including those on whisky and tobacco, on the ground that it was in [illegible] the poor man to remove the embargo on the necessaries of life.

SATURDAY, JUNE 24.

SENATE—Not in session.

HOUSE.—A resolution was adopted for adjournment on July 10. The day was consumed in the discussion of the bill reducing internal revenue taxation, and great confusion and uproar prevailed much of the time. Ex-Speaker Randall introduced an amendment looking to the repeal of the taxes on tobacco, cigars, cigarettes and cheroots, to go into effect the 1st of July, 1883. Mr. Kelley stated that he had introduced the bill the 19th inst., which was now pending before the ways and means committee, similar to the amendment proposed by Mr. Randall, except that it went into effect July 1st., 1884. "Will you vote for the amendment if I change the time to conform with that in your bill?" asked Mr. Randall. Mr. Kelley would not promise to do this.

GUITEAU'S LAST WEEK.

No Respite—Guiteau Denounces the President—The Rope Prepared.

On Friday last the attorney general to whom all appeals and petitions presented to the president bearing on the Guiteau case has been referred, submitted an elaborate report to the cabinet reviewing all the points presented in favor or respite, and recommending it be not granted on the ground that the sanity of the prisoner had been fully established at the trial.

Rev. Mr. Hicks called upon the attorney general Saturday morning by appointment and was informed the cabinet had decided not to interfere in the execution of Guiteau's sentence. Hicks thereupon drove to the district jail and informed Guiteau of the decision. This announcement did not seem to have a depressing effect upon him, and he talked as cheerfully as ever. He expressed some feeling because the president had referred the subject of his respite to the attorney general, saying President Arthur should have taken the responsibility himself; that he (the prisoner) had not appealed to the cabinet, but to the president, and as his act had made him president the least he could do was to respite him for a short time till the case could be heard in the supreme court of the United States. He then repeated that he was God's man and was in God's hands, and asked Dr Hicks to be at his side when he was hanged, saying he would die for his inspiration, feeling that God would justify him in the other world. He had now no personal interest in the matter, but he felt for the nation, which would suffer in the event of his being hanged.

Later in the day Guiteau sent the following message to his spiritual adviser, Mr Hicks: "Go and see Arthur and shake your list in his face. Tell him I made him president by my inspiration, and he must give me an unconditional pardon, and if he does not God Almighty blast him forever. I tell you, brother Hicks, I am God's man and God takes care of his own." The attorney general, Saturday morning, instructed the marshal of the district and warden of the jail to keep the prisoner in strict confinement and allow no one to see him except his spiritual adviser, his physician and officers of the jail.

The death warrant which has been prepared by the deputy clerk of the court, will be signed Monday and sent to Warden Crocker. The time designated for the execution is between the hours of noon and 2 p. m., June 30, 1882.

Mr. Hicks held an extended service in the cell Saturday. "I am well pleased," said he this evening, "with Guiteau's spiritual conduct. He prays fervently, talks rationally and is not afraid to die. He has an abiding faith in his redeemer and expects to go to heaven." It having been rumored that Guiteau would make a statement soon implicating other parties, it will be well to give a statement made by him a few days ago in which he said: "I am alone in this. I was the only man in America who had the brains to plan and the nerve to execute, and I have done a great good for the country." After the cabinet conclusion was sent to Gen. Crocker, Mr. Robert Strong, the oldest jail guard in the service, was instructed to prepare a rope for the execution. The manilla rope used upon Babe Bedford, one of the Hirth murderers, was separated from the one used upon Queenan and thoroughly soaked, stretched and soaped by Mr. Strong, who has performed that kind of work for many years.

Fatal Accident on the Manitoba Railroad.

A very serious accident occurred on the main line of the Manitoba railroad on Saturday near Atwater. While a construction train was running at the rate of about eighteen miles an hour through some mysterious agency the locomotive and a number of cars including the caboose and an adjoining flat tumbled down a twelve foot embankment into eight feet of water. There were thirty or forty men in these two cars and thirteen dead had been taken from the wreck at last accounts and quite a number wounded. It is feared that there are others under the debris in the deep water, and a wrecking party searched all night for other victims of the accident. Among the killed was Geo. Floody, one of the trusty engineers of the line. The others are Norwegians and Swedes. Floody lived at Willmar. He leaves a wife, two sons and two daughters, whose bereavement calls forth the deepest sympathy.

The names of the killed and wounded, so far as can be ascertained, are as follows:

The killed, Geo. Floody, engineer; J. G. Dahl, workman; Andrew Anderson, workman; S. Thompson, workman; Torson Berkland, workman; Kristianson Swift, workman; John Holland, workman.

The wounded; James Wilson; C. Solberg, right side bruised; H. Stanton, internal injuries; Peter Rasmusson, right arm broken; and severe internal injuries; J. Winters, fireman, both arms broken.

Confederate Currency.

In the last few weeks of the war, says the Wall Street News, a confederate, serving under Lee, wrote home to his father in North Carolina that he was almost barefooted, and completely discouraged. As soon as the old man received the letter he mounted his mule, and sat off at a gallop, but was soon halted by an acquaintance, who called out: "Hello! has there been another fight?" Not as I've heard of; but I've got a letter from Cyrus." "What does Cyrus say?" "He's out o' butes, an' clean discouraged." "And whe're ye going?" "Down to Abner Smith's, to borrow seven hundred thousand dollars to send Cyrus to get a cheap pair of shoes, and we're going to write him a long letter, and send him a box o' pills, and tell him to hang on to the last; for if Cyrus gets low-spirited, and begins to let go, the infernal Yanks will be riding over us afore we kin back a mule outen the barn." "That's so, that's so!" nodded the other. "I kin let ye have the money myself as well as not. I was a savin' up to buy three plugs o' tobacker and a box o' matches all to once, but the army mustn't go barefoot when it only takes a puny seven or eight hundred thousand dollars to buy a purty good pair o' shoes. Go home and git a cart, and I'll have the money all tied up for ye.

The Indian Reservation.

The New York Graphic prints a map showing the Indian reservations of the United States west of the 84th meridan, and the number of Indians belonging thereto, from which it appears that there are 261,851 of the aborigines still left, and the lands they occupy amount to 155,632,312 acres, or 243,000 square miles—an area as large as all of New England, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Delaware, Maryland and the two Virginias together. The reservations number throughout the United States about 125, and the agencies about two hundred. The five civilized tribes in Indian Territory have betweenthem 16,250 houses, 209 schools, and 156 churches where the gospel is expounded by seventy-four missionaries. Seventy thousand of the uncivilized Indians have been doing work of improvement and have now 12,893 houses, of which 1,409 were built during the census year. They have also accommodation for 10,000 of the 40,000 children belonging to them. Of the civilized Indians 30,000 can read, and of the uncivilized 13,578, no less, than 1,508 of whom learned during the year. Among the uncivilized Indians there are also 26,240 families who cultivate farms or small patches of ground, and over 35,000 masculine Indians of this class do some sort of useful civilized work.

HON. JAMES B. WAKEFIELD.

He is Unanimously Nominated for Congress by the Second Minnesota District Republicans.

And Accepts the Trust in a Gracious Speech—Emphatic Resolutions Adopted.

The Republican Congressional convention for the Second Minnesota district assembled at the court house in Mankato, on the 21st and was called to order by E. P. Freeman, chairman of the district committee. Col. F. B. Smith of Blue Earth was made temporary chairman, and C. A. Bennett, of, Granite Falls, secretary, who were afterwards made permanent offices.

On motion of Mr. L. B. Hunt of Blue Earth the following committee on resolutions was appointed by the chair: Messers. L. P. Hunt, of Blue Earth; B. C. Sanborn, Watonwan; J. H. Welch, Faribault; W. L. Couplin, Nicollet, and C. F. Case, Lyon county, and shortly made the following report which was unanimously adopted;

The republicans of the second congressional district of Minnesota, in convention assembled, asserting their steadfast adherence to the fundamental principles of the republican party, do hereby resolve:

That it is the aim and mission of the republican party of the country to protect the interests and guard the rights of the producers and to secure the industrial classes the fruits of their toil by just and equitable legislation.

That we believe in the fulfillment in good faith of all legal acts passed by congress, making grants of lands in aid of the construction of railroads in our state, but condemn in unqualified terms any construction of such acts in any manner as to convey any larger portion of public demain than was by congress originally intended; and demand of our members in congress such action as will correct the evil and leave the largest possible amount of the public domain open to settlement and cultivation under the homestead and pre-emption laws.

That we are opposed to the renewal of patents by congressional action of articles in common use, for which we are compelled to pay exorbitant prices, far above all adequate and legitimate return for the capital involved in their production and manufacture.

That the question of cheap transportation for our agricultural products is one of vital importance to the people of this country and we demand that our representation in the state and national legislature shall give early and earnest attention to the solution of this problem.

That is the duty of congress to so modify our present internal revenue and tariff laws as to permit articles of prime necessity to come into the country free from oppressive and unjust duties, and to impose upon luxuries the burden, as far as practicable, of furnishing the revenue for the support of the government.

That the high trust of an office should be administered in the sole interests of the people, and that the same efficiency, economy, and integrity should obtain herein as are looked for in the execution of private trusts.

The following district committee was designated by the chairmen of the different delegations present, and announced by the chair:

Blue Earth—L. G. M. Fletcher.
Brown—Joseph Bobleter.
Cottonwood—John Hutton.
Faribault—H. J. Neal, chairman.
Jackson—Alex Feddes.
Lacqui Parle—H. A. Larson.
Lyon—A. D. Davidson.
Le Sueur—L. Quackenbush.
Lincoln—C. M. Morse.
Martin—Frank A. Day.
Murray—B. H. Whitney.
Nicollet—C. Amundson.
Nobles—A. M. Crosby.
Pipestone—I. L. Hart.
Redwood—W. P. Dennington.
Rock—N. R. Reynolds.
Sibley—J. P. Kirby.
Waseca—W. G. Ward.
Watonwan—Geo. P. Johnson.
Yellow Medicine—John Swenson.

The report of the committee on credentials was adopted.

The convention then proceeded to an informal ballot for candidate for congress. Mr. S. P. Childs nominated James B. Wakefield, and Mr. Freeman seconded the nomination. M. D. L. Collister of Waseca was also placed in nomination, when the convention proceeded with a ballot by counties. The informal ballot resulted in James B. Wakefield receiving 99 votes and Mr. M. D. L. Collister 7 votes out of a total of 106. On motion of Mr. E. B. Collister of Waseca, the nomination of Mr. Wakefield was made by acclamation.

Messrs. E. P. Freeman, E. P. Collister and C. C. Goodenow were appointed to apprise Mr. Wakefield of his nomination, and Mr. Wakefield was handsomely introduced by Mr. Freeman of the committee. Mr. Wakefield then addressed the convention at considerable length. After gracefully accepting the nomination and complimenting his predecessors in the old first district, he said:

"The resolutions you have been pleased to adopt are in accord with my judgement so far as I am informed of their purport. They form a platform broad enough and liberal enough for any American citizen to stand upon. They enunciate, I think, the true theories and beliefs of a large majority of our people, and I shall gladly labor to give them force and effect in legislation. I shall hold myself in readiness, both as a private citizen and a public servant, to do all in my power to enoble and dignify labor, and to realize to every man, whether farmer, artisan or professional man, the truth of that authorative amendment that the laborer is worthy of his hire.

I shall aim to protect the husbandman in the enjoyment of the full fruits of his industry, and to protect him from the rapacity of those who would earn their bread by the sweat of his brow, whether they are entrenched behind charters or fortified by grants. I will advocate and sustain such legislation as will enable the laboring masses of the country to procure the needs of life free from oppressive tariffs and discriminating duties. I will especially favor the elimination from our national statutes of those burdensome restrictions upon intellectual progress which an unwarrantable duty upon paper has imposed. Believing as I do that the transportation question is one of paramount importance to this district, I will heartily co-operate with those who seek such a solution of this difficult problem as will be for the best interests of a purely agricultural constituency. While I not knowingly lend myself to any action that will tend to cripple unjustifiably the resources or impair the efficiency of those great corporations to whom we are in a large measure compelled to look for the transportation of our products to market, yet I would give them to understand that as they have received their life from the breath of a generous people, so should they forget their obligations to their benefactors that breath will be withdrawn to their utter discomfiture.

The candidate nominated by such an overwhelming vote of the republicans of the Second district was tremendulously applauded at the close of his address, and the convention adjourned after having been in session for a little more than one and a half hours.

SKETCH OF THE CANDIDATE.

James Beach Wakefield was born at Winsted, Litchfield county, Conn., March 21, 1828. His father, Luman Wakefield, was well known as a physician. James had every advantage of education, and prepared for college in Westfield, Mass., and Jonesville, N. Y. In 1843 he entered Trinity college, in Hartford, and graduated with honors in 1846. Mr. Wakefield chose the law as his profession, and first studied in the office of his brother-in-law, Judge E. T. Wilder, then of Painsville, O., and later a resident of Red Wing, in this state. It was in the Ohio village that Mr. Wakefield was admitted to practice, the year being 1851, and until 1854, when he came to Minnesota, he practiced at Delphi, Ind. Shakopee was his first residence in this state and in 1856 he moved to what is now Blue Earth City, where he has made his home ever since.

In 1858 he was appointed deputy agent at the Lower Sioux agency, and there remained for several years, returning to Blue Earth City immediately prior to the Sioux outbreak of 1862. In 1869 he was made receiver of the Winnebago land district by President Grant, the headquarters of the office being first removed to Jackson and afterwards to Worthington. Mr. Wakefield retained the office until 1875, when he resigned and attended more particularly to his beautiful farm of 240 acres which adjoins his home.

He was a member of the house in the first legislature Minnesota had as a state and was in the same body in 1863 and 1866, being the speaker in the last year. In 1867 he was elected a state senator and continued such through the sessions of 1868 and part of 1869 resigning in the latter year to accept the position of register of the land office.

In 1875 he was elected lieutenant governor and was re-elected in 1877, and is often spoken of as one of the best presiding officers in the Union. In outside political life Mr. Wakefield has also borne part and was a delegate to the National republican conventions of 1868 and 1870, being on the committee on resolutions in the latter body. Since leaving the convention Mr. Wakefield has lived quietly at his home in Blue Earth City engaged in farming, of which he was naturally fond, and appearing now and then in St. Paul, as at the Hubbard convention, of which he was chairman. He is of commanding presence and impressive manner, dignified yet affable, popular among his townspeople and equally so throughout the state, ready in speech though not particularly oratorical.

First Regiment Reunion at St. James.

The fifteenth annual reunion of the first regiment of Minnesota volunteers began at St. James, Watonwan county, on the 21st. President Cannon called the comrades, about forty, together at the stand and introduced Adjt. Gen. Hawley, who turned over to the president the old flags, urging the importance of the soldiers refraining from cutting pieces from the precious old relics. He also presented them the old drum used by the First Minnesota at Fort Snelling in 1861 and until 1864. A resolution passed to fall in and march around the town, which was done in a soldierly manner. After the return to camp Capt. Wright and Gen. Hawley made brief addresses.

On the 22d at 9 o'clock, the annual business meeting of the First Regiment association was called to order at the stand by President Cannon, and Col. C. F. Hansdorf was elected permanent secretary. Letters of regret at inability to be present from Capt. Adam Marty, Stillwater; Maj. Gen. W. S. Hancock, Governor's Island; Bishop Whipple and absent members of the regiment were read by the secretary.

The association decided to meet at Anoka next year. John W. Pride of Anoka was elected president of the association for the ensuing year; vice president, M. F. Taylor; treasurer, James Cannon; secretary, C. F. Hansdorf.

The deaths of W. H. Washington, Company I, was reported at Wabasha on the 5th of July last; Lester A. Webb, Company F, at Fort Buford, six months ago; Lieut. Col. Stephen A. Miller, Wm. H. Churchill, Company K, at Stockton, in March; Edward Brisette, Company C, at St. Paul, two weeks ago—the latter arriving in Minnesota in 1832.

The association received Gen. Gibbon, their old corps commander, in military style, the old regimental bugler, Ernest Mayer of St. Peter, sounding the call on the instrument which had performed like service on many a previous and less peaceful and agreeable occasion. The veterans formed in ranks in front of the stand, with the battle-torn and weather-beaten standards of the old First in front, supplemented by the division flag which had been loaned to the regiment by Gen. Gibbon, in whose possession it has been since the war.

Gen. Gibbon's division headquarters flag was carried through the Gettysburg battle, and five men were killed while carrying the noble standard through that heroic and tremendous struggle. The staff is now made in two sections—one portion being made of Union wood and the other captured of the rebels. At 10:50 o'clock President Cannon introduced Hon. J. J. Thornton of St. James, who welcomed the veterans to the town.

Immediately following the close of Mr. Thornton's address the gunners resumed the salute, and at the second fire the gun was discharred prematurely, shattering the right arm of George Peabody, an Omaha railroad emplоye living at St. James, injuring the eyes, but not destroying them, and lacerating the flesh on the right arm. Owen Roberts of Mankato, who was the principal gunner, had his thumb on the vent at the time and the end of it was blown off.

At the suggestion of President Cannon, $112.75, or 90 per cent. of the annual dues paid at the business meeting, was donated to the family of Mr. Peabody, and 10 per cent. to that of Mr. Roberts, who sustained the less severe injury. Gen. John Gibbon was then introduced by Mr. Cannon. Gen Gibbon's address was the finest tribute ever bestowed on the old First and ought to be printed in permanent form.

Judge Lawrance also made an address and several good speeches were made at the banquet.

County Officers Must File their Bonds.

Public Examiner H. M. Knox, in view of the fact that there are 137 cases of failure of county officers to file bonds as required by law distributed through 58 counties, has sent out the following circular.

OFFICE OF PUBLIC EXAMINER, ST. PAUL.

DEAR SIR: The bonds of the county officers named below are required by law to be filed in the office of secretary of state at St. Paul. All must be forwarded by the register of deeds, after recording, except his own bond which must be sent by the county auditor. See secs. 4 and 5, chap. 110, G. L. 1881. It is absolutely necessary for the purposes named in secs. 6, 7, and 9 of the chap. and also that I may fulfill my duties under sec. 91, chap. 6, G. S., 1878, that these bonds may be promptly forwarded. Bonds of officers of your county not marked off below are not found in the secretary's office. Will you not see that the obstacles are removed and the bonds forwarded at once, or acquaint me with the reasons for delay that I may try to remove them. Respectfully yours.

HENRY M. KNOX, Pub. Exam'r.

It was decided to hold the next annual meeting of the grand grove in St. Paul on the third Tuesday in June, 1883.

Alleged Embezzlement at Hastings, Minn.

There is a good deal of talk on the streets and among business men at Hastings on account of the arrest of N. F. W. Kranz, ex-register of deeds, on an indictment found by the grand jury charging him with the embezzlement of funds belonging to certain parties who had placed them in his hands for loaning purposes. Mr. Kranz was register of deeds of Dakota county for twelve years and since his retirement, last January, has been engaged in the real estate, insurance and loan business. He is also justice of the peace of the First ward of Hastings and a director of the Hastings Union Industrial association. He was at one time one of the most influential citizens in the county, but lately it has been rumored that he was on the verge of bankruptcy.

Red Wing Advance: Another new swindle is being perpetrated on the farmers in different parts of the country. The mode of operation is as follows: Two rogues watch the paper for estray notices. When one is published one of them goes and looks at the animal. Of course, on application the unsuspecting farmer shows the beast, [illegible] to his partner and describes the animal minutely. No. 2 goes to the farmer, and after proving by the thorough description that he is the owner of the animal, says he cannot take it away, and offers to sell it at a bargain. The farmer buys it, and in a few days the rightful owner comes along and claims the animal, and of course the farmer is out just so much.

Sheriff Mickley of Stearns county contributed four prisoners to the penitentiary last week as follows: Addis Rogevief, rape, thirty years; George Cowell, burglary, five years; Louis Bridgeman, larceny, three years; Chris. Cannon, breaking and entering an office with intent the crime of burglary, eight months.

At the Grand Commandry of Knights Templar at Red Wing, the officers elected for the current year were as follows

H. M. Lebor of Benson, Minn., imprisoned in default of $50 fine on a charge of selling liquor to Indians, was released from custody at the expiration of thirty days.

George Green was drowned near Blooming Prairie last Saturday.

Personal Gossip.

The father of Hon. Levi P. Morton was one of the old-time, hard thinking New England clergymen. His salary was only $600 a year, but on that he managed to give each of his six children a good education.

Willard W. Poland of Muncie, Ind., is posted as having eloped with Mrs. James Pixley and Miss Mary Warner. The circular offering $300 reward for their discovery says "the parties have always moved in the best society, attending church and Sunday-school regularly, and will be likely to keep up the same appearances."

Mrs. Clark a sister of Edwin Booth, in her work, lately published, "The Elder and the Younger Booth," tells an incident in the life of her father, which gains interest from the facts that it is undoubtely true. While on a trip South, on the steamer Neptune, Mr. Booth (J. B.) had one of his fits of depression, and finally jumped overboard. Tom Flynn, the actor, who accompanied Booth on the voyage, took a small boat, in company with others, and finally succeeded in rescuing the would-be suicide. Almost the first words uttered by Booth after they drew him in were: "I say, Tom, look out! You're a heavy man; be steady; if the boat upsets we'll all be drowned.

A Grand old specimen of humanity is the Honorable Isaac Holden, of the British house of commons. He is seventy-five years of age, yet is a splended example of physical and mental vigor. He has but recently completed for himself a palace costing half a million dollars, and at a feast given upon his seventy-fifth birthday, last week, each of his half-dozen daughters found in their napkins a check for $250,000

New York Herald: "Bishop Foss (Methodist), who has just come out ahead in a severe fight of erysipelas, is one of the finest specimens of physical manhood in America. Tall, broad-shouldered, deep-chested, he has a complexion as fair as a woman's, and a blue eye as clear as can be found in the mountains or on the prairies. He has always believed that no honest man can have too much of Gospel, roast beef, conscience and pure air, and has by his personal life proved the soundness of his theories.

Here is a new "Boston notion," and one worthy of all commendation. Jordan, Marsh & Co., the largest dry goods firm in Boston, have generously resolved to give eleven of their employes a vacation, and pay their expenses of a trip to Europe, the fortun ate ones being drawn for by lot. To the eleven, for others, who have served the firm continuously for twenty years, are to be added, the whole party, including the wives of some of the gentlemen, numbering twenty-five.

Galignani tells a good story at the expense of a very wealthy American who, coming to the conclusion that he needed a coat of arms, ordered one. The person to whom he gave the order was a wag and suggested as a motto the words, "Semper nobilis omnibus benignus," which he translated freely, "Always noble and kind to everybody." His patron was pleased with it and acquiesced readily to the suggestion that on his coat of arms the motto should be represented by the initials of the words, as the "Senatus of populus que Romans" of the Roman Republic was represented on its banners by the initials S. P. Q. R. And it was some time before the wealthy man discovered that the beautiful stationery on which he and his family were writing their many epistles really bore the caption of S. N. O. B.

Some Very Handsome Patterns in Carpets.

New York Letter in the Cincinnati Enquirer.

Carpets now show improvement in styles and patterns. Small figures are in demand and, in fact, large ones can not be found in the stores where ancient stock is not kept. There was a time when the room of the ordinarp flat size wouldn't show a single figure complete. In some of the patterns now shown small designs are crowded together in wonderful harmony of color and device. Many treasured old tapestry has less art than the ordinary carpeting of the present day. Some are veritable pictures and can be studied for hours without growing familiar. Some of the favorite designs represent ferns, leaves, branches and foliage in symmetrical entanglement. Borders are still used and often are wholly different from the body though harmonizing with it. A feature of our carpet stores just now is the display of Oriental mattings. Not only are they bought to put down in summer residences, but they are coming into use in chambers of city houses.

A bed room provided with white china matting with a half breadth of colored check for a border, and a Turkish rug in the centre, is quite correct. Another thing for the center of a sleeping room, if the sleeper be an unmarried woman, is a small bed. This is a bran new affectation. A brass bedstead a trifle larger than the woman and not much wider than her greatest breadth is placed in the middle of the apartment and furnished with the daintiest possible bed clothes; but everything about the affair must be perfectly plain, the desire being to suggest the utmost simplicity on the part of the maiden. Sometimes a cot is used, and, if the occupant be of a light-weight, she selects a structure of frail design, so as to prove how airy and fairy she is.

A Case of Somnambulism.

From the Cincinnati Enquirer.

Shortly before 1 o'clock this morning turn-key John Miller of Ninth street station, had occasion to go around on Central avenue, when he beheld a woman clad only in her night clothes and barefooted, walking along on the pavement between Eighth and Ninth streets. He summoned Sergeant Rittweger, who went out and caught the lady by the arm, when she cried out: "Oh! where am I? who are you?" She had been asleep, and the approach of the officer awakened her. Sergeant Rittweger led the lady, who was in a bewildered condition, to the station house. He saw that she was a somnambulist, and thought the best thing to do was to take her in the cell room and then inform her folks. This was done, and the lady with whom the somnambulist boards, on West Seventh street, was sent for, and came with her clothes and took her home. It is a singular fact that the lady got up in her sleep, unlocked the door of her room, walked down two flights of stairs, then unlocked the front door and went out on the street and walked at least half a mile before found by the officer. Her toes and feet were covered with mud. She had been ill for a few days past, and last night the physician gave her some quinine, and she retired at 10 o'clock, and was not missed from again by the folks in the house until they were aroused by the officer this morning. She is a married lady, and at present her husband is out of the city on business.

WHY PEGGY MARRIED SILAS

Her Own Account of It to a Sympathizing Friend.

Springfield Republican.

I used to be called an old maid, I think old Nancy Vincent was jealous, or she never would have started out all over the neighborhood on purpose to tell folks that I was out for an old maid. But thanks to my knowledge of human nature, I have at last got a good man, and Nance may storm and whistle till her mouth is all out of shape, for what I care. I married Silas Harris one year ago, and I am going to tell you all about it.

You see old Mrs. Harris got took down sick, an' they had no one to do the housework, sich as bakin', washin', ironin', an' sweepin'; so I, feelin' kinder tender hearted—I always was a tender hearted creeter—I went up there an' told Mr. Harris, which was Mrs Harris' son, that I would stay an' help 'em, if they couldn't git anybody that would suit 'em better.

"Nancy Vincent has been here and offered her services," said the old lady.

"Then she has been here, has she?" I was afraid after I had spoken that they would notice how mad I was, but they didn't; and I told 'em plainly that all Nance Vincent was after was a husband,—told 'em about her cookin', what miserable bread she made, what a figure she cut at the meetin' house, with a her bustle clean up to her shoulders,—and told all about her tryin' to catch Parson Smith's son, who is only about twenty, and she 51, and I didn't know out she might be seventy.

"Well, if she is such a creature we don't want her here," said Mrs. Harris.

You'd better believe that I was glad to hear her say so. Mr. Harris has a good farm, a nice house an' barn, and I had no notion of lettin' old Nance come in ahead of me, though I never did care anything about the men sex, never; still I didn't intend to have the wool pulled over my eyes. I always knew her to be a pesky old gossip. I don't tell stories about my neighbors, and I don't gad all over town—unless there is something to gad about.

"She is all I've told you and more too," said I, and then Mr. Harris, who is now my husband, told me to come and stay with his mother and he would pay me.

"I don't ask no pay," said I. She is my neighbor, and neighbors should help each other in case of sickness."

"Well, come if you can and I will see that you don't loose anything by it."

Of course I went right up there; what else could I do? Mrs. Harris made me bake some riz' bread the fust thing, then I baked some pies, and then, as it was near supper time, I cooked some nice slap-jacks, for I knew Silas liked slap-jacks' Then I put a clean white spread on the table, placed some of my riz bread on, together with some of my best quince sauce that I had brought from home, fixed the slap-jacks, butter and tea in their places, then I blowed the horn to call Silas to supper.

Pretty soon he came in, but who do think was with him? Why, nobody but old Nancy Vincent. I was mad? She went right up to Mrs. Harris, and, taking a paper parcel from under her old yaller shawl, said: "I thought you'd need some cookin' done, bein' so unwell like an' not being able to work, an' I took the liberty to bring you some chicken an' cheese," then she laid her victuals on the table and looked at Silas, while her old mummy face wrinkled up into what she meant to be a smile, but it looked more like a dried bacon, 60 years old.

"Thank you very much, but we've got a good cook," said Mrs. Harris.

"Is she the one?" and Nance pointed at my face, while her squinting green eyes fairly snapped sparks.

"I came with the intention of helping our sick neighbor until she was able to help herself," I answered.

"You did, did you? I don't see what you are meddlin' around in—"

"She is not to blame. I told her to come," suddenly broke in Silas.

"Then I s'pose it's all right, if you told her to come, but there's folks in the world that knows more about sickness and nursin', I can tell you," and Nance flounced toward the door.

"Stay and take supper with us, won't you?" asked Silas.

"I don't know but I will, seein' as how your mother is so unwell."

"That's right, Nancy, sit down and be neighborly once in your life," and I placed a chair for her at the table. I could see that Nance felt dreadful uneasy, though I felt all right, except that I was kinder mad. Silas praised my sauce, and said my slapjacks were the best he ever ate. And Mrs. Harris said my bread couldn't be beat.

Nance never said a word, but she was the spitefulest lookin' critter I ever did see. I determined that I wouldn't touch her old chicken and cheese, and so she thought she'd pass it round herself.

"Try some of my chicken, Mrs. Harris, you'll like it, I know you will."

Mrs. Harris took a small slice, but only just tasted of it.

"Have some cheese," and she passed the plate, but the sick lady only took a small piece, gave a glance at it and laid it on the table, with the remark that she dare not eat cheese.

"You'll take a piece, Silas?"

"I don't care if I do," said he.

She again passed her plate, and Silas reached out his hand and took up a piece, but just as he was going to bite off a chunk, a little shower of white skippers rattled off into his tea.

You'd better believe he didn't eat much of that cheese. He got up, sudden like, and said his head ached. I didn't see him again very soon. Mrs. Harris said she felt sick to her stomach, and left the room. Nance didn't know what to make of it all, but she bustled up and said I'd been a tellin' stories about her, so that I could catch Silas myself.

"You lie, you know you do, Nance Vincent!" I didn't care it I did talk plain, bein' as how Silas and Mrs. Harris was out of the room.

"You lie yourself, you old cap-settin' snipe!"

Now to be called a cap-settin' snipe,—to be called so by old Nance Vincent,—was more than I could stand; so I went at her, "hammer and tongues."

"Nance Vincent," said I,—and you'd better believe I felt mad,—"do you think you can come here, with your old fly-blown cheese, full of skippers, with your old chicken, so tough that a—a dog couldn't eat it, with the expectation of catchin' Silas Harris for a husband?"

"You may talk and talk," said she, snivelling, "but I can tell you one thing," and she looked vindictively at me. "I didn't come here to lie about folks, and I didn't come here to set a trap to catch Silas Harris."

"No, I don't think you did," said I, "skippery cheese ain't quite the thing to bait him with; and I don't think he would have such an old withered gad-about as you be, even if you should ask him."

Nance swept her old cheese and chicken into a paper bag, then she tied her old bonnet on her head, and stepped out on the piazza as mad as a hornet.

"You may go," said I, "nobody wants you here with your old maggotty cheese."

"I'll write a letter to Silas," she screamed as she switched down the path, "and tell him what a mean thing you be."

"I'm a going to tell him what an old mischief-making body you are," was my answer.

Mrs. Harris now called me, and I went into her room.

"Has that spiteful creature gone?" she inquired.

"Yes, I hope so."

"Good riddance to bad rubbage," said she.

"I hope so," said I.

"If Nance Vincent comes here again, I'll get Silas to turn her away. I can't have my nerves disturbed again in such a manner. Now Peggy, you may do up the work."

I went at it with a will. I washed and put away the dishes, swept the floor, blacked the stove, and then, as Silas appeared with two pails of milk, I went into the milk-room to help him strain it and put it on the shelf.

"You had quite a time with Nance, didn't you?" and he burst out laughing.

"I couldn't help it, she provoked me."

"You did just right, but you both acted as though you had a deal of temper," and he actually laughed right in my face.

I felt kinder ashamed that he had heard my quarrel with Nance, but I didn't care much, for I always do speak right out when I get a little mad.

After I had strained the milk, and he had put it away, he laid his hand on my shoulder and said:—

"Peggy, you and I are getting pretty well along in years, and I guess we'd better have a wedding. Don't you think it would be a good plan for us to get married?,'

I looked at him, kinder startled, it come so sudden. Finally, I thought that as I was 49 years old and he only 40, and as I was all alone in the world, it would be a good plan, especially as he owned a nice farm. So I told him I'd have him,—though I never did care anything about the men sex,—and we were married a year ago.

But Nance ain't married, and I hope she never will be.

WHAT YACHTING COSTS.

Fun to be Enjoyed Only by Those With Very Large Bank Accounts.

From the New York Mail and Express.

"That nice little show on Decoration Day," said a yachtsman, "cost the yacht owners of this city not less than $20,000. It takes money, I tell you, to put a yacht in condition for such a sail, even when she is in commission and everything seems to be ready. It was something nice to see the sails of my sloop flapping in the wind as we rounded the South-west Spit. Well, every flap cost me about fifty dollars, that's all." This gentleman, who has, perhaps, built, bought and sailed more sloop and schooner yachts than any other one man in America, was in excellent position to tell something about the expenses of yachting. He had been opening his pockets very liberally for a dozen years or so, paying sailors and sailmakers, cooks, stewards, captains and painters, and he seemed inclined to tell his experience. He said that his first yacht, a sloop, cost him $15,000. "When she was all ready," he continued, "she was manned by a crew on board, and the pantry and wine-closets stocked—I anchored her off on Tompkinsville and invited a party of friends to go out and take a sail. Before the mainsail was hoisted for the first trip that sloop cost me $16,500. The season's sport as I thought it then, or worse as I am now inclined to think it was, stood me in $8,000 more, or so close to $25,000, all told, it would make your head swim."

"What are some of the expenses of keeping up a good-sized yacht?" the reporter inquired. "Exactly the same as keeping up a good-sized house," the yachtsman replied. "That is to say, just what the owner will stand. If he has $20,000 to spare and is easy in money matters and fond of company a season of yachting will cost him $20,000. If he is close, does things on a small scale and has little company he may squeeze though on $5,000. You can get sail-master, like a watch, for most any price. I paid mine $2,500 a year and consider him cheap. I have had one steward for four years at $100 a month for a season.

Champaign is pre-eminently the yachtsman's weakness, and champagne costs money—good champagne. A man can drink twice as much without feeling any bad effects when he is on the salt water as when he is ashore. Then besides these bills, you have your regular salary list, payable monthly. This varies with the size and character of the yacht. My list averages something over $800 a month. Some are more and others less.

English Actresses.

In a paper in Potter's Monthly, entitled "The British stage in the Nineteenth Century" is a description of the beautiful Miss O'Neill, the daughter of an Irish manager of a small theater, who took all London by storm when she appeared at Covent Garden in 1816. She played for five years and married, while in the height of her popularity, a wealthy Irish baronet, with whom she spent nearly fifty years of happy married life. The writer of the article says in this connection.

The instances in which actresses have been carried from the stage to adorn the highest circles in the aristocratic community of Great Britain are numerous. At least eight or nine have been wooed and won by men of mark and likelihood. Three of the ladies became duchesses—one lived to be a marchioness—the others were the wives of earls and baronets. Among the latter, foremost for her charms and moral worth, was Miss Farren, the grandmother of the present earl of Derby. The former Lord Derby became much interested in her during the life time of his countess, but it was not until that lady died that he paid his addresses in due form to Miss Farren. The costume in which she here appears, in an old comedy called "The Gamesters," long since consigned to the limbo of oblivion, shows that she played late in the last century. Her features were transmitted to her son, once known as a traveler in America, Mr. Stanley—the family name. On his father's death Mr. Stanley became Earl Derby, and abandoning the whigs, to which party he had become attached, he assumed the leadership of the conservatives, and from the incisive character of his speeches acquired the sobriquet of "the Rupert of debate."

A SAD FACT.

There is no cure for consumption and yet consumption of lungs, liver or kidneys may be checked and the decay arrested by using Dr. Guysott's Yellow Dock and Sarsaparilla. It strengthens every organ of life and restores all lost or impaired organic functions to their normal condition. A single bottle will convince you of its great merit. (Ask your druggist to get it for you.

We do not wish to be cruel, but would simply remark that Mr. Buell has acted like a fool.

Mr. Clemens Knowlton, of Falmouth, Ky., writes. "I was quite an invalid, afflicted with a complication of diseases that showed a tendency to weaken and exhaust my brain and nervous system. I found myself quickly cured by using a bottle of Dr. Guysott's Yellow Dock and Sarsaparilla. It has given perfect tone and real strength to every part of my body, and my blood is free from all impurity."

A man who appears in the rogue's gallery is not respected outside the family circle.

FARMERS' COLUMN.

Agricultural Items.

The apple orchards, north and east, have just passed their blossoming stage, and the prospect for fruit in New York, the New England states, New Jersey, and eastern Pennsylvania were never better.

Ten years ago, the man who should have predicted that Iowa, in 1881, would rank forth as a butter producing state, would have been reckoned as a crank. Yet she did, being outranked only by New York, Pennsylvania and Ohio.

Cayenné pepper blown into cracks where mice and cockroaches are accustomed to haunt, will drive them away.

The annual value of our dairy crop is more than double that of the cotton crop, and the production of cotton is by no means a small industry.

Where worms infest flower pots they may be driven out by mixing an ounce of ammonia in a gallon of water, and with the solution water the plants.

Farmers should read and think more and work less. Builders and their employes in the cities work but ten hours a day and earn more than the farmers and their hands who work fourteen to sixteen hours daily. And the mechanics declare they are not going to work more than eight hours a day by and by.

A discussion in European papers upon the question of the effects of freezing upon the flavor of meat, participated in by many chief cooks and stewards, appears to show that even the development of flavor is arrested and kept in abeyance by the congelation. If frozen at once after being killed it is as devoid of flavor immediately on being thawed, but "ripens" in the same time and manner when liberated from the torponic clutch as if never had been in its power. Aside from this non-injury, there is the positive advantage, well understood in our Northern States and Canada, of a decided effect of freezing in increasing tenderness.

Household Varieties.

If the lady who wishes a "freckle wash" will dissolve half an ounce of saltpeter and an ounce of borax in a quart of soft water, and add the juice of one lemon, she will find it very effectual.

Introductions are made of the less to the greater. In walking the gentleman gives the lady the inside of the walk. Common sence should regulate all matters of social intercourse, and the rules laid down in etiquette books are or should be flexible.

Jelly rolls are delicious made from this recipe: Three eggs, half a cup of butter, one cup of flour, one and a half teaspoonfuls of baking powder, two-thirds of a cup of pulverized sugar, a little salt; bake in shallow pans—a drip-plug-pan well buttered is good for this purpose; put on the dough till it is about half an inch thick; take it carefully from the tins when baked, and lay on a cloth; spread jelly evenly over it with a knife; roll while hot; if this is not done the cake will crumble.

What Constitutes Good Farming.

Formerly it was thought that education was not necessary for a farmer—ability to swing an axe, hold a plough, handle a hoe and swing a scythe being all that was required in a good farmer. This opinion has given way to a more enlightened one. At the present day it is conceded that a well directed use of brains is worth more to the farmer than undirected physical labor. Both combined are still more effective where the greatest profit is expected.

One of the many elements of success in farming is in keeping posted up with the times. This in a great measure may be obtained by reading our best agricultural journals, and he who is a close student can learn much that he can use to his own advantage, and at small cost. The habitual carelessness which one meets with among farmers, especially in the matter of small things, is to be deprecated. Many things are allowed to go to waste for want of proper care. The farming tools are left where last used exposed to the changes of weather, and, sooner or later becomes useless from rust and decay. The natural wear is quite an annual loss, even where properly cared for. Some who are looked upon as good, practical farmers do not give the needed attention to small things, and as a consequence a loss is sustained. This in part is owing to the laxity in system and order which is so essential in all kinds of business.

Many farmers are greatly in error in trying to work too great a quantity of land, having more than they can properly improve and cultivate. All lands that do not yield sufficient to pay for labor, interest, and taxes, and are incapable of improvement with the means of the owner (except woodland enough to supply the wants of the farm), should be disposed of at some price or even given away, rather than be held at a yearly loss, which has to come out of the profits of the farm. This loss is greater in most cases than the increasing value of the land. There are other leaks that should be looked to; "a constant dropping soon fills the cask." Large crops are simply the result of applying manure, which every farmer knows, but many of them fail to give it that attention its importance demands. Even where land is good, manure largely increases the crop. This can be obtained by different methods on the farm without resorting to costly commercial fertilizers.

New Designs in Needlework.

From the New York Mail and Express.

Already the summer hotels are open, and the sound of the clinkling of steel knitting-needles may be heard on a thousand piazzas throughout the country, with the accompanying low hum of conversation of women busy with their fancy work. There is no longer any need that this fancy work shall be an atrocious mixture of Berlin wools. The excellent schools of design of South Kensington and in this country have furnished exquisite patterns which delight the eye as well as employ the idle fingers.

A variety of articles are now wrought on heavy white or unbleached linen. A set of doylies, a tray cover, buffet covers, bureau covers, pillow "shams" or bed spreads are made on this material. There is a considerable quantity of darned work seen in the new designs, though many patterns are embroidered in outline and crewel. Little of old cut work is attempted, as the button-hole stitch which surrounds the raw edges after the pattern is cut away is tedious to work. Drawn work is even more effective than cut work, and is easier to do. Great nine-inch borders of openwork pattern are shown in drawn linen, and the hexagonal patterns which are frequently seen are very pretty. Doylies are a piece of handiwork often undertaken by beginners and they are tastefully wrought in simple outline work, and are so small that they may be picked up at odd intervals and finished before the worker is hardly aware of it. Some of the prettiest doylies are scattered with tiny rosebuds or forget-me-nots in dresden china colors. A dozen Shakeipeare doylies are frequently undertaken, with a stag, a cock, a hare or lobster wrought outline in the corner, and a quotation from Shakespeare, among others the hospitable welcome of Lady Macbeth—"Now good digestion wait on appetite and health on both."

Bureau covers, splashes and pillow shams add a dainty finish to the most lovely bondoir. Pillow shams are especially pretty. One design shows a hop and trellis twisted to form the words "Happy be thy dreams;" another a spray of morning glories with the words on one, "Go sleep like closing flowers," and on the other "Heaven thy morning will bless." These shams are finished on the edge with a simple two-inch hem, wrought in hem-stich. Another set of pillow shams, hem-stitched and bordered with torchon lace, are scattered in one corner, with a red poppy, with green leaves, and inscribed "Gute nacht." Bureau covers are usually of linen, embroidered with flowers. Rose petals or tiny blue forget-me-nots are scattered over them and a heavier wreath of the same flowers wrought on the ends. Other covers are in heavy towel linen, the ends being drawn and run with ribbons. Splashes for the back of washstands are a square of hem-stitched linen, finished on the upper edge with a border of torchon lace. A landscape, with water and buds and the motto, "The rose is sweetest washed with dew," is poetical enough not to be suggestive.

Facts and Fancies.

The clerk at the Albany (N. Y.) penitentiary in an interview, the other day, said: All our life men are peculiarly well behaved. They obey the rules, are generally pleasant, and seem to want to retain the good will of their keepers. Still, give them a good chance to escape and they will go like a flash—but they would have to see their way clear before they would make an attempt; they wouldn't take many chances. While, of course, we do not like to see men come here for life, looking at it in a sympathetic point of view, yet if we had one thousand just such men as these life men are, looking at it from a prison standpoint, we would have a perfect paradise.

They think a good deal of editors down in Mississippi. There was an editorial convention at Natchez, and the local military turned out to escort the scribes. A bridge gave way, precipitating the editors and warriors into the water, thereby giving the former splendid opportunities for fine writing and a gratuitous bath.

The houses that are being built now in Paris are not such as the coming generation will find "stuffy," "too small," "old-fashioned," and so no criticisms which with us are commonly passed with us on the creations of the last 25 years; they are houses intended to last practically for all time. Built of solid stone and iron throughout, with foundations they resemble Roman work, on the traditions of which, by the way, they are built by the sturdy southern workmen. Commercially, also, these investments prove successful, and household property, so far from being a drug in the market is at a premium.

A remarkable collection of surgical instruments has been discovered at Pompeii and removed to the Naples museum. It evidently belonged to one practitioner or establishment, and is as large an equipment as the modern surgeon is usually supplied with. One of the most interesting instruments is a long rod with a metallic plate fixed at one end at an angle of 135 deg. It was at first thought to be a cautery for internal operations, but its remarkable resemblance to the modern laryngeal mirror suggests the possibility that it was employed in a similar manner in ancient times.

On the 20th of the present month Queen Victoria will have reigned just forty-five years. The reigns of only three other English sovereigns have exceeded hers in length. They are that of Henry III., which lasted 56 years; that of Edward III., which numbered 50, and that of George III., which was the longest of all—60 years. Victoria in age has been surpassed by eleven sovereigns since the Norman conquest. They are Henry I., who lived to be 67 years; Henry III., who died at 65; Edward I., 67; Edward III., 65; Elizabeth, 69; James I., 58; Charles I., 67; George II., 77; George III., 82; George IV., 68, and William IV., 72.

The New York legislature which recently adjourned did little to commend itself to the good opinion of the people of the state. One act passed by it however, is worthy of mention and commendation. Under the law of that state it was possible for landlords to arbitrarily evict tenents, and that they took advantage of it is shown by the fact that the evictions in New York last year exceeded those in all Ireland by over 12,000. The new law compels landlords to give five days' notice before turning out tenants, any time except May 1, which is considered a general moving day when tenants are supposed to leave unless they have made new arrangements for an extension of lease.

The new bell "Great Paul," for St. Paul's, London, is a monster. The weight of the headstock alone is nearly three tons, the clapper over four hundred weight, the crown staple to which the rapper is attached about as much more, and the clapper bolt, by which the two sections of the clapper are fastened through the headstock, not far from another two hundred weight. The whole must be added the weight of the iron straps and bolts by which the "cannons" of the bell are fastened in the headstock, and a total weight of nearly four tons is made up, in addition to the sixteen tons fourteen hundred weight two quarters nineteen pounds which Great Paul brings to scale.

The Baking Powder War.

The Royal Baking Powder Company is still making enemies among those who are manufacturing and selling impure articles for leavening purposes [and their name is legion], and this fact shows that it is continuing its vigorous work in the interests of the public. This company set out some time ago to expose the character, and so far as possible to break up the sale of adulterated baking powders. Having found from an examination of a number of specimens procured from grocers that they were generally of an inferior chracter, some devoid of all leavening properties and many of them actually poisonous, it brought the matter before the public, denounced the makers by name in the press and to the authorities. The affair was speedily taken up by physicians, Boards of Health and Legislatures throughout the country, chemists were employed to make scientific tests of the various powders in the market, and the Government itself directed analyses to be made before it would purchase the supplies needed for army, navy and Indian uses. The result more than justified the charges so boldly made by the Royal Company. Not only were the majority of baking powders in the market found to be largely adulterated, but many of them were ascertained to contain alum and other poisonous ingredients to such an extent as to render them positively unsafe for use in human food. The information spread throughout the country and created a profound sensation. As a result many of these injurious mixtures were driven out of the market, and the sale of all of them seriously interfered with. No occurrence of recent date has been so far reaching as this in its beneficial influence upon the public health, and the boldness of the Royal Baking Powder Company in the inauguration of such a warfare, and their energy in it carrying forward with such important results, were universally commented upon and appreciated. In making the charges they did not hesitate to enter into competition with every other baking powder in the country, and it is a public satisfaction that in all the tests and analyses made the Royal Baking Powder was placed at the head of the list and declared by Boards of Health and by the Government chemists, Drs. Mott and Love, to be the superior of all others in strength, and absolutely pure and free from all inferior substances.

In continuing this warfare against the adulterated food, more particularly the alum and otherwise impure and inferior baking powders which unscrupulous manufacturers are endeavoring to force upon the market in this locality, the Royal will undoubtedly meet with the old time opposition and abuse. We are confident, however, that the public will also appreciate, as heretofore, both the object of the "alum men" and the action of the Royal Company, and award full justice to the company that has so fearlessly stood up for its protection from all such adventurers.

Predjudice Kills.

"Eleven years ago our daughter suffered on a bed of misery under the care of several of the best and some of the worst physicians, who gave her disease various names but no relief, and now she is restored to us in good health by as simple a remedy as Hop Bitters, that we had poohed at for two years, before using it. We earnestly hope and pray that no one else will let their sick suffer as we did, on account of predjudice against so good a medicine as Hop Bitters."—The parents.—Tribune.

A Western Obituary.

From the Laramie Boomerang.

Night before last, without a word of warning, Calamity Pease, aged 13 years, passed into the realm of the beyond. He will be remembered by our Calamity with constant compassion as the almost constant companion of Judge Pease, the editor of our evening contemporary. We noticed yesterday that he did not call us a painful liar, as has been his wont, and we knew that something was wrong. Later we found the following breif tribute to the deceased:

"Mr. Pease's little dog, Calamity, died last night, probably from old age, as it was between 13 and 14 years old, and has been in the family from the time of its birth."

While we bow to the inevitable decree which has robbed us of Calamity, we should remember that our loss is his (or hers, as the case may be,) eternal gain. Calamity is no more. He (or she, as the case may be,) will not meet us on the sidewalk, and let us fall over him (or her, as the case may be,) as was the case heretofore. Judge Pease is now left with only one large dog and his family. The day may soon come when he will have no one to love but his family. The big dog who lies in front of the Times door and eats the remains of dead animals, and socially throws everybody down who tries to get in the door, will soon pass away, and the judge will be left with no joy but the blessed rest and mental relaxation of writing his deep, abstruse and harmless editorials.

Rice is becoming a much more popular article of food than heretofore. It is frequently substituted for potatoes as the chief meal of this day, being more nutritious and much more readily digested. At its present cost, it is relatively cheaper than potatoes, oatmeal or grain-grits of any kind,

DIED

At his home in Nobles County, Minn., on Tuesday, June 20, 1882, Edward Reusse, aged 52 years.

Edward Reusse was an old pioneer settler of Carver county, having settled in Benton in 1856, and has filled many local offices of trust in this county, and was always regarded and held in the highest esteem by his fellow citizens. He served his country in the late civil war very creditably. After Jos. Endres death he bought a half interest in the Waconia flouring mill and when that mill burned down several years ago, without insurance, he lost all his property and then moved to Nobles county upon a homestead, where he resided at the time of his death.

His remans were brought down and buried at Young America last Thursday, the funeral being very largely attended. His death is deeply regretted in this county, and his surviving children have the sympathy of a large circle of friends.

"If all the Chaska brick are like the ones that have been sent to Glencoe this season that village will soon be compelled to adopt some other plan for obtaing a subsistance than making brick. They are horrible chunks of clay."

We copy the above article from a late issue of the Glencoe Enterprise and have but one word to say in reply, and that is, that our brick manufacturers are turning out a quality of brick this season much better and more uniform in color than ever before, and pronounced by competent judges to be better in color and equal in strength to the celebrated "cream colored" brick of Milwaukee.

Our Glencoe friends were unfortunate enough to get a few car loads out of the first kiln of a new yard, who used the surface ground out of a large clay bank, which usually burns red. However it was the fault of the purchaser, as he had ample opportunity of getting the "genuine article," but probably thought he could get just as "good brick for less money" from this new yard. The experience of our Glencoe friend will be worth something to him—anyhow.

Chinch Bug.

Report reaches our office that chinch Bugs have made their appearance in some of the wheat fields in Chanhassen, Dahlgreen and San Francisco, but in limited quantities and strong hopes are entertained that their ravages may be confined to a few fields in each township. Cattle Fair.

Notwithstanding muddy roads and threatning weather, the regular monthly cattle fair last Saturday, was quite largely attended. Over 75 head of stock was brought in, but only about one half of it was sold owing to the slim attendance of buyers; that sold was mostly purchased by our butchers, and brought very fair prices. Our merchants report large sales, and a brisk day all around.

SCRIBENDI.

Reply to Jacob Kern, Esq.

ED. HERALD:—Allow us to say a few words in reply to the article Mr. Kern publishes over his name in your last issue.

In the first place the road in question is but little better than a cow-path, it being not wide enough for two teams to pass. And then the crossing is so dangerous, that no one is safe of his life whenever he wishes to pass. Michael Mergen John Weber and others have had accidents at that crossing, besides several runaways on account of the bad condition of that road.

Mr. Kern would like to make the people of this county believe that he made them a generous present of that piece of land. But the fact of it is that he was paid a good round sum for it. Mr. Kern is not the man to give away a cent more than he is compelled to. If he is a little better off in this world's goods than either of us are, it is probably because he is not quite as liberal as he would make the people believe him to be.

The estimate of $2000 which it would cost to build a crossing over that cut, was probably made by a lawyer instead of a carpenter or contractor, who estimate the cost at less than $500.

If the road was laid out by the proper authorities, let those same authorities keep that crossing in proper shape.
